This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

THE NEW ELEVENTH PENNSYLVANIA.

THE resolutions of Congress organizing this regiment are fully referred to in the note to Col. Hartley's, ante; and it was considered proper to publish, in connection with this, what little material remains of the independent companies. Malcolm's and Spencer's regiments were of the sixteen additional regiments, and included companies raised either in part or whole in Pennsylvania.

A return of the state of the regiment, made June 25, 1779, at Sunbury, by Col. Hubley, gives the following data: "Present, lieutenant colonel, major, four captains, one captain lieutenant, eight lieutenants, three ensigns, paymaster, adjutant, quartermaster, surgeon and mate, sergeant major, quarter master sergeant, drum major, fife major, twenty-two sergeants, eight drummers and eight fifers.

Lieut. Col.'s company, effective rank and file,	33
Major Prowell's, "	36
Capt. Bush, light infantry,	52
Capt. Forester's,	35
Capt. Walker's,	32
Capt. Claypoole's,	33
Capt. Sweeney's,	35
Capt. Carbery's,	36
Capt. McLean's, Delaware regiment,	21
	249

"Absent officers: Capt. Kearsley, with Col. Spencer's regiment; Capt. Carbery, doing duty with light horse; Capt. Forester, in Maryland, on furlough, since February 1, 1779; Capt. Bush, in Philadelphia, on command since June 12.

"N. B.—The independent companies, in Col. Spencer's regiment, have not yet joined, the whole amount to about seventy-five men."

The following correspondence and memoranda, together with Lieut. Col. Hubley's journal, and such of his letters as have been heretofore published in Penn'a Archives, O. S., vol. vii, make up the record of this regiment so far as it has been preserved. Lieut. Col. Hubley's order book, recently discovered and placed in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth, has added much to the larger portion of what follows. A few letters of Col. Hartley, from the Hand Papers, are prefatory.

Col. Hartley to Gen. Hand.

YORK, May 10, 1779.

"* * * The following Persons are brave Soldiers and good Woodsmen: Captain Hawkins Boone, Lieut. Robt. King & Wm. Simms, and they have good Knowledge of the Country to Tioga.

"If Col. James Murray will go with you, he will be very useful. He is well acquainted with Indian affairs, and has a good Idea of the Indian Country. More persons you will hear of at Sunbury.

"You should engage Captains Ferguson, J. Camplin, & Lieut. William Campbell. They are excellent woodsmen—the latter you should have near your person. Colonel Hunter can tell you where you may find them.

"As Guides (besides those which you will be able to hear of yourself), you should take one Fox, & one Rummerfield, of Sunbury. Colonel Zeb. Butler, and Capt. Spalding, of Wyoming, can inform you of others."

Col. Hartley to Gen. Hand.

"YORK, June 3*d*, 1779.

"—Fletcher, a private in Col. Hartley's regt.

"—Ippie, " " " (a Dutch Lad.)

"In addition to the Persons who I have mentioned before, I must mention a Robert Crownover to you—he lives at Muncy—he is well acquainted with the country to Tioga, & is an intelligent, sensible young man and a soldier.

"You will find the Back Woodsmen upon some occasions very cautious. Perhaps it may be proper often, but some Times it may be necessary to make bold pushes. I would tell you several good officers, their own good Behavior will doubtless recommend many of them to you. Nevertheless, I shall mention to Mr. Houston to you; he is adjutant of my Regiment. He was Sergt. Major of Grenadiers in the British Army—he had a Brother, an officer in our army, and came and joined us. He is the best adjutant I have seen—he is very bold and enter-prizing—as soon as you begin your march, I recommend him particularly to you. If General Sullivan commands, you will please to mention Houston to him."

Col. Hartley to Gen. Hand.

"YORK, June the 3*d*, 1779.

"SIR: As I understand, you have no Horse sent you from the main army, I would give it as my weak opinion, that you should at least preserve the number which Captain Carbery took up. If one Corps should think it hard they should furnish the whole of the men; they ought to be pick't from the whole Troops of the Command, and you will find no officer more fit to command them than Mr. Carbery."

"1779, 13th June, James Crawford, of Northumberland, former major of the Twelfth Pennsylvania regiment, offers his services to Gen. Hand."

Lieut. Col. Hubley to Gen. Washington.

"CAMP MILLSTONE, May 19, 1779.

"SIR: By the resignation of Col. Hartley, of the 11th Penn'a Regt., I, as eldest Lt. Col. of the Line, considered myself entitled to the same, and accordingly wrote to the Honl. the Executive Council of the State of Penn'a, requesting they would recommend me to the Board of War, and procure the appointment to which I was entitled.

"The Council, in consequence of a certificaate, signed by Genl. St. Clair, as commanding officer of the Penn'a Line, certifying my pretentions, Resolved that I should be recommended, and accordingly did recommend me as being entitled to the command of said Regiment. Previous to this Resolve, His Excellency, the President of Pennsylvania, informed Col. Connor (present Lt. Colo. of the Regiment) of my claim, and requested to know whether he had any claim prior to mine. Colo. Connor informed his Excellency he had not, and insinuated that he had no objections to my being promoted.

"The Resolve being accordingly handed to the Board of War—not doubting but a commission would be granted—on the delivery thereof, the Board objected to the granting of the Commission, and informed me that Col. Connor claimed rank of me. I informed them of what had passed between the President and Colo. Connor, and believed that matter was fully settled, but requested before they issued the commission, they would send to Col. Connor for further information in the matter. This they did, and received a letter wrote by your Excellency to Col. Connor, in which it appeared he claimed rank of me. The Board accordingly concluded not to interfere in the matter until they had heard from your Excellency on the subject.

"I am a total stranger to Col. Connor's pretentions of claiming rank of me, unless it is because he went out as Lieut. of the 1st Penn'a Regiment, and considers himself an elder officer on that account. If that be his claim, he might, with the same propriety, claim rank of Gen. St. Clair and every colonel in the line.

"All that I shall say on my part is, that I was appointed (being then out of the army and in a private station), a major to one of the additional regiments raised in 1776, for the purpose of filling up the quota ordered to be raised in the State of Pennsylvania, and in regular course, promoted to the rank of lieutenant colonel (my commission bearing date as such October 4, 1776). I served in the same brigade with Col. Connor for a considerable time; he ever submitted to my rank, and never intimated he thought himself injured by my rank.

"Several gentlemen in the line claimed rank of me upon the same principles. As well a Board of General Officers, (met at the Cross-roads in Pennsylvania for the purpose of settling the rank of the Pennsylvania Line), as the Board of Arrangement, convened for the same purpose at White Plains, determined in my favor.

"I beg your Excellency will look into this matter and take such steps for the settlement of the same as you shall think proper.

"I am, with the greatest respect, your Excellency's,

"His Excellency GEN. WASHINGTON."

Lieut. Col. Hubley to the Board of General Officers.

"CAMP MILLSTONE, May 26, 1779.

"GENTLEMEN: Having acquired some knowledge of Colo. Connor's pretentions since my writing to his Excellency on that subject, I beg leave to make some few observations thereupon.

Digitized by Google

"Colo. Connor, I think, in his claims, observes that he ought to have been appointed commandant of the 11th Regt. previous to its being taken into the Penn'a line—upon what principles he founds this claim, I am a stranger to. He certainly must be totally unacquainted with the time of Col. Hartley's resignation. Had he resigned his commission, previous to the Regiment being taken into the line, there might have been some show of propriety in it; but this not being the case (Colo. Hartley's resignation being some considerable time after the Regt. being taken in the line), I cannot think his pretensions upon these principles can have any weight.

"With respect to his being a Senior officer in the same line, formerly with me, I beg leave to contradict. Its well known the Regiment he alludes to, formerly commanded by Col. Thompson, was not considered a Pennsylvania Regiment, nor was it taken into the line as one until Some time in 1776. The Regiment to which I was appointed being raised in 1775, and then called the first Penna. Regt.*

"Col. Connor further says that some time in 1776, he was ordered on Command to the Southward, as Brigade Major to Genl. Armstrong, and held the rank of major, and after his return from the Southward he was appointed a Lt. Col. in Col. Hartley's regiment. In order to throw proper light upon this matter, as Colo. Connor has been by no means explicit, I beg leave to add, that before his arrival in Philadelphia from the Southward, he stood, through the interest of his friends, a candidate for the Majority in the Regiment to which I was appointed; that agreeable to the mode of appointing officers, we were voted for, when I was almost unanimously chosen Major to the 10 P. Regt. and in regular turn promoted to the rank of Lieut. Col. in Col. Hartley's regiment, being some considerable time after my promotion.

"He has never taken notice that in his leaving the Regiment and going to the Southward, it was considered as giving up his commission in the same, and, in consequence thereof, another officer appointed to fill up his vacancy. And further, he does not tell you that he was appointed a Lieut. Colo. in Colo. Hartley's regiment, in room of Lt. Col. Wilkinson who resigned, but says he was appointed a Lieut. Colo. to one of the additional regiments, which implies as if he was appointed at the original constitution of the Regts.

"As much has been already said in this matter, I shall conclude with my pretentions of rank I now hold in the line of Penn'a. I totally claim my rank as an appointment (and not as a promotion, being then out of the army as an officer, and in a private station for some considerable time and served as a volunteer). When I received my commission as Major, I considered I had received it from a body, who were vested with power to appoint and arrange the officers; so have two distinct Boards since considered it, and determined in my favor.

"I beg leave for further particulars respecting my rank, to refer you to the letter from me to his Excellency (which no doubt will be laid before you) on the subject.

"I am with the greatest respect, Gentlemen,

"Your most ob't Humble Servant,

"To the Hon. the Board of General Officers, now sitting for the purpose of settling Rank."

"The Hon. the Board will observe that I don't mean to claim rank from my first entering, but that what has been said with respect to my first appointment, is to answer Colo. Connor's observations thereupon."

"PHILAD'A, June 8, 1779.

"In consequence of the resignation of Colo. Thomas Hartley (I being the Senior Lt. Colo. in the Penn'a Line), I was this day commissioned Lt. Colo. Commandant of said Regiment, to rank from the 13th day of February, 1779.

"ADM. HUBLEY, Jr.,

"Colo. Comt. 11th Pa. Reg't."

Col. Hubley writes to Gen. Hand from Sunbury, under date of June 15:

"This day arrived, and took command of the following forts: Muncy, Jenkins, &c., and this place."

Col. Hubley writes to Gen. Hand from Sunbury, June 17:

"A Board of General Officers to determine the dispute of rank between Major Prowell and the Captains of the Penn'a line determined in favor of the latter, in consequence of which he will be removed from the rank he now holds, and a Senior Captain take his place. * * I am extremely sorry for the loss of Major Prowell; he is a worthy, good officer."

Lieut. Col. Adam Hubley to Gen. Hand.

"SUNBURY, June 22nd, 1779.

"DEAR GENERAL: Your favour of the 19th came safe to hand last evening. I'm extremely happy to find I shall be under your command this campaign. I have communicated this agreeable piece of news to a number of my officers, who equally express their happiness on the occasion, and what adds to the happiness is, that your corps is to be a select one, to act as Light Infantry.

"Agreeably to your orders, I have given directions for the Regiment to be in readiness at a moment's warning.

"Genl. Sullivan, it seems, is to determine on the continuance of the Dragoons in my Regiment. I must beg you will use your influence with him to have them dismounted, unless they can be annex'd and do duty with us.

"A few days since Capt. Kearsley, late of my regiment arrived at this post with intent again to take the command of his comp^y. It appears, by the inclosed letters (the original of which is in my hand), that he had absolutely resigned his commission and left the army; upon what principle he claims the company, I know not. I cannot think of giving him any command in my regiment, unless the matter is properly settled. The officers are determined not to submit to his taking command. I dread the consequences, unless something is done speedily. Capt. Kearsley leaves this to-morrow for Wyoming. I beg you will state to him this matter, and the consequences that must attend it should he persist in claiming rank in the regiment.

"We shall be able to load the greatest part of the boats at this place. I expect they will be at Fort Jenkins about the 25th, at which place the officer commanding them will wait your further orders.

"The remainder are on their way to Cox's town; those, with what new ones may be finished, will be sufficient to bring up what stores are at present there. Every step is taken to expedite the forwarding of the stores, &c.

"I anxiously look forward for the moment when I shall have the pleasure of seeing you.

"And am sincerely, your most

JOURNAL OF LIEUT. COL. ADAM HUBLEY.

WYOMING, July 30th, 1779.

Wyoming is situated on the east side of the East Branch of the Susquehanna, the town consisting of about seventy houses, chiefly log buildings; besides these buildings, there are sundry larger ones which were erected by the army for the purpose of receiving stores, &c., a large bake and smoke houses.

There is likewise a small fort erected in the town, with a strong abattis around it, and a small redoubt to shelter the inhabitants in cases of an alarm. This fort is garrisoned by one hundred men draughted from the western army and put under the command of Col. Zeb^n. Butler. I cannot omit taking notice of the poor inhabitants of the town; two thirds of them are widows and orphans, who, by the vile hands of the savages have not only deprived some of tender husbands, some of indulgent parents, and others of affectionate friends and acquaintances, besides robbed and plundered of all their furniture and clothing. In short, they are left totally dependent on the public, and are become absolute objects of charity.

The situation of this place is elegant and delightful. It composes an extensive valley bounded both on the east and west side of the river by large chains of Mountains. The valley, a mere garden of an excellent rich soil, abounding with large timber of all kinds, and through the centre the East Branch of the Susquehanna.

WYOMING, July 31st, 1779.

Agreeable to orders, marched the western army under the command of Maj. Gen. Sullivan, in the following order, from this place to Tioga:

Order of March.

The army being composed of the following regiments and brigades in the following manner, viz:

Gen. Hand's brigade.	Hubley, German,	Regiments.	Compose Light Corps.
	Schott, Spalding,	Ind. Corps.
Gen. Maxwell's brigade,	Dayton, Shreeve, Ogden, Spencer.

From main body.

Gen. Poor's brigade, { Cilley, Reed, Scammel, Courtland.

Took up the line of march about one o'clock, P. M., viz: Light corps advanced in front of main body about a mile; vanguard, consisting of twenty-four men under command of a subaltern, and Poors' brigade (main body) followed by packhorses and cattle, after which one complete regiment, taken alternately from Maxwell's and Poors' brigade (composed the rear guard).

Observed the country to be much broken and mountainous, wood chiefly low, and composed of pine only. I was struck on this day's march with the ruins of many houses, chiefly built of logs, and uninhabited; though poor, yet happy in their situation, until that horrid engagement, when the British tyrant let loose upon them his emissaries, the savages of the wood, who not only destroyed and laid waste those cottages, but in cool blood massacred and cut off the inhabitants, not even sparing gray locks or helpless infancy.

About 4 o'clock, P. M., arrived at a most beautiful plain, covered with abundance of grass, soil excessively rich, through which run a delightful stream of water, known by the name of Lackawanna; crossed the same, and encamped about one mile on the northern side of it, advanced about one half mile in front of main body; after night fell in with rain which continued until morning. Distance of march this day, 10 miles.

SUNDAY, August 1st.

Continued at Lackawanna waiting for the fleet, which, by reason of considerable rapids, was detained until nearly 12 o'clock this day before the van could possible cross there. In getting through, lost two boats, chief of their cargoes were saved. About 2 o'clock, P. M., the whole arrived opposite our encampment, in consequence of which received orders for a march, struck tents accordingly, and moved about 3 o'clock, P. M. About one mile from the encampment, entered the narrows on the river, first detachment and left column, under command of Capt. Burke, to join the right column of light corps, and cross the mountain, which was almost inaccessible, in order to cover the army from falling in an ambuscade. Whilst passing through the defile, found passage through exceeding difficult and troublesome, owing to the badness of the path; we passed by a most beautiful cataract, called the Spring Falls. To attempt a description of it would be almost a presumption.

Digitized by Google

Let this short account thereof suffice. The first or upper fall thereof, is nearly ninety feet perpendicular, pouring from a solid rock, uttering forth a most beautiful echo, and is received by a cleft of rocks considerable more projected than the former, from whence it rolls gradually and empties into the Susquehanna. Light corps passed and got through the defile about 6 o'clock, P. M.; arrived about dusk at a place called Quilutimunk, and encamped one mile in front of the place, occupied that night by the main army.

The main army, on account of the difficult passage, marched nearly all night before they reached their encamping ground. Great quantities of baggage being dropped and left lying that night, obliged us to continue on this ground. All the preceding day numbers of our pack horses were sent back and employed in bringing on the scattered stores, &c.; distance of march this day about 7 miles; fine clear evening. Quilutimunk is a spot of ground, situate on the river, fine, open, and clear; quantity, about 1200 acres; soil very rich, timber fine, grass in abundance, and contains several exceeding fine springs.

MONDAY, August 2d.

In consequence of the difficult and tedious march the preceding day, the army received orders to continue on the ground this day, in the meantime to provide themselves with five days' provision, and getting every other matter in perfect readiness for a march next morning at six o'clock. Nothing material happened during our stay on this ground.

TUESDAY, 3d.

Agreeably to orders, took up the line of march at 6 o'clock, A. M. Took the mountains after we assembled; found them exceedingly level for at least six miles. Land tolerable, the timber, viz: pine and white oak chiefly large. About three miles from Quilutimunk, we crossed near another cataract which descended the mountain in three successive falls, the least of which is equal if not superior to the one already described. Although it is not quite so high, it is much wider, and likewise empties into the Susquehanna, seemingly white as milk. They are commonly known by the name of Buttermilk Falls.

About 12 o'clock we descended the mountains near the river, marched about one mile on flat piece of ground, and arrived at Tunkhannunk, a beautiful stream of water, so-called, which empties into the Susquehanna, crossed the same, and encamped on the river about one o'clock, P. M. Nothing material happened this day, excepting a discovery of two Indians by the party on the west side of the river. Indians finding themselves rather near the party, were obliged to leave their canoe and make through the mountains. Party took possession of the canoe and brought it to their encamping place, for that evening, immediately opposite the main army. Distance of March this day, twelve miles.

WEDNESDAY, 4th.

The army was in motion 5 o'clock, A. M., and moved up the river for three miles, chiefly on the beach, close under an almost inaccessible mountain. We then ascended the same with the greatest difficulty, and continued on it for near seven miles. A considerable distance from the river the path along the mountain was exceedingly rough, and carried through several very considerable swamps, in which were large morasses. The land, in general, thin and broken, abounds in wild deer and other game. We then descended the mountain, and at the foot of it crossed a small creek called Massasppi, immediately where it empties into the river. We then continued up the same until we made Vanderlip's farm; discovered several old Indian encampments, one of them appeared to have been very large.

The land, after crossing Massasppi, was exceedingly fine and rich, the soil very black, and well timbered, chiefly with black walnut which are remarkably large, some not less than six feet over, and excessively high. It is likewise well calculated for making fine and extensive meadows. The main army took post for this night on Vanderlip's farm, and the infantry advanced one mile higher up, and encamped about 1 o'clock, P. M., on a place known by the name of Williamson's farm. Distance of march this day, 14 miles; fine clear day, very hot.

Thursday, 5th.

In consequence of orders issued last evening, to march this morning at 5 o'clock, we struck tents and loaded baggage. But the boats being considerably impeded by the rapidness of the water some miles below our encampment, could not reach us, and we were obliged to halt all night. Did not join us until 9 o'clock, A. M., all which time we were obliged to halt. On the arrival, the whole army was put in motion, and as more danger on this days' march was apprehended than any before, the following distribution of the army took place, viz: The right and left columns of the light corps, conducted by Gen. Hand, moved along the top of a very high mountain; main body of light corps, under Col. Hubley's command, with an adavnce of twenty-four men, moved on the beach several miles on the edge of the water. The main army, followed by the baggage,

Digitized by Google

&c., flanked on their right by four hundred men, who had likewise to take this mountain. Thus we moved for several miles, then arrived in a small valley called Depue's farm; the land very good. Observed and reconnoitered this ground for some distance, it being the place on which Col. Hartley was attacked by the savages last year, on his return from Tioga to Wyoming. The country being fine and open, some loss was sustained on both sides; the savages at last gave way, and Col. Hartley pursued his route to Wyoming without further molestation. Continued our march for about one mile, and formed a junction with the parties on the right flank, ascended a high mountain, and marched for some miles on the same. Land poor, timber but small, chiefly pine. After which descended the mountain nearly one mile in length, and arrived in a fine and large valley, known by the name of Wyalusing. The main army took post at this place, and the infantry advanced about one mile in front of them, and encamped about 2 o'clock, P. M. Clear, but very warm day. Distance of march this day, 10½ miles.

This valley was formerly called Oldman's farm, occupied by the Indians and white people; together they had about sixty houses, a considerable Moravian meeting house, and sundry other public buildings; but since the commencement of the present war, the whole has been consumed and laid waste, partly by the savages and partly by our own people. The land is extraordinarily calculated chiefly for meadows. The grass at this time is almost beyond description, high and thick, chiefly blue grass, and the soil of the land very rich. The valley contains about 1200 acres of land, bounded on one side by an almost inaccessible mountain, and on the other by the river Susquehanna.

FRIDAY, August 6th.

The boats not arriving before late this day, the army received orders to continue on the ground. In the meantime to be provided with three days' provision, get their arms and accoutrements in perfect order, and be in readiness for a march early to-morrow morning. A sub. and twenty-four men from my regiment reconnoitered vicinity of camp; returned in the evening; made no discoveries; rain all night.

SATURDAY, 7th.

The heavy rain last night and this morning rendered it utterly impossible to march this day; continued on the ground for further orders; a captain and thirty men fom my regiment reconnoitered vicinity of camp; made no discoveries.

This day received a letter (by express) from his Excellency Gen. Washington, dated Head Quarters at New Windsor.

Sunday, 8th.

The army moved (in same order as on 5th) this morning at 5 o'clock; crossed Wyalusing creek, and ascended an extensive mountain, the top remarkably level; land poor, and timber small; arrived about 10 o'clock, A. M., at the north end, and descended the same close on the river side, and continued along the beach for some distance, after which we entered an extensive valley or plain, known by the name of Standing Stone; made a halt here for about half an hour for refreshments. This place derives its name from a large stone standing erect in the river, immediately opposite this plain; it is near twenty feet in height, fourteen feet in width, and three feet in depth. This valley abounds in grass, the land exceedingly fine, and produces chiefly white oak, black walnut, and pine timber. After refreshment continued our march along the same valley; land not quite so fine. Arrived about 3 o'clock, P. M., at a small creek called Wescuking; crossed the same, and encamped about one mile beyond it, and immediately on the river.

Four o'clock, P. M.

Since our arrival at this place, some of my officers discovered a small Indian encampment, seemingly occupied but a few days since; found near the same a neat canoe which they brought off. This morning the scout (of three men), sent up to Sheshequin some days since, returned without making any discoveries. Gen. Sullivan, on account of his indisposition, came on in the boat.

MONDAY, August 9th.

The boats not being able to reach Wescuking, the ground on which right corps encamped preceding evening, the main body, in consequence thereof, took post and encamped at Standing Stone, about three miles below light corps encampment, for protection of the boats.

The light corps, on account of their detached situation from main body the preceding evening, and apprehending some danger, being considerably advanced in the enemy's country, for their greater security, stood under arms from 3 o'clock, A. M., until daylight, where they dismissed with orders to hold themselves in readiness at a moment's warning. Previous to their dismissal, my light infantry was sent out to reconnoitre the vicinity of encampment; returned about 7 o'clock, A. M.—made no discovery.

This morning, 9 o'clock, boats hove in sight, in consequence thereof received orders to strike tents and be in readiness for a march; main army, in the meantime, arrived about 10 o'clock; the whole was in motion, marched through a difficult swamp; at north of same crossed a small stream, and ascended a hill; lands poor, and wood but indifferent. About 12 o'clock, P. M., descended the same, and entered a small valley; continued about half a mile, when we asceded a very remarkable high mounain, generally known by the name of Break Neck hill. This mountain derives its name from the great height of the difficult and narrow passage, not more than one foot wide, and remarkable precipice which is immediately perpendicular, and not less than 180 feet deep. One mis-step must inevitably carry you from top to bottom without the least hope or chance of recovery. At north end of same entered a mountainous and beautiful valley called Sheshecununk. Gen. Sullivan, with a number of officers, made a halt at a most beautiful run of water, took a bite of dinner, and proceeded on along the valley, which very particularly struck my attention. Any quantity of meadow may be made here; abounds with all kinds of wood, particularly white oak, hickory, and black walnut; the ground covered with grass and pea vines; the soil in general very rich. About 4 o'clock, P. M., arrived on the bank of the river; the whole encamped in a line on a most beautiful plain, consists chiefly in meadows; the grass remarkably thick and high. On our arrival here, made discoveries of some new Indian tracks, places on which fire had just been, and fresh boughs cut, and appeared as if the place had just been occupied a few hours before our arrival. Distance of march this day, 9½ miles.

TUESDAY, August 10th.

Set in with rain, and boats not reaching this place before 9 o'clock this morning; army received orders to continue on the ground until further orders; men drew and cooked two days' provisions.

One regiment from each of the brigades attended General Sullivan. The general and field officers of the army, whilst they were reconnoitering the river and ground near Tioga branch, about three miles above this place, returned without any discoveries worthy of remark, about 4 o'clock, P. M.

WEDNESDAY, August 11th.

Agreeable to orders the army moved this morning at 8 o'clock, A. M., in the usual order. Light corps moved half an hour before the main army, and took post on the banks of the river, near the fording place. On the arrival of the main army and boats, Col. Forrest drew up his boat at the fording place, and fixed several six pounders on the opposite shore, in order to scour the woods and thickets, and prevent any ambuscade from taking place. In the meantime the light corps marched by platoon, linked together, on account of the rapidity of the water, and forded the same, and effected a landing about 9 o'clock; they immediately advanced about one hundred yards from the river, and formed in line of battle, in order to cover the landing of the main army, which was safely effected about 10 o clock, A. M., after which came on pack horses, cattle, &c., covered by a regiment, which composed the rear guard. About half past ten o'clock, the whole moved in following order.

Previous to our arrival on the flats, we had to pass about one and a half miles through a dark, difficult swamp, which was covered with weeds and considerable underwood, interspersed with large timber, chiefly buttonwood. We then entered the flats, near the place on which Queen Esther's palace stood, and was destroyed by Col. Hartley's detachment last fall. The grass is remarkably thick and high. We continued along the same for about one mile, and arrived at the entrance of Tioga branch into Susquehanna; about 1 o'clock we crossed the same, and landed on a peninsula of land which extends towards Chemung, and is bounded on the east by Susquehanna and on the west by Tioga branch, and continued up the same for about two miles and a half and encamped. This peninsula is composed of excellent meadows and upland, grass is plenty, and timber of all kinds, and soil, in general, good; distance of march this day, three miles. Since our arrival a scout of eight men was ordered up to reconnoitre Chemung, and endeavor to make discoveries of the number of savages, and their situation if possible.

THURSDAY, August 12th, Tioga Plain.

This being a plain calculated to cover the western army during the expedition to the northern part of it, a garrison for that purpose is to remain until our return. Sundry works for the security of the same, are now erecting about two and a half miles distant from where Tioga branch empties into the Susquehanna, and where the two rivers are about 190 yards distance from each other; these works to extend from river to river.

Captain Cummings with his scout (sent out last evening,) returned this day, 11 o'clock, A. M., made several discoveries at Chemung, an Indian village, twelve miles distance from this place in consequence of which a council of war sat, and determined an expedition should immediately take place for the reduction of the same. The army (two regiments excepted) received orders to be in readiness for an immediate march. Eight o'clock, P. M., the whole were in motion, and proceeded for Chemung.

August 13th, 1779, eight o'clock, P. M.

The army having marched last evening in the following order, viz: Light corps, under command of Gen. Hand, led the van, then followed Gens. Poor and Maxwell's brigades, which formed main body, and corps de reserve, the whole under the immediate command of Maj. Gen. Sullivan. The night being excessively dark, and the want of proper guides, impeded our march, besides which we had several considerable defiles to march through, that we could not possibly reach Chemung till after daylight. The morning being foggy, favoured our enterprise. Our pilot, on our arrival, from some disagreeable emotions he felt, could not find the town. We discovered a few huts which we surrounded, but found them vacated. After about one hours' march, we came upon the main town. The following disposition for surprising the same was ordered to take place, viz: Two regiments, one from the light corps. and one from main body, were ordered to cross the river, and prevent the enemy from making their escape that way, should they still hold the town. The remainder of the light corps, viz: Two independent companies and my regiment, under command of Hand, were to make the attack on the town. Gen. Poor was immediately to move up and support the light corps. We moved in this order accordingly, but the savages having probably discovered our scouting party the preceding day, defeated our enterprise by evacuating the village previous to our coming, carrying off with them nearly all their furniture and stock, and leaving an empty village only, which fell an easy conquest about 5 o'clock, A. M. The situation of this village was beautiful; it contains fifty or sixty houses, built of logs and frames, and situated on the banks of Tioga branch, and on a most fertile, beautiful, and extensive plain, the lands chiefly calculated for meadows, and the soil rich.

The army continued for some small space in the town. Gen. Hand, in the meantime, advanced my light infantry company, under Capt. Bush, about one mile beyond the village, on a path which leads to a small Indian habitation called Newtown. On Capt. Bush's arrival there, he discovered fires burning, an Indian dog, which lay asleep, a number of deer skins, some blankets, &c.; he immediately gave information of his discoveries, in consequence of which the remainder part of the light corps, viz: The two independent companies, and my regiment, under Gen. Hand's command, were ordered to move some miles up the path, and endeavor, if possible, to make some discoveries. We accordingly proceeded on in the following order, viz: Capt. Walker, with twenty-four men, composed the van, the Eleventh regiment, under my command, after which the two independent companies, the whole covered on the left by Tioga branch, and on the right by Capt. Bush's infantry company of forty men. In this order we moved somewhat better than a mile beyond this place. The first fires were discovered, when our van was fired upon by a party of savages who lay concealed on a high hill immediately upon our right, and which Capt Bush had not yet made. We immediately formed a front with my regiment, pushed up the hill with a degree of intrepidity seldom to be met with, and, under a very severe fire from the savages. Capt. Bush, in the meantime, endeavored to gain the enemy's rear. They, seeing the determined resolution of our troops, retreated, and, according to custom, previous to our dislodging them, carried off their wounded and dead, by which means they deprived us from coming to the knowledge of their wounded and dead. The ground on the opposite side of the mountain or ridge, on which the action commenced, being composed of swamp or low-ground covered with underwood, &c., favoured their retreat, and prevented our pursueing them, by which means they got off.

Our loss on this occasion, which totally (excepting two) fell on my regiment, was as follows, viz: Two captains, one adjutant. one guide, and the eight privates wounded, and one sergeant, one drummer, and four privates killed. Officers names: Captain Walker (slight wound), Capt. Carbery, and Adj. Huston (I fear mortal). After gaining the summit of the hill and dislodging the enemy, we marched by the right of companies in eight columns, and continued along the same until the arrival of Gen. Sullivan. We then halted for some little time, and then returned to the village which was instantly laid in ashes, and a party detached to cross the river to destroy the corn, beans, &c., of which there were several very extensive fields, and those articles in the greatest perfection. Whilst the troops were engaged in this business, Gens. Poor and Maxwell's brigades were fired upon, lost one man killed, and several wounded. The whole business being completed, we returned to the ruins of the village, halted some little time, and received orders to return to Tioga Plain, at which place we arrived at 8 o'clock considerably fatigued. Lest the savages should discover our loss, after leaving the place, I had the dead bodies of my regiment carried along fixed on horses, and brought to this place for interment. The expedition from the first to last continued twenty-four hours, of which time my regiment was employed, without the least intermission, twenty-three hours; the whole of our March not less than forty miles.

SATURDAY, August 14th.

This morning, 10 o'clock, A. M., had the bodies of those brave veterans who so nobly distinguished themselves, and bravely fell in the action of yesterday, interred with military honors, (firing excepted). Parson Rogers delivered a small discourse on the occasion. Was employed greater part of the day in writing to my friends at Lancaster and Philadelphia, which were forwarded the same evening.

SUNDAY, 15th.

Agreeable to orders of yesterday, seven hundred men were ordered to march on the grand parade for inspection, and to be furnished with ammunition and eight days' provision, for the purpose of marching up the Susquehanna and meeting General Clinton, who is now on his march to form a junction with this army.

Two o'clock, P. M.

A firing was heard on the west side of Tioga branch, immediately opposite our encampment. A number of Indians, under cover of a high mountain, advanced on a large meadow or flat of ground, on which our cattle and horses were grazing. Unfortunately, two men were there to fetch some horses, one of whom was killed and scalped, the other slightly wounded but got clear. One bullock was likewise killed, and several public horses taken off. My regiment was ordered in pursuit of them; we accordingly crossed the branch and ascended the mountain, marched along the summit of the same for upwards of two miles in order to gain their rear, but the enemy having too much start, got clear. After scouring the mountains and valleys near the same, we returned, much fatigued, about 5 clock, P. M.

MONDAY, 16th.

The detachment under General Poor's command, agreeable to orders, moved this day, 1 o'clock, P. M., up the Susquehanna, for the purpose of forming a junction with Gen. Clinton. Several of our out continentals alarmed the camp by firing off several guns about 1 o'clock in the morning, in consequence of which light corps stood under arms. Several patrols were sent out to reconnoitre the front of encampment, returned near daybreak, but made no discoveries—alarm proved premature. Gen. Hand being ordered with the detachment under Gen. Poor, the command of light corps devolved on me during his absence.

TUESDAY, 17*th*, seven o'clock P. M.

A firing was heard about five hundred yards immediately in front of light corps' encampment. A party of fifty men was immediately detached to endeavor to find out the cause of it; returned at 8 o'clock, P. M.; reported that a party of Indians, eleven in number, had waylaid a few pack horsemen who were just returning with their horses from pasture; that they had killed and scalped one man, and wounded another, the wounded man got safe to camp, and the corpse of the other was likewise brought in.

An alarm was fired by a continental about 11 o'clock, P. M., but proved false.

WEDNESDAY, 18th.

In order to entrap some of those savages who keep sneaking about the encampment, the following parties ordered out for that purpose, and to be relieved daily by an equal number until we leave this ground, viz: One subaltern and twenty men on the mountain opposite the encampment, one subaltern and twenty men on the island about a mile and a half above the encampment, on Tioga branch, and one subaltern and twenty men in the woods, about a mile and a half immediately in front of light corps encampment, with orders to waylay and take every other means to take them.

This day, by particular request of several gntlemen, a discoure was delivered in the Masonic form, by Dr. Rogers, on the death of Capt. Davis, of the 11th Penn'a, and Lieut. Jones, of the Delaware regiment, who were, on the 23d of April last, most cruelly and inhumanly massacred and scalped by the savages, emissaries employed by the British King, as they were marching with a detachment for the relief of the garrison at Wyoming.

Those gentlemen were both members of that honorable and ancient Society of Masons. A number of brethren attended on this occasion in proper form, and the whole was conducted with propriety and harmony. Text preached on this solemn occasion, was the first clause in the 7th verse of the 7th chapter of Job, "Remember my life is but wind."

THURSDAY, 19*th*.

Nothing remarkable this day.

FRIDAY, 20*th*.

This day arrived Lieut Boyd, of Col. Butler's regiment, with accounts of Gen. Clinton's movements on the Susquehanna, and that a junction was formed by him with Gen. Poor's detachment at Chokoanut, about thirty-five miles from this place. Rain very heavy chief part of the day.

SATURDAY, 21*st*.

The detachments under Gens. Clintoon and Poor, on account of the very heavy rain yesterday, did not reach this encampment as was expected.

SUNDAY, 22*d*.

This day, 10 o'clock, A M., Gens. Clinton and Poor's detachments, with about two hundred and twenty boats passed light corps' encampment for the main army, about one and a half miles in their rear. On their passing, they were saluted with thirteen rounds from the park. The light corps being likewise drawn up, and received them in proper form, with Col. Procter's music, and drums and fifes beating and playing.

MONDAY, 23*d*.

This day a most shocking affair happened, by an accident of a gun which went off, the ball of which entered a tent in which was Capt. Kimball, of Genl. Poor's brigade, and a lieutenant. The Captain was unfortunately killed, and the Lieutenant wounded.

Gen. Clinton having formed a junction with the army at this place yesterday, the following alterations in the several brigades were ordered to take place, viz: Col Courtland's regiment to be annexed to General Clinton's; Colonel Olden, to General Poor's, and Colonel Butler's regiment, with Major Parr's corps to General Hand's brigade.

TUESDAY, 24*th*.

This day employed hands to make bags for the purpose of carrying flour. Hands employed all day and night in this business.

Agreeable to orders, a signal gun was fired for the whole army to strike tents, 5 o'clock, P. M., and marched some small distance, in order to form the line of march. Seven o'clock, P. M, another signal gun was fired for the army to encamp in proper order, and to be in readiness for an immediate march. Col. Butler's regiment, with Major Parr's riflemen, joined light corps, and encamped with them this day 7 o'clock, P. M.

Col. Shreeve took command of Fort Sullivan this day, agreeable to orders. Flying hospital and stores were removed this day to the garrison.

WEDNESDAY, 25th.

This morning was entirely devoted to packing up and getting every thing in readiness for an immediate march. A heavy rain fell at 11 o'clock, continued greater part of the day, which prevented our movements.

THURSDAY, 26th.

The army not being perfectly ready to march at 8 o'clock, A. M., agreeable to yesterday's orders, the signal gun for a march was not fired until 11 o'clock, when the whole took up the line of march in the following order, namely: Light corps, commanded by General Hand, marched in six columns, the right commanded by Colonel Butler, and the left by myself. Major Parr, with the riflemen, dispersed considerably in front of the whole, with orders to reconnoitre all mountains, defiles, and other suspicious places, previous to the arrival of the army, to prevent any surprise or ambuscade from taking place. The pioneers, under command of a captain, subaltern, then followed after, which preceded the park of artillery; then came on the main army, in two columns, in the centre of which moved the pack horses and cattle, the whole flanked on right and left by the flanking divisions, commanded by Colonel Dubois and Colonel Ogden, and rear brought up by General Clinton's brigade; in this position the whole moved to the upper end of Tioga flats, about three miles above Fort Sullivan, where we encamped for this night.

This day disposed of one of my horses to Mr. Bond, captain, on account of his indisposition; obtained leave to continue either at Fort Sullivan or go to Wyoming, until the return of the regiment from the expedition.

FRIDAY, August 27th.

On account of some delays this morning, army did not move until half past eight o'clock, A. M. Previous to the march, the pioneers, under cover of the rifle corps, were advanced to the first and second defile or narrows, some miles in front of our encampment, where they were employed in mending and cutting a road for the pack to pass. The army marched in same order of yesterday, the country through which they had to pass being exceedingly mountainous and rough, and the slow movements of the pack considerably impeded the march. About 7 o'clock, P. M., we arrived near the last narrows, at the lower end of Chemung, where we encamped in the following order: Light corps near the entrance to the defile or narrows, and in front of some very extensive corn-fields, some refugee Tories now acting with the favour of the main army, about one mile in our rear, and immediately fronting the corn-fields. After encamping had an agreeable repast of corn, potatoes, beans, cucumbers, watermelons, squashes, and other vegetables, which were in great plenty, (produced) from the corn-fields already mentioned and in the greatest perfection; distance of march this day, six miles.

SATURDAY, August 28th.

Fore part of this day being employed by the general and principal officers of the army in reconnoitering the river, and finding out some fording place for the artillery, pack horses, and cattle to cross, to gain Chemung; the defile or narrows mentioned in my yesterday's journal being so excessively narrow, and, indeed, almost impracticable for them to pass.

The following disposition for the marching of the army took place accordingly, namely: The rifle corps, with General Maxwell's brigade, and left flanking division of the army, covering the park; pack horses and cattle crossed to the west side of the river, and about one and a half mile above re-crossed the same, and formed a junction on the lower end of Chemung flats with the light corps, Generals Poor and Clinton's brigades, and right flanking division of the army, who took their route across an almost inaccessible mountain, on the east side of the river, the bottom of which forms the narrows already mentioned. The summit was gained with the greatest difficulty; on top of the mountain the lands, which are level and extensive, are exceedingly rich with large timber, chiefly oak, interspersed with underwood, and excellent grass. The prospect from this mountain is most beautiful; we had a view of the country of at least twenty miles around; the fine extensive plains, interspersed with streams of water, made the prospect pleasing and elegant from this mountain. We observed, at some considerable distance, a number of clouds of smoke arising where we concluded the enemy to be encamped.

Previous to the movement of the army this day, a small party of men were sent across the river in order to destroy some few Indian huts which were immediately opposite our encampment. Before the business was quite effected, they were fired upon by a party of Indians, who, after giving the fire, immediately retreated; the party executed their orders and all returned unhurt to the army.

The scout sent out last evening to reconnoitre the enemy near Newtown (an Indian village so-called), returned this day and reported they discovered a great number of fires, and that they supposed, from the extensive piece of ground covered by the fires, the enemy must be very formidable, and mean to give us battle. They likewise discovered four or five small scouting parties on their way towards this place, it is supposed, to reconnoitre our army. Since our arrival here, a great quantity of furniture was found by our soldiers which was concealed in the adjacent woods. After forming the junction above mentioned, we took up the line of march and moved to the upper Chemung town, and encamped about 6 o'cock, P. M., for this night. Distance of march on a straight course, about two miles.

From the great quantities of corn and other vegetables here and in the neighbourhood, it is supposed they intended to establish their principal magazine at this place, which seems to be their chief rendezvous, whenever they intend to go to war; it is the key to the Pennsylvania and New York frontier. The corn already destroyed by our army is not less than 5,000 bushels upon a moderate calculation and the quantity yet in the ground in this neighbourhood, is at least the same, besides which there are vast quantities of beans, potatoes, squashes, pumpkins, &c., which shared the fate of the corn.

SUNDAY, August 29th.

This mornng, at 9 o'cock, the army moved in the same order of the 26th; the riflemen were well scattered in front of the light corps, who moved with the greatest precision and caution. On our arrival near the ridge on which the action of the 13th commenced with light corps; our van discovered several Indians in front, one of whom gave them a fire and then fled. We continued our march for about one mile; the rifle corps entered a low marshy ground, which seemed well caculated for forming ambuscades. They advanced with great precaution, when several more Indians were discovered, who fired and retreated. Major Parr, from those circumstances, judged it rather dangerous to proceed any further without taking every caution to reconnoitre almost every foot of ground, and ordered one of his men to mount a tree, and see if he could make any discoveries. After being some time on the tree, he discovered the movements of several Indians (which were rendered conspicuous by the quantity of paint they had on them), as they were laying behind an extensive breast work, which extended at least half a mile, and most artfully covered with green boughs and trees, having their right flank secured by the river, and their left by a mountain. It was situated on a rising ground, about one hundred yards in front of a difficult stream of water, bounded by the marshy ground already mentioned on our side, and on the other, between it and the breast works, by an open and clear field. Major Parr immediately gave intelligence to General Hand of his discoveries, who immediately advanced the light corps within about three hundred yards of the enemy's works, and formed in line of battle. The rifle corps, under cover, advanced and lay under the bank of the creek, within one hundred yards of the lines. Gen. Sullivan, having previous notice, arrived with the main army, and ordered the following disposition to take place: The rifle and light corps to continue their position, the left flanking division under command of Colonel Ogden, to take post on the left flank of the light corps, and General Maxwell's brigade, some distance in the rear, as a corps de reserve, and Colonel Procter's artillery in front of the centre of the light corps, and immediately opposite the breastwork. A heavy fire ensued between the rifle corps and the enemy, but little damage was done on either side. In the meantime, Generals Poor and Clinton's brigades, with the right flanking division, were ordered to march, and gain, if possible, the enemy's flank and rear, whilst the rifle and light corps amused them in front. Col. Procter had orders to be in readiness with his artillery, and attack the lines, first allowing a sufficient space of time to Generals Poor, &c., to gain their intended stations. About 3 o'clock, P. M., the artillery began their attack on the enemy's works. The rifle and light corps in the meantime, prepared to advance and charge, but the enemy finding their situation rather precarious, and our troops determined, left, and retreated from their works with the greatest precipitation, leaving behind them a number of blankets, gun covers, and kettles, with corn boiling over the fire. Generals Poor, &c., on account of several difficulties which they had to surmount, could not effect their designs, and the enemy probably having intelligence of their approach, posted a number of troops on the top of a mountain, over which they had to advance. On their arrival near the summit of the same, the enemy gave them a fire, and wounded several officers and soldiers. General Poor pushed on and gave them a fire as they retreated, and killed five of the savages.

In the course of the day we took nine scalps (all savages), and two prisoners, who were separately examined, and gave the following corresponding account: That the enemy were seven hundred men strong, viz: five hundred savages, and two hundred tories, with about twenty British troops, commanded by a Seneca chief, the two Butlers, Brant, and McDonald.

The infantry pushed on towards Newtown; the main army halted and encamped near the place of action, near which were several extensive fields of corn and other vegetables. About 6 o'clock, P. M., the infantry returned and encamped near the main army.

The prisoners further informed us that the whole of their party had subsisted on corn only for this fortnight past, and that they had no other provisions with them, and that their next place of rendezvous would be at Catharine's town, an Indian village about twenty-five miles from this place. Distance of march (exclusive of counter-marches) this day, about eight miles.

MONDAY, August 30th.

On account of the great quantities of corn, beans, potatoes, turnips, and other vegetables, in destroying of which the troops were employed, and the rain which set in the after part of the day, obliged us to continue on the ground for this day and night. The troops were likewise employed in drawing eight days' provisions, commencing 1st day of September. The reason of drawing this great quantity at one time, was (however, inconsistent with that economy which is absolutely necessary in our present situation, considering the extensive campaign before us, and the time, of consequence, it will require to complete it) the want of pack horses for transporting the same, and in order to expedite this great point in view, are obliged to substitute our soldiery for carrying the same.

From the great and unparalleled neglect of those persons employed for the purpose of supplying the western army with everything necessary to enable them to carry through the important expedition required of them, Gen. Sullivan was, at this early period, under the disgreeable necessity of issuing the following address to the army, which was communciated by the commanding officers to their corps separately, viz:

"The commander-in-chief informs the troops that he used every effort to procure proper supplies for the army, and to obtain a sufficient number of horses to transport them, but owing to the inattention of those whose business it was to make the necessary provision, he failed of obtaining such an ample supply as he wished, and greatly fears that the supplies on hand will not, without the greatest prudence, enable him to complete the business of the expedition.

"He, therefore, requests the several brigadiers and officers commanding corps to take the mind of the troops under their respective commands, whether they will, whilst in this country which abounds with corn and vegetables of every kind, be content to draw one half of flour, one half of meat and salt a day. And he desires, the troops to give their opinions with freedom, and as soon as possible. Should they generally fall in with the proposal, he promises they shall be paid that part of the rations which is held back at the full value in money. He flatters himself, that the troops who have displayed so much bravery and firmness, will readily consent to fall in with a measure so essentially necessary to accomplish the important purpose of the expedition, to enable them to add to the laurels they have already gained.

Digitized by Google

"The enemy have subsisted for a number of days on corn only, without either salt, meat, or flour; and the general cannot persuade himself that troops who so far surpass them in bravery and true valour, will suffer themselves to be outdone in that fortitude and perseverance, which not only distinguishes but dignifies the soldier. He does not mean to continue this through the campaign, but only wishes it to be adopted in those places where vegetables may supply the place of a part of the common ration of meat and flour, which will be much better than without any.

"The troops will please to consider the matter, and give their opinion as soon as possible."

Agreeable to the above address, the army was drawn up (this evening) in corps, separately, and the same, through their commanding officers, made known to them, and their opinions requested thereupon, when the whole, without a dissenting voice, cheerfully agreed to the request of the general, which they signified by unanimously holding up their hands and giving three cheers. This remarkable instance of fortitude and virtue cannot but endear those brave troops to all ranks of people, more particularly as it was so generally and cheerfully entered into without a single dissenting voice.

TUESDAY, August 31st.

Took up our line of march in usual order at 9 o'clock, A. M.; marched about four miles and a half through a broken and mountainous country, and an almost continuous defile on the east side of Cayuga branch, the west of the same for that distance was an ecxellent plain, on which large quantities of corn, beans, potatoes, and other vegetables stood, and were destroyed by us the preceding day. We then crossed Cayuga branch, where it forks with a stream of water running east and west, and landed on a most beautiful piece of country remarkably level. On the banks of the same stood a small Indian village, which was immediately destroyed. The soldiers found great quantities of furniture, &c., which was buried, some of which they carried off, and some destroyed. About 2 o'clock, P. M., we proceeded along the path which leads to Catharine's town, (an Indian village,) and leaves the Cayuga branch on its left. About 5 o'clock, P. M., we encamped on a most beautiful plain, interspersed with marshes, well calculated for meadows; wood chiefly pine, interspersed with hazel brushes, and great quantities of grass; distance of march this day, 10 miles.

WEDNESDAY, September 1st.

About 9 o'clock, P. M., whole army moved in good order, on a level piece of ground. About 11 o'clock, A. M., we entered an extensive hemlock swamp, not less than six miles through; the path through almost impassible, owing to the number of defiles, long ranges of mountains, ravine after ravine, interspersed with thick underwood, &c. The infantry, with the greatest difficulty, got through about half past nine o'clock, P. M. The remainder of the army, with the pack horses, cattle, &c., were chiefly the whole night employed in getting through.

As the infantry were approaching Catharine's town, we were alarmed by the howling of dogs, and other great noise. A few of the riflemen were dispatched in order to reconnoiter the place. In the meantime we formed in two solid columns, with fixed bayonets, with positive orders not a man to fire his gun, but to rush on in case the enemy should make a stand; but the riflemen who had been sent to reconnoiter the town, returned with the intelligence the enemy had left it. We then immediately altered our position on account of the narrowness of the roads, and marched in files through the first part of the town, after which we crossed the creek; in a field immediately opposite, where there stood a number of houses, also where we encamped, and substituted the timber of the houses in room of fire-wood. On our arrival, we found a number of fires burning, which appeared as if they had gone off precipitately. This day's march completed 12 miles.

THURSDAY, Sept. 2d.

The dismal situation of our pack horses and cattle, of which several were killed by falling into ditches, and several otherwise disabled in getting through this horrid swamp last evening, prevented our march this morning. The fore part of this day was entirely employed in collecting them, which, from their scattered and dispersed situation, was attended with the greatest difficulty.

We, this morning found an old squaw, who, we suppose, by reason of her advanced age, could not be carried off, and therefore was left to our mercy. On examining her, she informed us that the Indians, on our approach last evening, went off very precipitately. That the women and children had gone off in the morning, to take shelter in some mountains, until the army had passed them. That Colonel Butler promised he would send back some warriors, who should conduct them by bye-ways to some place of safety. She further adds, that previous to the squaws going off, there was great contention with them and the warriors about their going off. The former had determined on staying, and submitting to our generosity; the latter opposed it, and informed them that, by such a step, the Americans would be able to bring them to any terms they pleased; whereas, did they go off, they would have it in their power to come to more favorable terms, should a treaty of any kind be offered.

Catharine's town is pleasantly situated on a creek, about three miles from Seneca lake; it contained nearly fifty houses, in general very good, the country near it very excellent. We found several very fine corn-fields, which afforded the greatest plenty of corn, beans, &c., of which, after our fatiguing march, we had an agreeable repast. After getting everything in perfect readiness, we took up our line of march at 7 o'clock, this morning. The roads from this place for about one mile, was rather difficult and swampy. We then ascended a rising country, which was in general level, excepting a few defiles which we had to pass, but were by no reason dangerous or difficult. The lands are rich, abounding with fine, large and clear timber, chiefly white oak, hickory, walnut, and ash; abounded on the left for about three miles with excellent marsh or meadow ground, after which procedes the beautiful Seneca lake, which abounds with all kinds of fish, particularly salmon, trout, rock, that which resembles perch, as also sheep-head.

We proceeded along this beautiful country about twelve miles, and encamped near a corn-field, on which stood several Indian cabins; having between the light corps and main army an advantageous ravine, and bounded on our left by Seneca lake. Previous to our leaving this place, the squaw which was taken here, was left. and a hut erected. of which she took possession. A quantity of wood was also gathered, and carried to the hut for her use. She was also provided with a quantity of provisions. All these favours had such an effect on her, that it drew tears from her savage eyes. It is about three miles in breadth, and about forty miles in length. Upon the right, though considerably up the country, is another delightful lake, called Cayuga lake, abounds with all kinds of fish also, and about forty-six miles in length.

Previous to our arrival here, the Indians who occupied the cabins already mentioned, probably discovered our approach, pushed off precipitately, leaving their kettles with corn boiling over the fire. During our march this day, we discovered several trees with the following characters newly cut on them, by those savages commanded by Brant and the Butlers, and with whom we had the action on the 29th ultimo.

country, the soil of which very rich, the timber fine and large interspersed with hazel bushes, fine grass, and pea vines. On our march we discovered several fires burning, which fully intimated some of the savages were not far off in front of us. We destroyed several fields of corn, and, after a march of thirteen miles, we encamped in the woods, in the front of a very large ravine, and about half a mile from Seneca lake. On account of some difficulties with the pack-horses, &c., the main army did not reach so far as the infantry, and encamped about two miles in their rear.

SUNDAY, Sept. 5th.

About 9 o'clock, this morning, the army moved through a country much the same as yesterday. About 12 o'clock, we arrived at Canadia, about three miles from the last encampment, where we encamped for this night. Previous to our arrival, we entered several corn-fields, and furnished the men with two days' allowance of the same. The riflemen who were advanced, re-took a prisoner, who was taken last year by the savages, on the east branch of the Susquehanna. An Indian, who lay concealed, fired, but without effect on our riflemen, and immediately fled. On examining this prisoner, he informed us that Brandt, with near a thousand savages, including Butler's Rangers, left this town last Friday, seemingly much frightened and fatigued, that they were pushing for Kanadasaga, an Indian village, where they mean to make a stand, and give us battle. He further informs us, that exclusive of a considerable number of savages killed and wounded in the action of the 29th, seven Tories were killed. That all their wounded, with some dead, were carried in canoes, up the Cayuga branch. That they allow they sustained a very heavy loss in that action.

Canadia is much the finest village we have yet come to. It is situated on a rising ground, in the midst of an extensive apple and peach orchard, within half a mile of Seneca lake. It contains about forty well finished houses, and everything about it seems neat and well improved.

The forepart of the day was entirely employed in hunting up our horses and cattle, a number of which were lost. About two o'clock, we took up our line of march and moved about three miles when we encamped on a beautiful piece of woodland (interspersed with vast quantities of pea vines which served for food for our horses) our rear covered by the lake, our flank by considerable ravines.

On the fourth, whilst on our march, several officers' waiters who had delayed in the rear, lost the path along which the army moved, and towards night found themselves near an Indian village which had been previously evacuated. They found a quantity of plunder, which they brought off, first putting the town in flames. A captain and a party, on missing, being sent in pursuit, and fell in with them as they were returning to the encamping place occupied by the army the preceding day, and conducted them safe to the army at Canadia.

An express from Tioga, with packets, &c., for the army, arrived this day at head-quarters—received several letters from my friends.

TUESDAY Sept, 7th.

At half past seven o'clock, the army moved, and arrived at the head of the lake about 2 o'clock, P. M. The country we passed through was exceedingly fine, and chiefly along the water for eight miles and a half.

About 3 o'clock, P. M., the rifle and infantry corps crossed at the mouth of the lake about knee deep, and not above thirty yards wide. On our arrival on the opposite shore, we immediately entered a dangerous and narrow defile, bounded on the left by the head of Seneca lake, and on our right by a large morass, and flooded at intervals, well calculated to form an ambuscade. From every circumstance, both as to intelligence and the great advantage the enemy might have had from its situation, we fairly expected an attack. However, we moved through in files, supported by the two flanking divisions, and gained the other side. The main army then crossed and took our place. We then moved through a second defile, as difficult as the first, and formed again, until the main army possessed themselves of the same ground we had just left. We then marched, and passed a third defile, and formed in a corn-field, near a large house, which was beautifully situated on the head of the lake, and generally occupied by Butler, one of the savage leaders.

The light corps, flanked by two flanking divisions, received orders to move and gain the rear of the town. The main army took the path and marched immediately in front of the same, but the enemy, no doubt, having previous notice of our movements, had abandoned the town, which we entered about dusk, leaving behind them a number of bear and deer skins, and also a fine white child of about three years old. This town is called Kanadasaga, and appears to be one of their capital settlements; about it is a fine apple orchard and a council-house. There was in the neighbourhood a great quantity of corn, beans, &c., which after taking great quantities for the use of the army, we totally destroyed; burned the houses, which were in number about fifty, and girdled the apple trees. Distance of march this day, about 12 miles.

WEDNESDAY, September 8th.

This day we lay on our ground; the rifle corps, with several other parties, were detached down the lake to destroy a small village called Gaghsiungua, and a quantity of corn, &c., in this neighbourhood, and the army prepared for a march early tomorrow morning.

Various opinions prevailed between many officers about our proceeding any further on account of our provisions, but Gen. Sullivan with a number of officers nobly resolved to encounter every difficulty to execute the important expedition and determined, notwithstanding the horrid neglect in not furnishing us with provision, horses, &c., sufficient to enable us to carry through the expedition, even to proceed on with the scanty pittance and accomplish the arduous task of destroying the whole Seneca country.

THURSDAY September 9th.

On account of a number of pack horses which had gone astray and could not be found, the army did not march at 6 o'clock agreeable to yesterday's orders. A command of fifty men under a captain, returned from this place to Tioga to escort the sick and those who were not able to proceed without retarding the march of the army, which is now under the necessity, on account of our wants, to be as expeditious as possible to complete the expedition; all those pack horses which were lame or otherwise reduced, likewise returned.

About twelve o'clock the army marched; their first route was over bushy-land, interspersed with remarkably high wild grass, and appeared to have been formerly cleared. We then descended into an extensive maple swamp, which was very rich and well calculated for meadow. After marching seven miles, we came to a creek known by the name of Flint Creek, which the whole, excepting Clinton's brigade, crossed, and encamped on a plain which had been occupied by the enemy but a few days before for the same purpose. Distance of march, seven miles.

The rifle corps who yesterday went to destroy Gaghsiungua, this evening returned. They report it was a fine town, well improved, with a great quantity of corn near the same, likewise, an abundance of beans, watermelons, peaches, and all kinds of vegetables, the whole of which they totally destroyed.

FRIDAY, September 10*th*.

At 8 o'clock this morning the army took up their line of march in the usual order. Their route, about four miles, continued through the swamp, which in some places was miry and difficult for pack horses, otherwise the foot would not have been much retarded. We then arrived on very fine ground for marching, which, to all appearance, was old cleared fields, as they contained a great quantity of wild grass as high as the horses in many places. The land continued in this manner (alternately having a strip of wood between), for about four miles, when we arrived at a lake (the name I could not learn), which appeared to be a mile wide, and six or seven miles in length. We marched half a mile along this lake, and came to the mouth, which we crossed, the water was not knee deep, and about thirty yards over, but it narrowed so fast, that, about twenty yards from the mouth, it was not in width more than five, but much deeper. We then moved up a fine country from the lake, and in half a mile came to Kanadalaugua, a beautifully situated town containing between twenty and thirty houses well finished, chiefly of hewn plank, which we immediately burned, and proceeded about half a mile on our right, where we found a large field of corn, squashes, beans, &c. At this place we encamped, but were very badly off for water, having none but what we sent half a mile for, and that very bad. The Seneca country, from its extreme flatness, has no good springs, which is extremely disagreeable for a marching army. Distance of march this day, 9 miles.

In this town a dog was hung up with a string of wampum round his neck on a tree, curiously decorated and trimmed.

On inquiry, I was informed that it was a custom among the savages before they went to war to offer this as a sacrifice to Mars, the God of War, and praying that he might strengthen them. In return for those favours, they promise to present him with the skin for a tobacco pouch.

SATURDAY, September 11*th*.

Agreeably to orders, we took up our line of march this morning precisely at 6 o'clock. We moved through a thicket and swamp near one mile before we gained the main path. The infantry, on account of this difficult swamp, could not possibly march in the usual order without being consideraby dispersed. We moved along this path for about three miles, after which we ascended a rising ground; the country remarkably fine and rich, covered chiefly with pine, oak, and hickory timber. At intervals we crossed considerable clear fields with remarkably high wild grass. About 1 o'clock we descended into a most beautiful valley, within one mile of an Indian village known by the name of Anyayea, situate on a fine plain within half a mile of Anyayea lake, which is but small and very beautiful, and abounds with all kinds of fish. This town contains about twelve houses, chiefly hewn logs. About it are several large corn fields, and a number of apple and other fruit trees. We encamped about two o'clock for this day, after completing a march of thirteen miles.

In order to expedite our march, and prevent the enemy from making off with their effects from Genessee, their capital, and last town in the Seneca country, it was determined a garrison of fifty men, with those soldiers who were not very able to march, should continue at this post, in order to guard our stores, viz: ammunition and flour, until our return.

The rain having set in very heavy this morning, we could not move until about twelve o'clock. We then began our march, but on account of a defile which we had to cross, could not march in the usual order. After passing the same, we took up our line of march as usual, and ascended a rising piece of ground. After marching about five miles, we came to a lake, which we crossed at the mouth, being about knee deep, and about ten yards over. We then ascended another rising piece of ground, composed of exceedingly fine rich land, with large oak and hickory timber, and at intervals, with marsh or swamp, well calculated for meadow ground. After arriving within half a mile of Kanaghsas, a small Indian village, which was previously destined for this day's march, night set in, and the main army being at least a mile in our rear, we received orders to encamp for this night, which was in the woods, and exceedingly ill-calculated for that purpose, no water being nearer than half a mile. This day's march completed twelve miles.

After we encamped, Lieut. Boyd, of the rifle corps, some volunteers, and as many riflemen, making six and twenty in the whole, were sent up to reconnoitre the town of Genessee, having for their guide, an Oneida Indian, named Hanyost, a chief of that tribe, who has been remarkable for his attachment to this country, and served as a volunteer since the commencement of the war.

MONDAY, Sept. 13th.

This morning, before daylight, we left. The general beat, on which the tents were immediately struck, and in half an hour the army marched into the town of Kanaghsas, which contained ten houses, situate on a flat near the head of a small lake. The flat contained a great quantity of corn, and vegetables of all kinds, which were remarkably well tended. At this place we halted to draw provisions, viz: Beef, (half allowance,) and to destroy the town, corn, &c. Four men of Lieutenant Boyd's party, this morning returned, bringing information of the town of Gaghsuquilahery (which they took for Genessee) being abandoned.

About 12 o'clock, we were alarmed by some Indians firing, and giving chase to Mr. Lodge, and a few men who went forward to survey. They wounded a corporal, who died next day, and chased them, until one of our camp sentinels fired on them and stopped their career. Lieutenant Boyd having retired from the town of Gaghsuquilahery, to wait for the arrival of the main army, which was detained longer than he expected, he sent back two men to know the cause. These two men had not gone far, before they discovered a few Indians ahead. They then retired, and informed Lieutenant Boyd, who immediately, with his party gave chase, and followed them within about two miles and a half from the main army, where a body of savages, of at least four or five hundred, lay concealed and probably intended giving the main army (the ground being favorable on their side), a fire, and push off according to custom, who immediately surrounded him and his party. He nobly fought them for some considerable time; but by their great superiority, he was obliged to attempt a retreat, at the same time loading and firing as his party ran.

The Indians killed, and, in the most inhuman manner, tomahawked and scalped six that were found. Nine of the party have got safe in, but Lieut. Boyd, and Hanyost, (the Indian already mentioned), with seven others are yet missing, one of whom we know is a prisoner, as one Murphy, a rifleman of the party, who made his escape, saw him in their possession. This Murphy is a noted marksman and a great soldier, he having killed and scalped that morning, in the town they were at, an Indian, which makes the three and thirtieth man of the enemy he has killed, as is well known to his officers, this war. There being a swamp or morass totally impassable for our horses in front of Kanaghsas, the infantry and rifle corps passed over and ascended the hill wherein Indians lay, in hopes to come up with them, but they had fled, leaving behind them upwards of one hundred blankets, a great number of hats, and many other things which we took, and then halted until the main army arrived, they having first been obliged, in order to enable them to move, to throw a bridge over the morass.

The whole then took up their line of march and proceeded to the town of Gaghsuquilhery, through the finest country I almost ever saw, without exception. Before dusk we arrived within sight of the town. The Indians having thrown themselves in a wood on the opposite side, the following disposition for an attack was immediately ordered to take place, viz: The infantry, with the artillery, to push on in front; Gen. Maxwell's brigade, with the left flanking division, to endeavour to gain the enemy's right; Gen. Poor's brigade to move and gain their left; the right flanking division, and two regiments from Gen. Clinton's brigade to move round Poor's right flank; the infantry to rush on in front, supported by the remainder of Clinton's brigade. We then moved forward and took possession of the town without opposition, the enemy flying before us across a branch of Genessee river, through a thicket, where it was impossible for us to follow, we not being acquainted with the country, and night having set in. We received orders to encamp after making a march of eight and a half miles.

THURSDAY, September 14*th*.

Previous to our march this morning, parties were ordered out to destroy the corn, which they did, plucking and throwing it into the river. About 11 o'clock we took up our line of march and proceded for Genessee, the last and capital settlêment of the Seneca country; the whole crossed a branch of the Genessee river, and move through a considerable swamp, and formed on a plain the other side, the most extensive I ever saw, containing not less than six thousand acres of the richest soil that can be conceived, not having a bush standing, but filled with grass considerably higher than a man. We moved up this plain for about three miles in our regular line of march, which was a beautiful sight, as a view of the whole could be had at one look, and then came to Genessee river, which we crossed, being about forty yards over and near middle deep, and then ascending a rising ground which afforded a prospect which was so beautiful, that to attempt a comparison would be doing an injury, as we had a view as far as our eyes could carry us of another plain besides the one we crossed, through which the Genessee river formed a most beautiful winding, and, at intervals, cataracts, which rolled from the rocks and emptied into the river. We then marched on through a rough but rich country until we arrived at the capital town, which is much the largest we have yet met with in our whole route, and encamped about the same.

At this place we found the body of the brave but unfortunate Lieutenant Boyd, and one rifleman, massacred in the most cruel and barbarous manner that the human mind can possibly conceive, the savages having put them to the most excruciating torments possible, by first plucking their nails from their hands, then spearing, cutting, and whipping them, and mangling their bodies, then cutting off the flesh from their shoulders by pieces, tomahawking, and severing their heads from their bodies, and then leaving them a prey to their dogs. We likewise found one house burned, in which, probably, was a scene as cruel as the former.

This evening, the remains of Lieutenant Boyd, and the rifleman's corpse were interred with military honors. Mr. Boyd's former good character as a brave soldier, and an honest man, and his behaviour in the skirmish of yesterday, (several of the Indians being found dead, and some seen carried off), must endear him to all friends of mankind. May his fate await those who have been the cause of his. Oh! Britain, behold and blush. Genessee town, the capital of the Seneca nation, is pleasantly situated on a rich and extensive flat, the soil remarkably rich, and great parts well improved with fields of corn, beans, potatoes, and all kinds of vegetables. It contained one hundred and seven well-finished houses.

WEDNESDAY, Sept. 15*th.*

This morning, the whole army, excepting a covering party, were engaged in destroying the corn, beans, potatoes, and other vegetables, which were in quantity immense, and in goodness unequaled by any I ever yet saw. Agreeable to a moderate calculation, there was not less than two hundred acres, the whole of which was pulled and piled up in large heaps, mixed with dry wood, taken from the houses, and consumed to ashes. About 3 o'clock, P. M., the business was finished, and the immediate objects of this expedition completed, viz: The total ruin of the Indian settlements, and the destruction of their crops. The following is a part of the orders issued this day, viz:

"The commander-in-chief informs this brave and resolute army, that the immediate object of this expedition are accomplished, viz: total ruin of the Indian settlements, and the destruction of their crops, which were designed for the support of these inhuman barbarians, while they were desolating the American frontiers. He is by no means insensible of the obligations he is under to those brave officers and soldiers, whose virtue and fortitude have enabled him to complete the important design of the expedition, and he assures them he will not fail to inform America at large, how much they stand indebted to them. The army will this day commence its march for Tioga.

Previous to our leaving Genessee, a woman with a child came in to us, who had been taken prisoner last year, near Wyoming, and fortunately made her escape from the savages. She, with her bantling, was almost starved for want of food. She informed us that the Indians have been in great want all last spring; that they subsisted entirely on green corn this summer; that their squaws were fretting prodigiously, and continually teazing their warriors to make peace; that by promises by Butler and his minions, they are fed up with great things that should be done for them; that they seem considerably cast down and frightened, and in short, she says distress and trouble seem painted on their countenances. Distance of march this day, six miles.

THURSDAY, Sept. 16*th.*

After destroying several corn-fields, we took up our line of march about 11 o'clock, A. M., and proceeded towards Kanaghsas. Previous to our arrival there, parties were ordered out to reconnoitre the woods, and gather the bodies of those soldiers who fell in the skirmish of the 13th. Fourteen, including the six mentioned in my journal of the 13th, were found, and buried with military honours. The sight was most shocking, as they were all scalped, tomahawked, and most inhumanly mangled. Amongst those unfortunate men was Hanyost, the volunteer Indian, who fared equally with the rest. About six o'clock we arrived at Kanaghsas, and encamped. We found several corn-fields, which were immediately laid waste. Our march this day, nine miles.

FRIDAY, September 17*th.*

About 5 o'clock this morning the general beat, the tents were struck, and the line of march taken up about 6 o'clock. We arrived at Anyayea about 12 o'clock, being the place our stores with a garrison was left. It was not with a little satisfaction that we found everything safe. We were not without our apprehensions about them, on account of the intelligence we were fearful the enemy might have collected from the unfortunate prisoners who fell in their hands on the 13th. We encamped in the same order and on the same ground as on the 11th inst.

SATURDAY, September 18*th.*

This morning about 8 o'clock, the army moved; the rear was ordered (before they left the ground) to kill all such horses as were unable to move along, lest they should fall into the enemy's hands. On our route we fell in with several Oneida Indians, (our friends), who seemed much rejoiced at our great success against the Seneca nations. We arrived about 6 o'clock P. M., at the east side of the Kanadaugua lake, where we encamped, after completing a march of thirteen miles and a half.

SUNDAY, September 19th.

The army moved at eight o'clock this morning in the usual order; excepting a few obstructions they met with passing through several swamps, they marched remarkably steady. On our route we were met by an express from Tioga, who brought a number of letters and papers informing us of Spain declaring war against Great Britain. They also brought us the agreeable intelligence of a good supply for the army having come on to Newtown, (about twenty miles above Tioga), to meet us. This agreeable intelligence conspired to make us exceedingly happy, as we had not only been a long time entirely in the dark with respect to home news, but the disagreeable reflection of half allowance was entirely dispelled.

We pursued our march until we arrived at Kanadasaga, which was about dusk. When the infantry got up, we encamped on the same ground and in the same position as on the 7th, after completing a march of fifteen miles.

MONDAY, September 20th.

The greater part of this day was employed at head-quarters in holding a council in consequence of the intercession made by some Onieda Indians, (our friends), in favour of the Cayuga tribe, who have been for some time past in alliance with the Senecas, and acted with them, and are now desirous to make peace with us. The council determined no treaty should be held with them, and a command of five hundred infantry with Major Parr's rifle corps, were immediately detached and sent to Cayuga lake, on which their settlement lay, with orders to lay wait and destroy their towns, corn, &c., and receive none of them but in the characters of prisoners of war.

Col. Smith, with two hundred men, was also dispatched down the north side of the Seneca lake in order to finish the destruction of Gausiungue, an Indian village about eight miles below Kanadasaga. Col. Gainsworth, with one hundred men, was likewise detached and sent to Fort Stanwix for some business, from whence he is to proceed to head-quarters on the North river and join the main army.

About 4 o'clock, P. M., the army took up their line of march, and moved steadily. About half past five they reached and crossed the outlet of Seneca lake, and encamped about one mile beyond the same.

TUESDAY, September 27th.

The army marched this morning about eight o'clock, and continued moving steadily until we passed Canadia about two miles, where we encamped near the lake. Previous to our marching this morning, Col. Dearborn, with a command of two hundred men, marched to destroy a town on the north side of Cayuga lake. Distance of march this day, 13 miles.

THURSDAY, Sept, 23*d*.

About 8 o'clock this morning, the army marched, and arrived at Catharine's town about two o'clock, P. M., where we made a small halt. We found at this place the old Indian squaw, who was left here on our march up the country. General Sullivan gave her a considerable supply of flour and meat, for which, with tears in her savage eyes, she expressed a great deal of thanks. During our absence from this place, a young squaw came and atteneed on the old one, but some inhuman villain who passed through, killed her. What made this crime still more heinous was, because a manifest was left with the old squaw, positively forbidding any violence or injury should be committed on the women or children of the savages; by virtue of which it appears this young squaw came to this place, which absolutely comes under the virtue of a breach of faith, and the offender ought to be severely punished. I went to view, in company with a number of gentlemen, a very remarkable fall of water, which is about one mile above this place. Its beauty and elegance surpass almost any thing I ever saw. The fall is not less than two hundred feet. About three o'clock, the army moved about three miles further, and encamped on a plain at the entrance of the great swamp, after completing a march of thirteen miles and a half.

FRIDAY, Sept. 24th.

This morning, precisely at 8 o'clock the army moved, and continued their route through the hemlock swamp mentioned on the 1st inst., meeting with much fewer obstructions than we expected, owing to the very dry weather which we have had for this month past. After passing through the same, we came to a fine open country, and soon arrived at Kanawalu-hery, where there was a post established with a reinforcement of stores, which was a most pleasing circumstance, as the last was issued, and that at half allowance, at Kanadasaga. On our arrival, the garrison saluted with the discharge of thirteen cannon, which compliment was returned by the army.

SATURDAY, September 25th.

In consequence of the accession of the King of Spain to the American alliance, and the generous proceedings of the present Congress in augmenting the subsistence of the officers and men of the army, Gen. Sullivan ordered five head of the best cattle, viz: One for the use of the officers of each brigade, with five gallons of spirits each, to be delivered to them respectively, thereby giving them an opportunity of testifying their joy on this occasion. In the evening the whole was drawn up and fired a feu-de-joie, thirteen cannon being first discharged. The infantry then commenced a running fire through the whole line which being repeated a second time, the whole army gave three cheers, viz: One for the United States of America, one for Congress, and one for our new ally, the King of Spain. The army being then dismissed, Gen. Hand, with the officers of his brigade, attended by the officers of the park of artillery, repaired to a bowery erected for that purpose, where the fatted bullock was served up, (dressed in different ways), the whole seated themselves on the ground around the same, which afforded them a most agreeable repast. The officers being very jovial, and the evening was spent in great mirth and jollity.

After dinner the following toasts were drank, the drums and fifes playing at intervals:

1*st*. The thirteen States and their sponsors.

2*d*. The honourable, the American Congress.

3*d*. Gen. Washington and the American Army.

4*th*. The Commander-in-chief of the western expedition.

5*th*. The American Navy.

6*th*. Our faithful allies, the united houses of Bourbon.

7*th*. May the American Congress and all her legislative representatives be endowed with virtue and wisdom, and may her independence be as firmly established as the pillars of time.

8*th*. May the citizens of America, and her soldiers, be ever unanimous in the reciprocal support of each other.

9*th*. May altercations, discord, and every degree of fraud, be totally banished the peaceful shores of America.

10*th*. May the memory of the brave Lieut. Boyd and the soldiers under his command, who were horribly massacred by the inhuman savages, or by their more barbarous and detestable allies, the British and Tories, on the 13th inst., be ever dear to his country.

11*th*. An honourable peace with America, or perpetual war with her enemies.

12*th*. May the kingdom of Ireland merit a stripe in the American standard.

13*th*. May the enemies of America be metamorphosed into pack horses and sent on a western expedition against the Indians.

An express with dispatches for Gen. Sullivan, from Philadelphia, arrived this morning, by whom I received a packet enclosing the commissions for my officers.

About 11 o'clock, A. M., the command under Col. Dearborn, who left us the 21st of June to proceed to Cayuga lake, returned, bringing two squaws prisoners, he having, in his route, destroyed several towns and a great quantity of fine corn.

MONDAY, September 27th.

The detatchment ordered to march yesterday, moved this morning up Tioga branch to an Indian village, about twelve miles from this place, with orders to destroy the same. Coleman and Caldwell, two of my soldiers, who by some means lost the regiment at Kanadaugua lake, on the eighteenth, after wandering for seven days in the wilderness, found and joined us at this place. They subsisted, during their absence, on the hearts and livers of two dead horses which they found on the path along which the army had marched. At dusk this evening, the detachment which marched this morning, returned, after destroying a considerable quantity of corn, beans, and other vegetables, sixteen boat loads of which they brought with them for the use of the army; they also burned a small village.

TUESDAY, September 28th.

Several commands were ordered out this day, viz: One up and the other down the Tioga branch, for the purpose of destroying corn, &c., of which there was a quantity left on our march towards the Seneca country.

All the lame and sick soldiers of the army were this day ordered to go to Tioga in boats, and the pack horses least able for other duty.

Colonel Butler, with his command, after laying waste and destroying the Cayuga settlements, and corn, &c., of which there was a very great quantity, returned, and joined the army about ten o'clock this morning.

WEDNESDAY, September 29th.

The army marched this morning about eight o'clock, and continued moving steadily until we passed Chemung about one mile, where we encamped on the same ground, and in the same position as on the 27th. The two commands ordered out yesterday morning returned, and joined the army at this place about 9 o'clock, P. M., after destroying large quantities of corn, beans, and other vegetables.

THURSDAY, September 30th.

This morning, about 8 o'clock, the army moved. About 2 o'clock they arrived at Tioga plains, near Fort Sullivan, where the whole formed in regular line of march, and moved into the garrison in the greatest order, when we were received with military honours, the garrison turning out with presented arms, and a salute of thirteen rounds from their artillery, which complement was returned them from the park of artillery with the army. Colonel Shreeve, governor of the garrison, had an elegant dinner provided for the general and field officers of the army. We regaled ourselves, and great joy and good humour was visible in every countenance; Colonel Procter's band, and drums and fifes played in concert the whole time.

FRIDAY, October 1st.

This morning the horses belonging to the officers of the brigade were forwarded to Wyoming. We also sent our cow, which we had along with us the whole expedition, and to whom we are under infinite obligations for the great quantity of milk she afforded us, which rendered our situation very comfortable, and was no small addition to our half allowance.

This afternoon, Colonel Brewer, General Sullivan's secretary, set off to Congress with despatches, which contained a relation of the great success of the expedition.

SATURDAY, Oct. 2d.

This day, the Commander-in Chief made an elegant entertainment, and invited all the general and field officers of the army to dine with him.

In the evening, to conclude the mirth of the day, we had an Indian dance. The officers who joined in it putting on vizors, (alias Monetas). The dance was conducted and led off by a young Sachem of the Oneida tribe, who was next followed by several other Indians, then the whole led off, and after the Indian custom, danced to the music, which was a rattle, a knife, and a pipe, which the Sachem continued clashing together, and singing Indian the whole time. At the end of each, the Indian whoop was set up by the whole.

SUNDAY, October 3d.

Agreeable to the orders of yesterday the garrison of Fort Sullivan this day joined their respective corps, and the fort was demolished. The stores and other bagagge, with the park of artillery, were put on board the boats, and every other matter put in perfect readiness to move with the army, on their route to Wyoming, to-morrow morning, at 6 o'clock. The young Sachem, with several Oneida Indians, relatives and friends of the unfortunate Indian Hanyost, who bravely fell with the party under command of the much lamented Lieut. Boyd, on the 13th ulto., who faithfully acted as guide to the army, left this day, well pleased, (after bestowing some presents on them), for their native place, the Oneida country. The German regiment, which composed a part of the flanking divisions of the army, was this day ordered to join, and do duty with, the third Pennsylvania brigade, commanded by Gen. Hand.

MONDAY, October 4th.

This day, about 8 o'clock, the army took up their line of march. We arrived at Wessaukin about 6 o'clock in the evening, after completing a march of fifteen miles. On account of the rain, marching was rather disagreeable this day.

On my arrival at this place I received a letter, with some newspapers, &c., from his excellency President Reed, which contained agreeable news, &c.

WEDNESDAY, October 6th.

About 8 o'clock this morning the whole embarked again, and moved, paying no attention to order, down the river.

THURSDAY, October 7th.

Embarked about 6 o'clock, and kept on steadily until we arrived at Wyoming. About 3 o'clock P. M. the whole army landed and encamped on the same ground and in the same order as on the 30th of July. Thus by perseverance, good conduct, and determined resolution of our Commander-in-Chief, with the assistance of his council and the full determination of his troops to execute, we have fully accomplished the great end and intentions of this important expedition; and I flatter myself we fully surpassed the most sanguine expectations of those whose eyes were more immediately looking to us for success.

The glorious achievements we have exhibited in extending our conquests so far and at the same time rendering them so very complete, will make no inconsiderable balance even in the present politics of America. Its future good consequences I leave to the eloquence of time to declare, which will in ages hence celebrate the memory of those brave sons who nobly risked their lives, disdaining every fatigue and hardship to complete a conquest, the real good effects and advantages of which posterity will particularly enjoy. Whilst I revere the merit and virtue of the army, I am sorry I am under the necessity of mentioning that there was an unparalleled and unpardonable neglect (and which ought not to pass with impunity), in those whose business it was to supply them with a sufficient quantity of necessaries to carry them through the expedition, instead of which not more than twenty-two days' flour and sixteen days' meat was on hand when it commenced. And although the army possessed a degree of virtue perhaps unparalleled in the annals of history, in undertaking an expedition on half allowance, which was in every instance hazardous and imperilous;

yet had we not been favoured with the smiles of Providence in a continuation of good weather, the half allowance itself would not have enabled us to perform what, from that circumstance, we have.

HEAD-QUARTERS, September 15, 1780.

SIR: I am commanded by his Excellency to desire that you will deliver to Colo. Hubley's order, any men with your regiment that belonged to Capt. Kearsley's and Capt. Calderwood's companies which now compose part of the Eleventh Pennsylvania regiment.

I am your most obedient servant,

R. K. MEADE,
A. D. C.

To the officer commanding Colo. Spencer's regiment.

Capt. Henry Carberry was retired in January, 1781. In June, 1783, he was concerned in a riot instituted among the soldiers of the Pennsylvania Line, (*see Penn'a Archives, O. In 1817, he applied for admission into the Pennsylvania State Cincinnati, and his admission was recommended, but his name does not again appear on the records.

THE GERMAN REGIMENT.

THE German regiment originated from a resolution of Congress June 27, 1776, directing four companies of Germans to be raised in Pennsylvania,* and four companies in Maryland, to compose "the German battalion," the companies to serve for three years, unless sooner discharged. Nicholas Haussegger, major of the Fourth battalion (Wayne's), was commissioned colonel, and Pennsylvania furnished by far the largest number, both of its officers and recruits. None of its regular rolls have survived, and the list is made up from returns of those who belonged to Pennsylvania as found in the Secretary's office. The regiment was in the field and engaged at Trenton and Princeton, and in May, 1777, was in Deborre's brigade, Sullivan's division. The colonel left the army after the battle of Monmouth, and returned to his farm near Lebanon Pa. Lt. Col. Weltner succeeded to the command. The regiment took part in Sullivan's campaign against the Indians. In the spring of 1780 it was stationed on the frontiers of Northumberland county. By a resolution of Congress in October the German regiment was reduced, and ended its organization January 1, 1781. All the correspondence relative to this regiment found in the Secretary's office has been published in the old series of Archives, except the following orders found among the Hand papers:

Gen. Hand to Major Burchardt.

"MINISINK, 5th April, 1779.

"SIR: Agreeable to the orders you yesterday rec^{d}, you will proceed to Wyoming, on the Susquehanna River, with the Regiment under your Immediate Command, Col. Armand's and Capt. Schott's corps, the former is commanded at present by Major Lomaign & the latter by Captn. Selin. These corps will join you at or before you reach Col. Stroud's, at Fort Penn, as you will see by their Orders, left open for your perusal, & which you will have delivered. You must take with you from here all the flour now left in store, and Beef sufficient to carry the Detachment thro' to Wyoming; you will receive an additional supply of Flour at Col. Stroud's. Take care that each corps takes with them the provisions they have respectively drawn. You will receive a few Camp Kettles for the Detachment at Col. Stroud's, and may draw 20 Axes for your Regiment, 6 for Armand's & 3 for Schott's here.

"It will take you four days from Col. Stroud's to Wyoming; you will, therefore, regulate your Provision accordingly. Captn. Alex^r. Patterson, A. D. Q. M., will send express to Col. Zebulon Butler, commanding at Wyoming, with notice of your Approach. From Fort Penn you will march to Lardner's; thence to an Incamping Place in what is Commonly cal'd the Great Swamp; the third day to Bullock's, which is within five miles of Wyoming Garrison, where for the present you will put yourself under Col. Butler's directions.

"I am thus Particular, as It will be necessary to make easie marches in order to reconnoitre the Country well and examine every thicket & hollow way, or swamp before you enter it, which I desire you may be very particular in doing to prevent being Surprised or led into an Ambuscade or attack'd without previous knowledge of the Enemys being near. You will be particularly attentive to keep the Body of the Troops compact. Suffer no straggling on any account; keep a proper advance & rear Guard, tho' not at too great a distance, and also small parties on your Flanks, observing the same caution. Should any enemy appear, you must take care not to advance on them precipitately before you know their numbers, or until you have sufficiently extended your front to prevent being out-Flanked.

"By a steddy adherence to the above directions, you will have little danger to apprehend—double your attention as you approach the Fort. As the badness of the Roads at present and the scarcity of horses will prevent your carrying your heavy Baggage, you must leave it at Fort Penn with a Guard until you have a more favorable opportunity.

"Relying much on your Steddyness, Industry, Zeal, and Activity, I wish you a Good march, and

"EDW'D HAND.

"Major DANL. BURCHARDT, German Reg^t."

COUNT VON OTTENDORFF.

BARON DE OTTENDORFF'S CORPS.

ARMAND'S Legion (see record of, postea) was originally recruited by Baron de Ottendorff as a troop of light infantry, but on account of the scarcity of well-disciplined cavalry, it changed into a dragoon corps. NICHOLAS DIETRICH, BARON DE OTTENDORFF, was a nobleman from Lusatia, Saxony, and had served in the "Seven Years' War," as a lieutenant, under Frederick the Great. Upon the close of that war, he went to Paris, where he associated with Kosciuszko and Roman de Lisle. At the breaking out of the Revolution, these three warriors came together to America to assist the colonies in their struggle for independence. Kosciuszko entered the staff of General Washington, De Lisle was made captain of artillery, and Ottendorff, at the request of Gen. Washington, by a resolution of Congress on November 8, 1776, was "appointed a brevet-captain in the service of the United States." By a resolution of the day subsequent, he was "ordered to repair to Head-Quarters, near the Great Plains, and put himself under the command of Gen. Washington." On the 5th of December following, Congress "directed Capt. Ottendorff to raise an independent corps, consisting of 150 men, sergeants, and corporals included; that the same be divided into three companies, the first to consist of 60 men, light infantry, to be commanded by one captain and two lieutenants; the other two companies of hunters, of 45 men each, to be commanded each by a captain and two lieutenants; that captain Ottendorff have the rank of major, be captain of the light-infantry company, and command the whole; that an adjutant be appointed for this corps who is to act as quartermaster and paymaster, with the rank of lieutenant and pay of other adjutants" Major Ottendorff began the recruiting with great energy, and in the spring of 1777 the complement of the corps was filled. The three companies were all raised in Pennsylvania, and continued in service until 1780. Of Ottendorff's subsequent career little is known. Upon the merging of the corps into Armand's Legion, Lieut. Henry Bedkin took command of the first company and it is probable Ottendorff had previously left the service and returned to Europe.—(See Ratterman's Pioneer, vol. viii, p. 449.)

COL. HAZEN'S REGIMENT,

COL. HAZEN'S REGIMENT.

COL. MOSES HAZEN'S regiment, known as "Congress' Own" and Canadian Old regiment, was raised under the authority of a resolution of Congress of January 20, 1776, to enlist one thousand more Canadians for one year (one having already been established under Col. James Livingston). January 22d, Moses Hazen was elected colonel, and Edward Antill, lieutenant colonel, by Congress. It went by the name of "Congress' Own," because not attached to the quota of any of the States. During the spring of 1776, about five hundred men were raised, but on the evacuation of Canada, the number so decreased, that when the regiment arrived at Albany, in August, 1776, it was reduced to less than one hundred. Hazen and Antill then went to Philadelphia to lay the state of the regiment before Congress. It was decided to continue it upon its original foundation; the men to serve during the war. The officers were authorized to raise the men in any and all of the United States. Lieut. Col. Antill superintended the recruiting in Pennsylvania and the Middle States, and the recruits chiefly consisted of men from those States, Col. Hazen meeting with no success in the Eastern States and New York, on account of high bounties there offered.

For a detailed history of this regiment, see autobiography of its adjutant, late Benjamin Mooers, of Plattsburg, New York, in Historical Magazine, February, 1872, page 92. The winter of 1780-81, it remained at Fishkill, New York, thence it removed to West Point, from which place it moved down the Hudson and joined the army en route to Yorktown, where it took part in the siege, after which it was ordered to Lancaster, where it lay ten months guarding the prisoners; thence it removed to New York; began to be furloughed in June, 1783, and was finally disbanded at White Plains, in November of that year.

In Col. Hazen's memorial, printed on pages 17, 18, 19, Penn'a Archives, old series, vol. viii, will also be found a very interesting history of the regiment up to November 30, 1779. By a letter from the officers, noted in proceedings of Executive Council, December 29, 1779, it appears there were one hundred and fifty-three, officers included, Pennsylvanians in this regiment at that date. See, also, Capt. Andrew Lee's diary in the Penn'a Magazine of History, 1879, page 167, for an account of regiment in Sullivan's expedition to Staten Island, August 22, 1777.

THE WYOMING VALLEY COMPANIES.

DURKEE and RANSOM (who both fell on the 3d of July, 1778), raised their companies, expecting they would be retained for the defense of the Valley; but the emergency of the main army, at the close of 1777, required their presence in New Jersey. They obeyed orders, and did good service at Millstone, Bound Brook, Mud Creek, Brandywine, Germantown, and other points.

Rumors of the advance of the horde which desolated Wyoming in 1778, caused such a depletion of those two companies by men and officers who hurried home to protect their families, that Congress, June 23, 1778, reduced the two companies to one, under Capt. Spalding. They numbered sixty-nine, but did not reach Wyoming until the battle was over.

Just before the battle, Congress also authorized the raising of another company under Capt. Dethic Hewitt. He had secured about forty men, when the battle occurred, and if any record of his men was ever made out, it is unknown. Nathaniel Gates was a sergeant under him, and that is all that can be said of this third or fourth Wyoming independent company, whose captain and many others fell on that fatal Friday in Wyoming.

Before the first two companies were formed, Lieut. Obadiah Gore, Jr., had enlisted twenty men under Capt. Wisner, of Warwick, New York, and Lieut. Jameson had brought nearly as many more to Capt. Strong. Out of an estimated population of two thousand to five thousand, at least two hundred had left Wyoming for the sea-board, not counting some under Captains Spalding and Hewitt in the Valley.

Among those named above, Capt. (afterwards Gen.) Spalding was the true hero of the Bound Brook affair in New Jersey; John Swift served as general on the Niagara frontier in 1812; fifteen or twenty fell in the massacre of Wyoming. Of many others, interesting notes might be added; of others we have no record.—O. N. Worden, Esq.

The two Independent companies, commanded by Capts. Samuel Ransom and Robert Durkee, were mustered into the service of the United States September 17, 1776, and were credited to Connecticut. The locality whence they were raised, was within the bounds of Pennsylvania, and the men afterwards recognized the auhority of Pennsylvania. The companies were, therefore, really Pennsylvania companies.—Steuben Jenkins, Esq.

A* is attached to the names in the following rolls for those killed at Wyoming, July 3, 1778, as appears from "A list of the officers and Soldiers that were Slain by the Indians and Tories in a battle at Westmoreland, July 3, 1778," taken from the manuscripts of the late Col. John Franklin.—Hazard's Penn'a Reg., vol. x, page 14.

COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF'S GUARD.

THIS corps was organized by Gen. Washington in 1776, while the army was at New York, and consisted of a major's command, one hundred and eighty men. Caleb Gibbs, of Rhode Island, was its first chief, with the title of captain commandant. By an order dated at Valley Forge, March 17, 1778, one hundred chosen men were to be annexed to the guard, for the purpose of forming a corps "to be instructed in manoeuvres to be introduced into the army, and to serve as a model for the execution of them. As the General's guard is composed of Virginians, the one hundred draughts will be taken from the troops of other States. Height of men from five feet eight to five feet ten; age, from twenty to thirty, and men of established character for sobriety and fidelity. They must be American born."—See Stryker's New Jersey Register, page 60, for copy of the order.

In 1779, William Colfax, grandfather of Schuyler Colfax, late Vice President of the United States, succeeded Major Gibbs in the command. There are two returns in the archives at Harrisburg—one by Major Gibbs, and the second made by Capt. Colfax. The following list is collated from both. Capt. Colfax's return, dated New Windsor, April 8, 1781, embraces all the names except those of John Arundell, John Berry, Thomas Blair, Hugh Hagerty, Isaac Howell, and John Pillar. He certifies that all on his list are present except William Simmons, sick at Norristown.

For an exhaustive notice of the guard, see Dr. Lossing's article in the Historical Magazine, New York, May, 1858.

PENNSYLVANIA REGIMENT OF CAVALRY.

OL. STEPHEN MOYLAN was born in Ireland, in 1734, and upon the recommendation of John Dickinson, Esq., was placed in the commissary department in the army before Boston, in 1775. On the 5th of June, 1776, Congress elected him quarter-master general, with the rank of colonel, which office he resigned October 1, 1776. He then raised his cavalry regiment which was an independent organization, the Officers of which were not all from Pennsylvania, but the men were all raised in Pennsylvania. —General St. Clair's letter, Archives, O. S., vol. vii, page 666. They were enlisted in 1777, their term expiring the last of September, 1780, when only eleven men were credited as its quota for the war. In the spring of 1781, its ranks were recruited to eighty men, who went southward in detachments to join Gen. Wayne. —See correspondence in Archives, O. S., vol. ix, pages 267, 321. For an interesting notice of Col. Moylan and Capt. Heard, see Chastelleux's Travels, vol. i, pages 142 and 155. Col. Moylan retired at the close of the war with the rank of brevet brigadier general, and died in Philadelphia, April 11, 1811; buried in St. Mary's church-yard, south Fourth street, Philadelphia.

ARMAND'S PARTISAN LEGION.

ONGRESS, on the 10th of May, 1777, commisioned Armand, colonel, and authorized him to raise a corps of Frenchmen, not exceeding two hundred. On the 5th of February, 1779, he applied to Congress, and received leave to return to France, where he largely recruited his corps, and returned. October 3, 1780, Congress determined that on the 1st of January, 1781, such of the sixteen additional regiments as had not been annexed to the line of some particular State, and all the separate light corps of the army, both horse and foot, should be reduced except Col. Hazen's regiment, Col. Armand's legion, and Major Lee's corps. With the exception of the incorporation of Pulaski legion with it, it therefore remained intact until the close of the war. Charles Armand was Marquis de la Rouerie, who concealed his rank, combatting an unsuccessful love, by throwing himself headlong into the channel of war. (Lafayette's Memoirs, vol. i, page 119.) He was prominent in the fight at Red Bank, in 1777, and opposed the Tories in West Chester county, New York. Was stationed in Ridgfield, Connecticut, in 1779; under Gates in the south; pursued Cornwallis to Yorktown; made a brigadier in 1783, on Washington's recommendation. He took an active part in the scenes of the French revolution, and died in 1793. For more extended biographical sketches of Col. Armand, and a brief resumé of his services, see Rattermann's Deutsche Pionier, vol. viii, page 437, and The Penn'a Magazine of History, vol. ii, page 1.

A return among the Hand papers, entitled "Return of the Independent Corps of Cavalrie and of Foot, commanded by Col. Armand, Minesing, December 28, 1778," gives the strength of the corps as follows:

Light dragoons,	Capt. Marckle,	19
	" Shaffner,	34
	" Sigoigne,	23
	de Bert,	19

PENNSYLVANIANS IN PULASKI'S LEGION.

BY a resolution of Congress, passed the 28th of March, 1778, Count Casimir Pulaski was authorized to raise and organize a corps of sixty-eight light horse and two hundred foot. This was known as Pulaski's Legion, and was recruited chiefly in Pennsylvania and Maryland. For extended notices of that eminent patriot, reference is made to Spark's American Biography, vol. iv, p. 369-446; and Lossing's Field Book, vol. ii, p. 529. According to the Bethlehem Diary, Pulaski arrived there on the 16th of April, 1778, and mention is made of him on the 18th of May following. It was during this interval that the banner, which forms a frontispiece to this volume, was made. For years it was received as a fact that the banner had been presented the gallant Pole by the Moravian single sisters of Bethlehem, as a token of their gratitude for the protection Pulaski had afforded them, surrounded as they were by a rough and uncouth soldiery, but recent investigations go to show that the General, on visiting the Sisters' house, saw their beautiful embroidery, and that he then ordered them to prepare a small cavalry banner for his legion, and that the whole transaction was a simple business one. Be this as it may, the banner is one of historic interest and value, and the truth does not detract from the romantic associations clustering around it. When Pulaski fell mortally wounded, before Savannah, in the autumn of 1779, Paul Bentalon, of Baltimore, one of his captains, was beside him, and was carried with him on board the United States brig Wasp, and was with him when he died. Pulaski was not buried on land, as Lossing says, but, according to Bentalon, who was present, was consigned to a watery grave. The banner was secured by Capt. Bentalon, and for more than forty years was hid from the public eye. It subsequently passed into the possession of the Maryland Historical Society, where it now remains. The editors are indebted to the Rev. E. A. Dalrymple, D. D., of Baltimore, for the following description and present condition of it:

"The Banner is twenty inches square and was attached to a lance when borne on the field. Externally it is of a dingy brown on both sides. It is composed of two pieces, and by separating them, which is easily done, inasmuch as the sewing has ripped asunder, the original colors are very readily and certainly determined. 1. The ground, or piece of silk for both sides, is crimson. 2. The exploding hand grenades in the four corners of the banner are bright yellow silk, relieved with white, to show distinction in the flames. 3. The ball of the eye is light brown; the pupil is dark brown. 4. The rays around the eye are bright yellow. 5. The letters are yellow and shaded with green, that is the letters are two thirds of bright yellow silk and one third of green silk; the "U. S." the same. 6. The bordering near the edges of the banner is bright yellow and green, exactly like the letters. 7. The fringe was of silver, or some white bullion; it is (or was) metallic, though now tarnished or dark. 8. The stars are bright yellow."

As will be seen by reference to the banner, on one side are the letters "U. S." and, in a circle around them, the words "UNITAS VIRTUS FORCIOR." "Union makes valor stronger." The letter C in the last word is incorrect; it should be a T. On the other side, in the center, is the All-seeing Eye, with the words "NON ALIUS REGIT." "No other Governs." The poet Longfellow has thrown around this banner of Pulaski such a charm and beauty, that, were not his verses so wanting in historic truth, we should be tempted to quote them.

With the death of Pulaski, his legion was merged into other corps. On the 29th of November, Congress voted a monument to the memory of the Polish patriot, which was never erected; but one was subsequently raised by the citizens of Savannah, of which Gen. Lafayette, during his triumphal progress through the United States, laid the corner stone.

LEE'S PARTISAN CORPS.

LEE'S PARTISAN LEGION, so called, was a separate corps of cavalry, under the command of the celebrated Maj. Henry Lee, of Virginia, the "Light Horse Harry" of the Revolution. The legion distinguished itself in the south and was the scourge of Tarleton and the loyalists of the Carolinas, serving until the close of the war. Dr. Matthew Irvine was the principal Pennsylvania officer connected with it, concerning whom, in Lee's Memoirs, vol. ii, page 13, there is the following reference:

"Such was Dr. Skinner's unvarying objection to Irvine's custom of risking his life whenever he was with the corps going into action; that kind and amiable as he was, he saw with pleasure that his prediction, often communciated to Irvine to stop his practice (which, contrasted with his own, Skinner felt as a bitter reproach), was at length realized when Irvine was brought in wounded, and he would not dress his wounds although from his station he had the preference, until he had finished all the privates; reprehending with asperity Irvine's custom, and sarcastically complimenting him every now and then with the honorable scar he might hereafter show."

VON HEER'S LIGHT DRAGOONS.

VON HEER'S troop was organized under a resolution of Congress of May 27, 1778, establishing a Provost, to consist of a captain, four lieutenants, one clerk, quarter-master sergeant, two trumpeters, two sergeants, five corporals, forty-three provosts or privates, and four ex-carboniers; they were mounted and accoutered as light dragoons. A summary of their duties was included in orders dated October 10, 1778 (see orderly book, postea); they were to apprehend deserters, rioters, and stragglers. In battle they were posted in the rear to secure fugitives. In short, their duties were the usual ones of a provost guard, and the corps was styled the Troop of Marechaussè. Capt. Bartholomew Von Heer resigned from Procter's artillery to take this command, and in some papers he is styled "Provost Marshal of the Continental Army." The men were all recruited in Pennsylvania—Washington's letter, Penn'a Archives, O. S., ix, page 486.

CAPT. THOMAS PROCTER'S COMPANY.

APTAIN Thomas Procter's artillery company originated from a resolution of the Committee of Safety, dated October 16, 1775, for raising an artillery company, to be placed at Fort Island, to consist of one captain, one lieutenant, one drum and fife, and twenty-five privates, to serve the Province twelve months, unless sooner discharged. On the 27th of October, upon his own application, Mr. Thomas Procter was appointed captain. On the 3d of November, his company was received into the barracks at Philadelphia, and furnished with the bedding, "late belonging to the Royal artillery company," &c. The rules and regulations governing the company, will be found in Colonial Records, vol. x, page 391. On the 8th of December, Capt. Procter, and Lieut. Francis Procter were dismissed the service, on account of a difficulty with some officers of Col. Bull's battalion, and on the 27th, Lieut. Simonds was put in command, and the company ordered to Liberty Island. On the 28th, however, Capt. Procter was restored to command. Early in April, 1776, the company being stationed on Fort Island, was increased in number to one hundred and twenty men, and on the 14th of August, his force was augmented to two hundred men, to be formed into two companies with one commanding officer, with the rank of major, each company, to have one captain lieutenant and three lieutenants, and Capt. Procter was promoted major. On the 5th of October, a detachment of fifty men under Capt. Strobagh, was ordered to Fort Montgomery, Lieut. Procter, of Forrest's company, to accompany. On the 30th of October, 1776, the terms of many of the men expired, Maj. Procter was directed to reënlist them for the war, and a bounty of ten dollars was allowed therefor. The company remained at Fort Island until about the 25th of December, when part of it was ordered over into New Jersey, with Capt. Forrest and Lieuts. Duffey and Emes, and took part in the capture of the Hessians at Trenton. See these letters, Penn'a Archives, O. S., vol. v, page 142. Maj. Procter joined this command, leaving Lieuts. Courtenay and Emes in command at Fort Island, and took part in the battle of Princeton, where he captured a brass six-pounder, which he presented to the State of Pennsylvania. He was joined at Morristown on the 16th of January, 1777, by Capt. Strobagh's company. On the 17th, Gen. Knox left for New England, leaving Maj. Procter in command of all the Continental artillery. On the 20th of February, Maj. Procter received news at Morristown, of the resolution for the establishment of a regiment of artillery, and of his appointment to the command.

CAPT. BERNARD ROMANS' COMPANY.

This company of matrosses as it was called, was raised in the Province of Pennsylvania, under the authority of a resolution of Congress, for the service of the United States in Canada, (Minutes of Council of Safety, January 29, 1776, Col. Records, vol. x, page 470), and its officers appointed by the Council, ibid., 479. It afterwards went by the name of Gibbs Jones' company, but no records of it have been found except the roll hereafter printed, which seems to have been furnished the Council, in pursuance of a resolution of March 21, 1780, ibid., vol. xii, page 286, which embraced, of course, only the names of the officers and men at the latter date. The matter in brackets added from scattered memoranda in the Records and Archives.

PENNSYLVANIA STATE REGIMENT OF ARTILLERY.

PROCTER'S artillery regiment, as it was usually denominated, was a regiment of artillery raised for the defense of the State of Pennsylvania, under a resolution of the Council of Safety, dated February 6, 1777, to consist of a colonel, lieutenant colonel, major, eight captains, eight first lieutenants, eight second lieutenants, eight lieutenant fire-workers, paymaster, surgeon, &c., thirty-two sergeants, thirty-two corporals, eight drummers, eight fifers, twelve musicians, and four hundred and eighty privates. See Col. Records, vol. xi, page 116. By a subsequent resolution, February 28, 1777, ibid., page 136, it was to serve in any part of the United States during the war. Maj. Procter's command, which was its nucleus, was in service, and had its first disaster at Bound Brook, New Jersey, April 13, 1777, where Lieuts. Ferguson and Turnbull were captured, with twenty privates and two pieces of artillery. Its next disaster was at the battle of Brandywine, where Procter bravely maintained his position at Chadd's Ford, until the defeat of the right wing forced his retreat, with the loss of some guns and ammunition. At Germantown, on the 4th of October, 1777, a portion of the regiment was engaged under Capt. Lt. Brewer; Lieuts. Barker and Ritter, having charge of the guns. According to William McMullen's statement, Barker had a six-pound cannon stationed on the main street, nearly opposite Chew's house, "the report of which was so sharp, that it caused the blood to run from his ears." No regimental returns have been found prior to September 3, 1778, when, by resolution of Congress, Procter's regiment was made part of the quota of troops to be furnished by the State of Pennsylvania, which was to be credited for the men now in the regiment, and also for any that should thereafter be recruited therein. From its necessarily detached service very little of the history of the regiment has survived; but detachments from it were engaged in nearly all of the operations of the main army, subsequently notably at Monmouth and in Sullivan's campaign of 1779. The following data are gathered from such returns as were accessible, supplemented by the correspondence of Capt. Isaac Craig, furnished by his grandson, Isaac Craig, Esq., of Allegheny city, Penna'a.

Gen. Gates to the Artillery Officers.

WAR OFFICE, April 28th, 1778.

GENTLEMEN: The Board have been favored with your Certificate of yesterday, in Favor of Capt. Coren's Conduct, with Regard to you. We are always happy when Enquiries into the Characters & Behavior of Officers in the Service of their Country, turn out favorable. We deem your testimony fully satisfactory as to Capt. Coren, but are sorry any Officers under his command are in a Situation to be under the Necessity, by any Appearance, "of concealing their Ignorance." Either Mr. Coren has not been so communicative as he ought to have been, or they have been inattentive to Matters daily passing before them. Perhaps, too, they have been indolent or too much above their Business to employ themselves, Manually, in it. Practical Arts are not to be learnt by Speculation. No Person, in our Opinion, by merely viewing a complex Machine, altho' he should attend to its Parts never so minutely, either in the whole or by Detail, could at once produce, of his own Manufacture, a similar one. Practice must complete what Speculation only begins. The Knowledge you have gained, it is expected, of the Laboratory Art, as well as your Experience in Life, must convince you of the Truth of these general Positions. And as you are sent to obtain a perfect Knowledge of the Business, not only on your own account, but to promulgate it thro' the States, the Board make no Doubt of your diligently & manually applying yourselves to the Task you have undertaken. We have too good an Opinion of you all to suppose it will be necessary to impress this Sentiment upon you; because should there be any who are negligent or averse to being taught, the Board are Satisfied, as Men regarding the Interest of your Country, you would return to your other Duty, & put some other Person in a situation so desirable as that you are now in. The time you have been at Carlisle was one Argument with the Board, added to their anxiety to have the Laboratory Art more generally Known, which induced them to write to Capt. Coren on the subject, & we shall be happy to hear, on your Return to Camp, as we no Doubt we shall, that the Knowledge you have gained by your Residence at Carlisle is equal to the Expectation formed when the Measure of sending you there was adopted. If there is any Inequality in your Acquirements, it will be found that those know most who have done most Work. The greatest military Characters have thought Nothing too minute or too laborious. The great Turenne carried a Musket for a twelve month, and the Czar Peter was not satisfied with seeing a ship built, but employed himself as a common labourer in the lowest and most laborious Parts of the Business. We have, from an anxious Desire that you should gain every possible Knowledge of the Laboratory Art, gone farther into this Subject than was necessary, more especially as you were selected by his Excellency General Washington's express Directions, as Persons who would diligently attend to the Matter you have undertaken. The Board, therefore, can have no Doubt but that you will use every Exertion, as the Eyes of so many are upon you.

I am, with Regard, your obed. Servant,

HORATIO GATES, President.

Instructions to the Artillery.

MORRISTOWN, January 14, 1780.

SIR: You are to take the direction of two 5½ howitzers, and four 6-pounders, which are to be taken from the Park. As the ammunition for the howitzers is in your possession, you are to take the whole of it agreeable to the return you made to me, and ten case-shot for each and flannel cartridge must be added. If you have no case-shot, Sergt. Briant of the 3d batallion has the charge of some, which are in Lieut. Elmer's hns. It must be equally divided, and put into two sleds or waggons, or tumbrilles if sleds cannot be provided. Each 6-pounder must have 70 round-shot fixed, and 20 case, with a full proportion of tube, port-fires, &c., also an ax.

You will have delivered to you some fire-balls for the howitzers, and some bavins or reeds which you will use, if you are ordered to set fire to any buildings. There are to be two officers, and twenty-two non-commissioned and privates to each piece, which is also to have two setts of drag-ropes. You will have drawn immediately three days' baked bread and salt provisions, and rum. If sleds can be provided, the ammunition waggons (one for each piece), are to be placed on them to transport the ammunition.

The cannon also are to be placed on sleds and drawn to the place of action, and there taken off, but as soon as the firing shall be finished, to be put on again; for which reason the sleds must be used as limbers, and put in the charge of a trusty sergeant. If this method should not be thought to be the best, the horses must be put to the cannon at the place you shall receive your further orders from Lord Stirling. Sleds will also be provided, if possible to transport the officers and men, in order to prevent their being too much fatigued.

As soon as you have everything in readiness, which must be by twelve or one o'clock this day, at farthest, you will proceed to Elizabeth Town, and wait on Lord Stirling, who will be there, or Gen. Irvine, for further orders.*

You will easily perceive, by the tenor of these instructions, that the service you are going upon is a secret. You must not, therefore as you value your reputation as a soldier and a man of honor, give the least information, directly or indirectly, either to officer, soldier, or any other person, of the place of your destination or your suspicion of the service you are going upon. If you are asked any questions, you may tell them it is expected the enemy are coming out, and you are going upon the line to join the troops, to be in readiness to receive them.

* Your march must be so regulated as to be at Elizabeth Town by ten or eleven o'clock this night.

You will inform Lord Stirling or Gen. Irvine that you have the combustibles before mentioned.

It will be highly proper, if there be any public forage at Springfield, that you should put some on your sleds to feed your horses when you halt.

B. G. Artillery.

Board of War to Capt. Craig.

WAR OFFICE, April 20, 1780.

SIR: In answer to your request of this day for sundry matters relative to your march to Fort Pitt, we have to inform you—

Forage is to be obtained in the usual way at the several posts by application to the quarter and forage-masters.

You have herewith an order on the several quarter-masters to supply you with the necessary teams and carriages for conveying to Fort Pitt the artillery and stores under your care, and a particular order on Col. Davis, at Carlisle, for that purpose, and the supply of horse shoes and any other articles necessary for repairing the carriages on the way.

The eight men of Capt. Coren's company at Carlisle and Fort Pitt or other place westward of Philadelphia, you will take with you, and cause them to do duty in your company, subject, however, to the future orders of the board or of the Commander-in-Chief.

As we expect, in a few days, a complete arrangement of the artillery, we think it inexpedient, at this time, to issue a commission to Capt. Lieut. Lloyd. As soon as we get the arrangement we will make out and transmit his commission.

We have no money, nor can we get any to defray the expenses of your march. If Col. Flower, C. G. of U. S., thinks it reasonable to make you an allowance for conducting the artillery and stores to Fort Pitt, we shall not object to it; the money so allowed you to be applied in the same manner as if given to a conductor of military stores.

We are, Sir, your most obed^t servants,

By order of ^ye board,

TIM'Y PICKERING.

Capt. ISAAC CRAIG.

WAR OFFICE, April 20th, 1780.

SIR; You, having under your charge a quantity of artillery & artillery stores destined for Fort Pitt, all quarter-masters and forage-masters on the route are hereby directed to furnish you with the necessary forage for your horses, and also with horses to replace any that shall fail on the march. We expect you will use this order with great prudence & economy, that the distresses of the public may not be increased, but in case of absolute necessity.

We are, Sir, y^r obed^t Servants,

By order of ye board,

TIM'Y PICKERING.

Capt. ISAAC CRAIG,

4th reg^t. artillery.

Orders of the Supreme Executive Council.

IN COUNCIL, PHILADELPHIA, April 24th, 1780.

To all concerned:

Capt. Craig, ordered by his Excellency Genl Washington, to Pittsburgh, with artillery and stores, applied to the Council for aid and assistance therein; on consideration, Ordered, That the Lieutenants, Sub-Lieutenants, Justices of the Peace, and others of the respective counties thro' which Capt. Craig shall pass, do give him such aid & assistance in transporting the said stores & artillery as the occasion may require.

Extract from the minutes:

T. MATLACK,
Secr'y.

Col. Brodhead to Capt. Craig.

HEAD QUARTERS, FORT PITT, May 13, 1780.

SIR: It is some weeks since his Excellency, the Commander-in-Chief, and the Honorable Board of War wrote me that you were ordered to this department with a number of cannon and military stores. I am aware of the difficulties you must meet with in obtaining carriage, &c., to enable you to proceed expeditiously, yet as the enemy are very troublesome to the settlement, and it is become highly expedient for me to counteract their designs by some offensive operation, I must request you to exert yourself as much as possible to reach this point before the 1st of June. It will be very hazardous to come up the Pennsylvania road, wherefore you are to come up the Virginia road, and if you find that the artillery and stores will be too much exposed upon any part of that road, you will halt and give me notice, so that a sufficient convoy may be sent you. I wish you to send me by the first conveyance a return of your strength and of the number and calibres of your ordnance, and the quantity of stores you have with you, or expect to be forwarded, that in case of deficiency I may make further applications.

I have the honor to be, with respect,

Your most obed^t serv^t,

DANIEL BRODHEAD,
Colonel Commanding.

Col. Brodhead, in a letter to Washington, dated Fort Pitt, April 24, 1780, writes, "I am honored with a line from the Honorable Board of War, informing me that an officer of Procter's regiment with some stores and cannon, were in readiness to be sent down as soon as the roads would permit and the means of transportation can be procured."—Penn'a Archives, O. S., vol. xii, p. 223. And May 13, 1780, "I have wrote to the artillery officer [Capt. Craig], to hurry up the artillery and stores, but I hear he is badly furnished with carriages and forage, which must prevent his marching with expedition."—Ib. 234. And June 29, 1780. "The artillery has arrived, and the military stores are safely lodged."—Ib. 248.

Orders for Major Craig.

FORT PITT, November 11, 1780.

SIR: I have received intelligence, through various channels, that the British have established a post at Lower Sandusky, and also information that it is suspected they intend erecting one at either Cuyahoga creek or Grand river. But as these acounts are not from persons of military knowledge, nor to be fully relied on in any particular, and I am anxious to have the facts well established, you will, therefore, proceed with Lieut. Rose, my Aid-de-Camp, and six active men in order to reconnoitre these places, particularly Cuyahoga. As your party is so small, you will use every possible precaution to avoid of being discovered, which service I expect you will be able to perform, as they will probably be relaxed in discipline at this advanced season of the year. When you have reconnoitred these posts (if any), you may try to take a prisoner, provided you find it can be done without much risque of losing any of your party, which must be guarded against at all costs, as it is not your business to come to action. My reasons for allowing you so small a party being to avoid discovery. I know your zeal will excite you to go lengths, perhaps even beyond your own judgment, in order to effect the purposes of your excursion. But, notwithstanding my earnest desire to obtain accurate accounts of the matters mentioned herein, you will please to keep in view that I am extremely solicitous that every man may be brought back safe, and that one man falling into the hands of the enemy, may not only ruin your whole present business, but also prevent future discoverys.

As it may become necessary for you to detach or separate from Mr. Rose, it will be proper for you to give him a certified copy of this order.

I am, sir, your obedient humble servant,

WM. IRVINE,
B. General.

Major CRAIG.

Gen. Washington to Capt. Craig.

HEAD-QUARTERS, NEW WINDSOR, April 25th, 1781.

SIR: I have received your favor of the 15th. The present State of Col. Procter's Regiment does not admit of your Company's being made up to its full complement, but I have, by this conveyance, desired General St. Clair to let you have as many men as will put you on a level with the others. This is all that can be done. I have already desired the Board of War to send six Artificers to Fort Pitt; you may wait upon them yourself with this Letter, and ask three or four more if they can be spared. I would wish the enclosed for Genl Clarke and Col. Brodhead, to reach them as speedily as possible; you will be pleased to take charge of them yourself, if you do not meet with a good opportunity previous to the time you intend setting out.

I am, Sir, Your Humble servant,

Go WASHINGTON.

To Capt. CRAIG.

From a return, dated March 22, 1782, signed by Andrew Porter, major commanding Pennsylvania regiment of artillery, there were stationed at Lancaster and Carlisle, two majors, five captains, four captain lieutenants, two first lieutenants, paymaster, quarter-master, surgeon, two cadets, one surgeon's mate, quarter-master sergeant, drum major, fife major, four musicians, four sergeants, three corporals, one bombardier, six gunners, seven drums and fifes, twenty-five matrosses; total, seventy. At Fort Pitt, two captains, one second lieutenant, &c.; total, thirty-four. In the Southern army, two captains four captain lieutenants, one second lieutenant, adjutant, non-commissioned officers and privates, one hundred and twenty-one; making total strength of the regiment two hundred and thirty-five.

The return from Fort Pitt is dated July 26, 1782; the return from the Southern army, November 10, 1781.

After the surrender of Cornwallis, three companies of the artillery were detached to the Southern army, under Gen. Greene. A return, found among the Hand papers, dated at

James Island, S. C., January 31, 1783, indicates the strength of this detachment as follows:

Capt. Ferguson's company		21
McClure's	"	25

In June, 1784, when Congress called for a regiment partially infantry and artillery, Pennsylvania immediately furnished its quota, and on the 13th of August, Thomas Douglass was appointed captain, and Joseph Ashton, lieutenant of the artillery company, by the Supreme Executive Council of Pennsylvania. The following year, Capt. Thomas Douglass was dropped, and Capt. William Ferguson superseded him, October 20, 1788, apparently upon a claim of rank, (Col. Records, vol. xiv, pages 559 and 621), which gives some ground for the claim made by the descendants of Major William Ferguson, that he was never out of the service of his country from the day he entered the ranks as a private of Procter's First company of Pennsylvania artillery, until as commandant of artillery of Gen. St. Clair's army, he fell by his guns in the disastrous battle of November 4, 1791.

According to Prof. Asa Bird Gardner's letter to the Editors the artillery of Lieut. Col. Harmar's "1st American Regiment was organized into a battalion by itself; in 1786, two new companies from Massachusetts added, and Capts. Douglass' or Ferguson's company is still in existence as the Second Company of Artillery of the present United States Army."

CAPT. ISAAC COREN'S COMPANY OF ARTILLERY.

CAPTAIN COREN'S company was enlisted as an independent company of artillery, but seems to have been for the most part employed in the laboratory for fixing ammunition for the Continental army. Under a resolution of the Assembly of April 5, 1779, it was to be considered part of the quota of the State. Though employed as artillery artificers, Capt. Coren refused to acknowledge himself under the direction of Col. Flowers.—Penn'a Archives, O. S., vol. vii, page 294; ibid., vol. viii, page 469.

By a general order, dated at head-quarters, New Windsor, January 1, 1781, Capt. Coren's company was incorporated with Capt. Porter's company.—Penn'a Archives, O. S., vol. viii, page 695.

THE INVALID REGIMENT.

WHEN Philadelphia was threatened in the fall of 1776, and all her able-bodied citizens were enrolled in the militia, the Council of Safety of Pennsylvania, always happy in expedients, resolved to form a home guard of all such persons as were not fit to march with the militia, and on the 2d of December, appointed Lewis Nicola (who had been Barrack-Master since the 20th of April) Town Major, and directed companies to be formed to guard the powder magazine and to patrol the streets, for which they were to receive Continental pay. This office he held in connection, subsequently, with that of colonel of the Invalid regiment, until he was dismissed from the service of the State as Town Major, February 5, 1782, with the thanks of the Executive Council, there being no further duty for such an officer as Town Major. He was a faithful, competent officer, and the Archives teem with his suggestions for the good of the public service, and his correspondence, beginning with his plan for the defense of the Delaware, as early as July 6, 1775.* It was Major Nicola who formed and offered to Congress the plan for raising a regiment of invalids, which was not only to be a retreat for those who suffered in the service, but also a recruiting corps and military school.—Pa. Arch., O. S. vol. vii, page 255. In April, 1779, by the directions of Gen. Wayne, with the approval of the President and Board of War, the regiment was appointed to recruit for the Pennsylvania Line, in Philadelphia and its neighborhood.

The following resolutions relate to its establishment:

"On Friday, June 23, 1777, Congress took into consideration the report of the Board of War, of the 21st of April last; whereupon,

"Resolved, That a corps of invalids be formed, consisting of eight companies; each company to have one captain, two lieutenants, two ensigns, five sergeants, six corporals, two drum-

* NOTE.—Col. Nicola, unfortunately, pilloried his own memory by one suggestion that does not come within this category It was he that proposed to Gen. Washington that he should take the title of King, which drew from the latter a letter vivid with indignation and scorching rebuke —Lossing, vol. i, 673.

mers, two fifers, and one hundred men. This corps to be employed in garrison, and for guards in cities and other places where magazines or arsenals or hospitals are placed; as also, to serve as a military school for young gentlemen, previous to their being appointed to marching regiments; for which purpose, all the subaltern officers, when off duty, shall be obliged to attend a mathematical school, appointed for the purpose, to learn geometry, arithmetic, vulgar and decimal fractions, and the extraction of roots; and that the officers of this corps shall be obliged to contribute one day's pay in every month, and stoppages shall be made of it accordingly, for the purpose of purchasing a regimental library of the most approved authors on tactics and the petite guerre. That some officers from this corps be constantly employed in the recruiting service in the neighborhood of the places they shall be stationed in; that all recruits so raised, shall be brought into the corps and drilled, and afterwards drafted into other regiments as occasion shall require.

"Congress proceeded to the election of a colonel of the said corps of invalids, and the ballots being taken, Lewis Nicola, Esq., was elected.

"On Wednesday, July 16, 1777, Congress took into consideration the report of the Board of War, of the 23d of June last; whereupon,

"Resolved, That for carrying into execution the resolve respecting Col. Nicola's corps of invalids, the following plans for raising one company, be adopted for raising the whole of the said corps:

"1. That the director-general of the Continental hospital be desired to give directions to the physicians and surgeons in the different departments, at a reasonable distance from Philadelphia, that, before they discharge any sergeants, corporals, or private men from the hospitals, as unfit for service, they consider whether such men are actually, or likely soon to be, capable of doing garrison duty; and if thought so, to mention it in the discharge, that they may not be entirely discharged from the service, but transferred from the regiment to which they actually belong, to that of invalids; and in case such men are at a distance from their respective regiments, that the director or steward of each hospital send such men to Philadelphia, in the best manner circumstances will admit.

"2. That notice be sent by the Board of War, to the generals commanding the armies, of the raising a corps of invalids, and they be desired to give orders to the officers commanding regiments, that in case they have any sergeants, corporals, drummers, or private men, deemed incapable of doing field duty, such men be examined by the director of the hospital or some other physician or surgeon, and if judged fit for garrison duty, that they be not discharged but transferred to the invalid corps, and sent to Philadelphia as soon as possible. Men having only one leg or one arm each, if otherwise capable of doing garrison duty to be deemed proper recruits for this corps.

"3. That the following advertisement be published in the several newspapers as soon as possible, viz:

"WAR OFFICE, June, 1777.

Congress being desirous to make provision for such men as suffer in the military service of the United States, have directed a regiment of invalids to be immediately raised for the reception of such as have already been, or may in future, be rendered by wounds or disorders incapable of doing field duty, but are yet fit for garrison service. Notice is hereby given, that all persons in Philadelphia or within 20 miles round, who are under Continental half-pay, on account of incapacities contracted in the service, must, within fifteen days, repair to Philadelphia, and shew themselves to Col. Nicola, in Front street, four doors below the Coffee house, that if judged capable of duty they may be put on full pay. All other persons who have served in the armies of the United States, within the above description, though not on half-pay, may present themselves, and, if judged capable, they will be immediately received. All such as are above 20 miles from Philadelphia, must apply to the nearest Continental general, field officer, physician or surgeon, who are desired to forward such as they judge fit for the corps of invalids. Officers, who, from wounds or disorders contracted in the service, are rendered unfit for field duty, must signify their pretensions with certificates from Continental physicians or surgeons, to the Board of War. As this corps is intended not only as a provision for disabled officers and soldiers, but as a school for propagating military knowledge and discipline, no officers need apply but such as produce ample certificates of their having served with reputation, and having supported good characters both as citizens and soldiers. Officers and soldiers who have engaged during the war will be preferred."

The customary process of transferring invalid officers to this regiment was upon the order of Gen. Washington or of the Board of War; there were no promotions of officers so transferred.

The regiment was directed to be disbanded in April, 1783, but it will be seen by reference to the roll herewith presented, that many of the men were not discharged until the close of the year, while most of the officers were paid up to December, 1784.

At a Division Genl Court Martial, held at peekskill, July 16th, '78, Lt. Col. Hay, president, Lt. James Armstrong, of the 3d pennsy^la Reg^t, Tryed for Behaving in a scandalous manner in beating a Number of persons, Breaking windows, and being Guilty of other abusive treatment, after Due Consideration, the Court are of oppinion that Lieut. Armstrong was Guilty of Beating Qr Mr Bradford, but think that the provocation was, in some Degree, Equal to the Offence; that he was Guilty of Breaking Seller Windows, and of other abusive treatment; but, upon the Whole, Cannot pronounce his Behaviour, though unjustifiable, and notwithstanding his good Character as an Officer and Soldier, is sentenced to be Reprimanded in Genl Orders. At the same Court, Captns James Christy and Thomas Moore, of said Regt., was tryed for said Crime. The Court are of oppinion that they are not Guilty of Behaving in a scandalous manner, in Beating a number of persons, Breaking Windows, But find them Guilty of Abusive treatment, and sentence them to be Reprimanded by the Commanding Officer of the Brigade. The Commander in Chief is sorry he has a Reason to Declare that Captns Christy and Moore, and Lt. Armstrong were, through the whole of this affair, in Circumstances that did them very little honour. He Laments they should suffer themselves so far to Deviate from that line of Delicacy and Decorum which owe to their own character, as to engage in Riot and tumult of singularly complexion, espesially as it Rather appears by their own Defence, that they left their Regt without leave. Captns Moore, Christy, and Lt. Armstrong, the Brigade Majors, and Adjts of the Day, are to be very alert in telling of the Guards, so soon they are assembled on the parade that the men may not be Fatigued by long standing; they are also to see that the men stand firm, with their Heads erect, and observe the strictest silence. While this is Doing, a chain of sentinels are to be posted along the front of the parade, at forty yds Distance; within, none but the Genl, field, and other Officers of the Day are to be admitted.

As there is something that is extreamly awkard and unmilitary in Officers saluting at Different times and in Different manners, the following Genl Directions are to be observed: The saluting officer is to look full in the face of the officer saluted, his body up Right, and his step firm, and to begin at such a Distance as to finish the salute when opposite the person for whome it is intended; the motions of the sword or Fuzee and the feet ought be in Concert, in order to which and for the Gracefull performance of salutes its expected that officers will spare no trouble or pains to perfect themselves, and arrive at Dexterity & Uniformity, as it is a matter that forms no Unessential part of their Duty, and will highly ornament their Military appearance and character.

When the Guards are ordered to march off, the Brigade

Digitized by Google

Major is to see that they all march off at the same time with their left feet, and the officers of plattoons will be particularly attentive that the step is afterward preserved as the plattoons pass in Review before the Major Genl or the Officer Commanding the parade; the men are to Hold up their Heads and look full in the face.

No Officer that has Regimentals are to mount Guard in any other Dress, and when men are warned for Guard, they are to be Directed to Come on with clean hands and faces, with hair Comed and powdered, and are to appear in all Respects as Desent and Soldier like as Circumstances will permit. Brigade Majors and Adjt^s will Recollect that it is an Indispensable part of their Duty, and to see that their men's arms and amunition and accoutraments are continually in the best order.

The Major Genl of the Day, through the field officers of the Day, will have a carefull Inspection made into these matters, and where there appears to be any Deficiency, will call the Brigade Majors and Adjutants to any acct. on the spot, and either Reprimand, arrest, or acquit, as circumstances shall warr't; these are to be considered as standing orders which it is expected that all officers and soldiers will be made acquainted and punctually observed. The whole army to be under arms at five o'clock to morrow morning, precisely, with their tents struck and Rolled up, and their packs slung; further orders will be given by the Adju^t Genl. The troops of the whole line will exercise and maneuvre on the principles heretofore established for the main army twice a Day, from five to seven in the morning, and from five to seven in the evening.

Brigade Inspectors will perform the Dutys of their office as heretofore Directed by the orders of the 15th of June last. Col. Davis will superintend the Right Wing and three Brigades on the Right of the second line. Col. Brooks will superintend the left wing and two Brigades on the left of the second line. Conformable to the spirit of the Same order, the Commanding officers of those brigades who have no Inspectors, are appointed, will Recommend proper officers for that purpose to Head-Quarters.

Connecticut Malitia Light Horse, are Discharged. His Excellency thanks them for their Good service.

At a Gen[l] Court Martial, whereof Col. Stewart was president. July 29th, 1778, Lt. Col. Rignier, tried first for leaving his Regt. when alarmed by the firing of the pattrolls upon the lines, upon the morning of the 29th of June last, and not Join'd it again until the alarm was over. 2[d]y, for purchasing a Horse from a soldier, which properly belonged to the Continent.—3[dly], for treating Adjutant Sacott in an unofficer and ungentleman-like manner, & the Court having considered the Charge and the evidence, are unanimously of oppinion, that Lt. Col. Rigonier is not Guilty of either of the Charges exhibited against him, and are further of oppinion that they are Groundless, vexatious, and dictated by private picts and Mallice, and Do acquit him with Honour.

At the same Court Martial, July 21st, Capt[n] Celleran, acting as a volunteer in the fourth New York Regt., was tryed first, for Calling Capt. Pachott a Lyar, and Drawing his sword on him when unarmed. Secondly, for Insinuating that he was a Coward; and Chalenging him to fight a Duel. The Court having Considered the first charge and evidence, are of oppinion that Capt[n] Sellerren is Guilty Thereof; but as the abuse was Reciprocal, and as Capt[n] Sillerran Could not mean by Drawing his sword to take advantage of Mr. Pachott's being unarmed, and The Court think the punishment of Lying under an arrest, the punishment pointed out in the Articles of War, of which his crime was a breach, and which Capt. Celleran has already suffered, is adequate to the fault he has Committed, they are likewise of oppinion that Capt[n] Celleran is Guilty of the second charge exhibited against him, but as the challange was Given by him Immediately as it proceed from the Instantaneous Resentment of an Incensed Gentleman, and was not sent on Cool Reflection, the Court are oppinion that Capt[n] Celleran has not been Guilty of a Breach of the Articles of War, what prohibits sending challenges, and do determine that he do not merrit Censure.

Likewise, Lt. Norton, of the 2[d] pensyl[a] Regt., tryed for entering the encampment of the 3[d] pensy[l] Regt., in Company with several others, in a Riotous and mutinous manner, & with attempting to enter Col. Craig's House, Between the Hours again twelve and one in the morning of the fourth of June, with a Drawn sword, & unanimously acquitted of the charges Exhibited against him

The Commander-in-Chief in very Express Terms forbids soldiers to remove, burn, or otherwise Destroy the rails Belonging to the Inclosing in and about Camp, and he expects that officers of all ranks will use their Utmost exertions to prevent this Wanton Waste of Private Property, and to Bring to severe Punishment the offenders.

The Adjutant General, in Ordering Detachments forrageing on Scouts, is always to mention the Number of Days for which they are to Draw provisions. Notice whereof being Communicated to the regimental Q. Masters through the proper Channel, make responsible for the men of their respective Regts, that they bring the Provisions ordered. This to be Considered as a standing order, and all officers are to pay strict obedience There to, as it hath been found in some Instances that a Neglect has frusterated and Defeated the end of Detachments, in others, that the Countrey People has suffered Greatly in having their Provisions forced from them to support those Partys.

Major Gen[l] to-morrow, Gates.

Brigadier, Wayne.

Field Officers, Col[o] Courlton, and L[t] Col[o] Woolford.

The officers Comdg. the several guards are to be pointedly exact in reporting in time the occurrences of the Day; at any rate, they are not to Delay in doing this beyond twelve o'clock, that the whole may be drawn into one and presented to the Major Gen[l] before three.

That the whole army may be served with the same Rations, the Coms[y] Gen[l] is to further orders to Issue as follows:

1¼ lbs. flower or soft Bread, or 1 lb. of heard bread, 18 ounces of fatt or fresh Meat, or 1 lb. of Pork or fish, & 2 ounces of Butter, a Gill of rum or whiskey, when to be had the usual allowance of soap & candles.

The Major Gen[l], with the Brigadiers Comd'g Brigades under them, are to examine the Ground well in front and round about their Respective encampments, & assign each Brigade its alarm post; in doing this, after the ground hath been previously examined, they are to Cause the Brigades to be drawn up on such as shall be respectively intended for them, that the space Required for each may be ascertained. A discharge of three Pieces of artillery from as usual is to be the signall for an alarm.

At a Gen[l] Court Martial, July 27th, '78, Col[o] Stewart, President, Doctor Brown of the 14th Virginia Regt., tryed first for going home without his leave, but against the express Consent of the Comd'g Officer, and that at a time, too, in the Distress situation of the Regt. Required the Doctor's Perticular attention. Secondly, for neglecting to have a furlough, which he said he obtained from Doctor Cochran, Registered as it is Positively directed, Gen[l] Orders of 22 December last. The Court having Considered the Charges & evidences, are Unanimously of opinion, that Doctor Brown is Guilty of the Charges against him, being breaches of the 5 articles, 18 Sextion of the arrickles of war, and of a Gen[l] order Issued 22 December, '77; but in Consideration of his very bad state of health at the time he left his Regt., and his Conceiving that a furlough from Doctor Cochran was entirely Sufficient., The Court only sentence him to be Reprimanded in Gen[l] orders. Though the fact stated in the first Charged is proved, yet the Commander-in-Chief Cannot think that it contains any Imputation of Guilt, because by the establishment of the Medical Department, the Surgeon Gen[l] had a right to give Doctor Brown a furlough in the manner he did, and it appears besides, that the Doctor's state of health did not permit his attendance on the Reg.; his Conduct was certainly blamable in not having the furlough Registered, as Directed by Gen[l] orders, an Ignorance of which is the worst of all Possible excuses.

For three Days' Detachment furnished with two Days' Provisions, Ready Cooked, Lt Col[o] Regnear & Starr, Majors Lydard & Winslough.

For two Days' guard, to be furnished with two days' Provisions & 40 Rounds p[r] Man. Lt. Col[o] Smith, Major Sumner, a non-Commissioned officer and seven Dragoons from each of the following Regts.: Blan's, Sheldon's, & Moilens, to be Paraded on the Grand Parade to-morrow Morning, furnished with two Days' Provisions.

RIGIMENTAL ORDERS, August, 21st, A. D. 1778.

The Colonel Takes the Liberty of Informing the Officers that the Better they are acquainted with Maneuvres, when they can go through every part of their duty with exactness, it will be much to their honour, when, on the Contrary, if you will only observe the Officers that appear on the Grand parade, & is on Guard, in what light they are viewed, they are Looked upon as Negligent bad officers; there is no way of Gaining this Knowledge but by Closely attending their duty, Never being absent from parade, & Manouvering the men in Rotation, which has been the Plan laid down for some time past. The Colonel, therefore, positively orders that the regt. is exercised every morning & evening, the first day by the oldest Captain, the next day by the second, & so on in Rotation till you Come to the youngest officer in the regiment. But this will by no means excuse those from attending the parade if it is not their Tour to Manouver the Regiment. The Division is to join to-Morrow. The Officers Commanding Companys will see that their men wash their cloaths This day, and to have their arms in Good Order, with Wooden Snappers. A strict Complyance with the orders expected.

The Commander in Chief has thought proper to pardon the following prisoners who were under sentence of Death this Day:

Soloman Lyons,	Wm. McGloughlen,
James Craig,	John Jenkyns,
Hezekiah Ward,	Nicholas Fitzgerald,
Richd Burk,	John Potter,
Michael Karman,	Neal McGonnagle.

Notwithstanding the Genl Good Character of the Criminals as Soldiers, the Wounds he received in fighting for his Country, the warm solicitations he received from several Respectable officers in his behalf, and even the special Intercession of Capt. Scott himself, to whom the Injury was Offered, it was with extreme Difficulty the Commander in Chief Could prevail with himself to pardon the Offence so atrocious as that Committed by Neal McGonnagle. The Least Disr spect from a soldier to an officer is Criminal in a high Degree & Deserves severe Punishment, & when it proceeds from any personal violence, the offender Justly merits Death. But when it extends to an at tempt on the Life as was the Case in the Present Instance, it assumes a Complexion so Inormious & aggravated that even wants a Name, & Puts the Criminal almost Beyond mercy It self. The Genl is happy to reflect that this is the first Time an Instance of this Nature has Come before him. He thinks it Necessary to warn every Soldier That a similar offence may Never after be forgiven whatever may be the Character or Interposition of the Officer.

Several Deserters from the army to the enemy who have since Returned, having been permitted, with Impunity, to Join the rigts., the General to prevent an Abuse of his Lenity By its Being Drawn into a precedent & Made an Incouragement to others to Comit the same Crime, Takes Occasion to Declare in Explicit Terms, that no man who shall Desert to the Enemy, after the Publication of this order, will ever be allowed to Injoy the Like Indulgence; but whether he returns Voluntarily himself or falls into our hands By any Other means, will Infallibly suffer the Punishment Decreed to his Crime.

WM. IRVINE,
Colon^{l} Command.

Brigade returns of all the Horses in each rigt. & by whome kept, to be made out Immediately, and Delivered into the Orderly office to Morrow morning.

The Honourable the Congress has been pleased to agree to the following report of their Committee to pass the resolutions annexed to it:

In Congress, Augt. 17th, 1778.—The Committee to whome was referred a Letter to General Washington, 28 July, '78, respecting General Putnam & the report of the Court of enquiry on the subjects of the Posts in the Highlands on Hudsons river, Taken Last year, which were Transmitted to Congress: Report that on a Careful Examination of the Facts stated by the Court of Enquiry, and consideration of the evidence taken & Transmitted, it appears that those posts were Lost not from any Miss Conduct, fault or Negligence of the Commanding Officers, But really for want of an adequate force under their Command to Maintain and Defend them.

Resolved, That Congress agree to the same report.

At a Brigade Court Martial of Artillery, August 14th, '78, Lt. Colonl Hopkins, President. Lts. Watters & McNamara were Try'd for speaking Disrespectfully of the Commander-in-Chief, Beating Lt. Hill in a scandalous Manner unbecoming the Character of Gentlemen, & raising a Riot & Contemptuous Behavior with Colonl Harrison, after being arrested. After mature deliberation, the Court are of opinion that Lt. Watters is Guilty of treating Lt. Hill in a Scandalous manner unbecoming the Character of a Gentleman. But as the provocation from Mr Hill was so considerable & so very apt to produce In Mr. Watters, a forgetfulness of his Character as a Gentleman & Officer, we view the Crime in some measure palliated & therefore only sentence him to be reprimanded by the Commanding officer of Artillery, In presence of all the officers of the Corps.

The General approves of the sentence, and orders it to take place to-Morrow morning at roll Call.

The Court find that Lt. McNamarra, of Colonl Harrison's Rigt., is Guilty of speaking disrespectfully of His Excellency Genl Washington, Treating Lt. Hill in a scandalous manner unbecoming the character of a gentleman and a Contemptious Treatment of Colonl Harrison, after Being arrested, and unanimously Judged that he should be Cashiered.

The Commander-in-Chief is sorry to be under the Necessity of deciding a Case of this nature, and would readily remit the sentence against Lt. McNamara, if his Behavior to Colonl Harrison, his Commanding Officer, had not been so Gross & Disorderly as to compel the General to Confinement, &c., &c., &c.

The Good Character Given Lt. Lewis by his Commanding Officer, has prevented the Court from being still more severe In the sentence. The Commander in Chief looks upon Lt. Lewis' Conduct as an Inexcusable Breach of Military Discipline; the plea of not knowing Colon[l] Swift, under whose Immediate Command he then was, Cannot be admitted, as Lt. Inspector from the 1st Pennsylvs Brigade. A Board of Field Officers to sit this afternoon in Genl Poor's Brigade, to settle the relative Ranks of the Majors & Captns in said Brigade. Colonls Hazen, Scamnel, & Seely, Members for the Board; an Officer at least from Each rigt. to attend said Board. Genl Poor will appoint a Captain from each regiment, & a field Officer as president to settle the relative rank of the subalterns.

At a Brigade Court Martial, Augt 22nd, '78, Colonl Grayson, president, Lt. Welch, of Colonel Putnam's Rigt., was Tryed for Challenging Capt. Barns to fight a Duel, & abusive Language offered to him (Capt. Barns), found Guilty of the Charge Exhibited against him, & sentenced to be Cashiered. The Commander-in-Chief is not fully satisfy'd that Lt. Welch Behaviour to Capt Barns amounted to a Challenge, In the sense Intended by the articles of war; Nevertheless, his Conduct was highly Culpable, & Merited a sentence similar to that passed by the Court. The Indecent haste & Fury with which he acted, & the Insult and abuse Given to Captain Barns, which appeared to have been unprovoked, are Certainly a high Impeachment of his discretion; Nevertheless, the Good Character the Court has heard of him as an officer, has Induced him to restore Lt. Welch to his Command.

At another Court Martial, Augt 20th, '78, Major Lee, President, Capt. Newell, of the 1st Virginia State Rigt., was Try'd, first, for Embezzling Money, the property of several soldiers. 2nd, for Embezzling Cloaths Belonging to the Publick; acquitted of the 1st Charge, but found Guilty of the second, & sentenced to be reprimanded in Genl Orders. The General Disapproves of the sentence, for if Captn Newell was Guilty of the Charge of Embezzling Public Cloathing, the sentence is Intirely Inadequate to the Offence; if he was not Guilty, he ought to have been acquitted. He is to be released from his arrest.

The Regimental Surgeons are to be supplyed with paper from the Brigade Quarter Masters. The Week's Commd to be supply'd with 2 Days' Provisions.

HEAD QUARTERS, September 29th, A. D. 1778.

IN CONGRESS, Sepr, 17, 1778: WHEREAS, It is represented by the auditors of the army that many regimental pay-masters have adopted the unwarrantable practice of paying to the Commanding officers of Companys, agreeable to the recommendations of the Colonel or Commanding officers of the regts, respectively such sums of money as the said regts Pay-Masters have drawn for, but not paid, to prisoners, deserters, and men who have died in the service.

Resolved, That until the sums of money so paid by the regimental pay-Masters will be reimbursed and paid into the hands of the pay-Master or Deputy Pay-Master Genl, such Commanding officers of regts shall be accountable for the money they have so ordered to be paid, the Commanding officers of Companys for the moneys so received, and the regimental pay-masters for the Moneys so paid by Them respectively; and the auditors of the army are authorized and directed forthwith to oblidge the said officers to account agreeable to the mode prescribed by the resolution of Congress of the 6th of February last.

The regt Pay-masters are to apply to the Pay-Master Genl for the pay of their respective regts for the months of June and July.

At a Genl Court Martial of the line whereof Colonl Humpton was president, September, 1778, Captain Norwood, of the 4th Maryland regt, was Tryed upon the following Charges; 1st, for Publickly Declaring and Implying that he will not regard the censure of the Commander in Chief, because the Facts sat forth to him on his Tryall where Mistated; 2nd, for Conduct unbecoming an officer and Gentleman, In suggesting Publickly that the facts where misrepresented, which had an imply'd Tendency either to reflect on his Excellency, or the Court Martial, or Gen[l] Smallwood, or the whole; 3[rdly], for declaring that Gen[l] Smallwood has been Guilty of Partiality in his Case, that the Gen[l] is no Gentleman, and that he would make it his business to declare publickly every opportunity that Gen[l] Smallwood was a partiale man and no Gentleman. The Court having Considered the two first Charges & the evidence, are of oppinion that Captain Norwood is Guilty of saying that he did not regard the Censure of the Commander in Chief Because the facts set forthe to him on his Tryall where misstated, & are further of oppinion that such a Tendency had a Tendency to reflect on his Excellency & on Gen[l] Smallwood. The Court having Considered the Third Charge & the evidence, are of oppinion that Cap[t] Norwood's Justification is not sufficient, & that his expression in respect of the Character of Gen[l] Smallwood are totally Groundless & without foundation. The Court find Cap[t] Norwood Guilty of Breaches of the 2nd article of the 2nd Sextion, 5th article, 18th Sextion of the articles of war, & Do sentence him to be Disch[d] the service. The Commander-in-Chief, in Justice to Captain Norwood, declares that he does not believe That he had any Intention to reflect upon him, though his expression might have such a Tendency, But as Captain Norwood's Conduct in many respects has been prejudicial to Good order & Military Discipline, and Inconsistent with respect Due to his Superior officers, he approves of the sentence of the Court.

At a Division Court Martial held at Danbury, Sept[r] 21st, 1778, by order of Major Gen[l] Gates, Colon[l] Seely, President, Colon[l] Brewer was Try'd for embezzling or misapplying Part of the Cloaths sent by the Board of war of the State of Massachusetts Bay for the officers of his Regt., the Court after Consider'g the evidence are unanimously of oppinion That Colon[l] Brewer is Guilty of the Charges exhibited against him & Do sentence him to be Discharged the service. In any Country, & highly Conducive to order, subordination. & success in an army, it will be well worthy the emulation of officers of every rank & Class to encourage both, by their Influence & example & the Penaltys of authority.

It is painfull to see many Shamefule Instances of riote & licentiousness, amongst us; the wanton Practice of swearing has risen to a most Disgusting height; a regard to Decency should Conspire with a sence of Morality to Banish a Vice Productive of Neither advantage or Pleasure. The frequent Robberys which has Lately prevailed In the Vicinity of Camp are Truly allarming, & Demand the most vigorous exertions to Detect the Perpetrators & Bring them to the severest Punishment.

Consisting with the Publick service, the Brigadeers & Colonels Commanding Brigades are requested to Grant furloughs to the officers of their respective Commands under the following restrictions, To Wit: One field Officer of each regt. & one Commiss^d Officer of each Company at a Time. They are Not to be Given to a Greater proportion of Officers at once, & in this only But when there will remain Two field Officers & Two Commissioned Officers with each regt. & each Company respectively, except their should arise Cases of a very Pressing & Extraordinary Nature, of which the Genl Officers having Genl Commands of the Post Division or Detachment in which the officers requesting such Indulgence is to Judge, & so to act as he shall think proper. As the Length of their furlough must Depend on the Circumstance of the Distance & some other Considerations, the General Cannot prescribe the Time for which they are to be Granted. But he mostly Confides that they will only be Given for a reasonable Time, that the Officers Remaining may experience the Like Indulgence in succession, to which they will have an equal Claim, upon every principle of Justice & Generosity.

As the Troops are about to receive New Cloaths, the Genl hopes that the Colon^ls & rest of the Officers will Give particular attention to their preservation, as well for the sake of their own Reputation, & the appearance of their own Corps, as the Great Difficultys which attending the Procuring them, & that they may be the Better Preserved, he Injoins, in a most pointed Manner, that after their Delivery, Comp^y Rolls may be kept of the same, with proper Columns for each article, that these may be examined at Least once a week by an actual view of their articles, & that every Deficiency & Loss, unless satisfactorily accounted for, and every neglect of a sufficient Care in the soldiery, Be punished with proper severity, according to former orders, to all of which on this subject there is to be a strict regard. The General also hopes that the officers will pay Constant attention to the Cleanliness & Dress of the men, & the fitting of their Cloaths. In the first Instance, without these, they must be sensible that they Never Can assume the air of soldiers, or appear to the Least advantage. After the Troops have received New Cloaths, The Officers Commanding Reg^ts are to be very Careful in Causing the proper Officers to make the Earliest Delivery of the old, that is of the Coats, Westcoats, and Bretches fit for service to the Clothier General, for which they are to obtain Two receipts, one to be kept for their own Justification, the other to be returned to head Quarters.

DIVISION ORDERS.

It is with Great Concern that Genl Wayne finds himself Necessitated to Censure the Conduct of an Officer on any occation, But when a Gentleman so far Neglects his duty, or rather from a Mistaken Notion of Clemency, takes upon himself to give a slight punishment to a soldier from being Guilty of the Highest Crime known in an army, viz: for getting Drunk on guard or sentry, the Genl Can't, Consistent with his Duty, suffer such a Conduct to pass with Impunity, as the safety & Lives of both officers & Men Depend on the sobriety, care, & vigilance of Guards.

This being Granted, every Good & worthy soldier will Carefully avoid being Guilty of so deep a Crime, & will Cheerfully agree to the Necessity as well as Justice of the Punishment, which, by the Articles of War, is Death. But in Consideration of the Wound which Amb^e Conner, of the 9th regt., received from Lieut. Ball, the General is Induced to pardon said Connor for the Crime he was Guilty of. And he is Induced to release Lieut. Ball from his arrest. At the same Time he Can't help Defaulting the Lt. for Screening said Connor from Capital punishment, by his Imprudently Wounding him.

The Genl is very happy in having it in his power to assure his worthy fellow soldiers that a Compleat uniform, for every man, will be Delivered as soon as the Hatts arrive, which are expected every Moment.

This order to be read at the head of each regt., this evening at Roll Call.

Those are to be the object of delivery Now Called for, on the recommendation of the Hono'ble the Board of War, as from a view of supplies at the time the measure was Considered, was founded not only in Policy, but strict necessity, as providing the best sorts of relief to the soldiers themselves against accidence that might attend the Importation of future supplys, as well to those whose unhappy Lot should become the subjects of Hospital when in the army, for whom some provision In this Instant would be Indispensable. However as our Quantity of New Cloathing fortunately Turns out Better than it was at first apprehended, &, of Course, Remove, in some degree, the Necessity which Dictated the Measure, & as the old remaining in the hands of the Soldiers will Contribute much by a Carefull use and application of them on Dutys of fatigue, &c., to Preserve the New. The orders of the second, so far as it respects a return of them to the Clothier, Is Dispenced with; but such Cloathing—Coats, Vests, Bretches, &c.—as have been received, either. through the hands of the Clothier, or agent, or Through the States or Continental account, which has been Delivered in the Course of the Fall, or that may remain undelivered, is not to be Comprehended under the Description of old, and must be returned to the Clothier or agent of the Department, in Case new ones are Drawn, to Prevent Injustice to the Publick, by obtaining Double supplys to the Troops themselves, who otherwise would be upon an equal footing. The General expects an appointed attention on the part of the officers to this order, & also, according to former Instructions, to their men's Cloathing, & that they will Not only extend their Care to its Cleanliness, but to prevent any Misapplication of it.

John McGraw, setler, was brought before the same Court, Charged with abusing & Defrauding an Inhabitant of this State, found Guilty & Sentenced to receive 100 Lashes on his bare back, well Laid on, & to Refund The paper money to the full amount of the Five Guineas, be Drum'd along the Line, Confined In the Provo Guard until he tells the men who were with him when he obtained the receipt for the Horse. McCoy & laid before the Court that he is Considerably Indebted for Publick money advanced by the State of Pennsylvania, & do therefore order the account to be transmitted, with the Proceedings of the Court, to head Quarters. The Commander in Chief approves of the sentence. It has given him real pain & Regret that any officer should permit to run into such frivolous Quarrels & Indecent Disorders. As Lt. McCoy appears Considerably Indebted to the State of Pennsylva for Publick money receivd By him, it is but Equitable that if there be any Money Due him from the State, it would be stopt so far as the Debt amounts to. The Pay master will therefore attend to this, & the Commanding officer will, to which he belongs, see that the Money so due by Lt. McCoy be paid to the State of Pennsylva.

The C^t of inquiry, on a complaint exhibited by Mr. Brikaw against Col. Craig, reported as follows: Y^t they are of oppinion y^t if ye inhabitants of ye Country takes ye liberty of Dailing with ye soldiers in an improper manner, & to ye prejudice of good order & Discipline, they do it at their own risk, and if ye should receive any Correction which they think is a breach of ye Civil law as they hold themselves not bound to a military Court, they should have recourse for orders to ye Courts of civil law, and y^t Mr. Brikaw, as he thinks himself aggrieved, has an undoubted right to an action against Col. Craig. The Genl. is sorry to find y^t ye Crt. seems to have mistaken his intention. He had no doubt y^t, as an Inhabitant who conceived himself aggrieved by an officer, has a right to seek redress from ye civil law, but he wished to have ye oppinion of ye Crt. explicitly on ye particular merits of ye Compt. against Col. Craig, in order to Determine how far ye Complaint might be proper to redress from military justice. All improper treatments of ye Inhabitants by an officer or soldier being Destructive of order & Discipline, as well as subversive of ye the rights of Society, is as much a break of Military as civil Law, and punishable by you as by others.

The Genl. does not mean to decide in ye prest. Case, or to include Col. Craig's Conduct in y^t Disision, but he seriously recommends it to all officers to Consider well ye Delicacy of their Stations, with respect to ye Inhabitants, & to refrain from anything y^t may ever have ye appearance of an abuse of Power, and rely, so far as depends upon him, will never escape ye severest notice.

G. St. Clair expresses the satisfaction he received in seeing ye spirit and activity ye Division displayed when ye expected to meet ye Enemy, but he could not help remarking ye extreme disorder of ye march, & ye negligence of many officers, when on return to Camp. There are 3 things which he will insist on ye officers attention, to which he has the hon^r to Com^d them on every march, y^t ye do not quit their platoon on any account, y^t ye do not suffer ye Soldiers to quit them, & y^t ye oblige y^m to Silence, there is nothing more disgusting & unsoldiery y^n a Regt. or Comp., gabling like geese; besides, a secret march is often necessary. Unless ye men are habited to marching in perfect silence, it will be impossible to impose it on y^m. The Com^dings officers of Regts. will order out ye men of their Regts. twice every Day, when ye weather is fair, divide y^m into small squads, & direct y^m to be instructed in marching & wheeling. The G. C. M., whereof Col. Butler was appointed president, to meet to-morrow morn., 10 o'Clock, Col. Butler having obtained Leave of absence, Lt Col. Harmar to preside in his room. Major Lee to attend as an addissional member.

The C. M. appointed to try Col. Ogden, Charged with—1st, neglect of Duty in Genl; 2^d, repeated frauds against the public, & also the officers and Soldiers under his command; 3rd, Cowardice; 4th, gaming, Have Declared, it their opionion, that he is not guilty of the 1st charge, that he is not guilty of the 2^d, and are unanimously of opinion that he is not guilty of the 3rd, and have unanimously acquitted him with honour. They are unanimously of oppinion that he is guilty of the 4th Charge, being a breach of the Com^d in Chief orders, the 8th of Jan., 78, and do sentence him to be severly reprimanded in Genl. orders.

The Genl. approves of the Sentence of the Court, and it gives him pleasure to find that Col. Ogden, of whom he always had a high oppinion, has been acquitted of the 3rd & 1st Charges exhibited against him. Could have been happy, if there had been no Circumstance to justify the 4th & last charge, but he is under the painful necessity of observing that they are Circumstances to most fully authorize the sentence of the Court. The Genl. is sorry that a Gentleman at the head of a Regt., who, both in practice & precept, ought to show the most pointed attention & adherence to all orders to influence and determine the Conduct of those acting subordinate Stations to him, should be among the first to break them. The officer who acts these, Countenances a relaxation of Discipline, and the Introduction of disorder can not prevent, much less punish, offences in others, which he himself commits. All Genl. orders are in force till they are set aside, or altered by subsequent ones Issued from proper authority, or till the occasion Ceases that produces them. Col. Ogden knows this, and he must know also that the particular orders, which was the subject of the Court M. Consideration on the 4th Charge against, remained unaltered, & the infraction of it is more Censurable, if possible, than that of any other was, much as the order was intended to prevent the most perniscious vice that can appertain to any Army (that of gaming.)

3 men from Maryland Line, to be sent to the Adj^{t}, to Genl. Qrs., with their Packs and Cloathing; they are to be employed in the surveyor's department. At a Brigade Genl. Court Martial, held at Elizabeth town, Lt Col. Brierly, president Apr. 10th, '79, Lt Snowden, of Genl. Marchall's Brigade, was tryd for disobedience of orders, and neglect of duty, on the 4th instant. The Court are of oppinion, by the Genls. expression, mentioned in Capt. Van Vorass' Testimony, Lt Snowden has reason to Consider himself exempted from duty, until his Claim of rank was settled; & do, therefore, find him not guilty of the Charge exhibited against him.

The Genl. is sorry he cannot agree in opinion with the Court. Genl. Maxwell's reply, related by Capt. Voress, is susseptable of differant interpritations, and it appears by Ensign Bishop's evidense, that Lt Snowden did not found his refusal on Genl. Maxwell's exemption, it appeared that he intended to exempt himself.

Lt. Snowden, conceiving himself agrieved in rank, was no justification for disobeying a regular order, and refusing his Tour of D. duty. He should have represented his Case, and apply'd for redress to the Com^{d} in Chief, and in the main time Continued to perform the dutys of his station. Lt Snowden is released from his arrest.

The Com'dr in Chief approves of the sentence of the Court but, Jno. The Gen' was sorry to see throughout the march, a much greater Proportion of men with the Baggage than could Possibly be necessary, and that a Number of them without armes, having probably deposited them in the waggons. It was too observent also, that the heavy baggage of the army has been very little, if any thing diminished, and that the Pernishuas practice of suffering the women to Incumber the waggons still continues, notwithstanding every form of Prohabition. The Gen' Recommends those Matters to the Purticular attention of the officers Commanding Brigades, and that they will take the most vigorous and effective Measures to prevent the like abuses hereafter. Two Cannon fired from Baron DeKalb's encampment, will be the signal of alarm upon which the troops will get under arms as expedishously and as light as possible. The Coll[e] is sorry to find the worthy Soldiers of his Regiment have payed so much attention to the unjust and wicked Insinuations of a set of Villians, who are not satisfied with their own Distruction, But wishes to make you Violate your Feath, and Become Pergured wretches. Pergured wretches they undoubtedly are who would wish to Desart so Just a Cause at this time, when we have so Gloreous a prospect should we Porsevere with the usual Spirit. Could any man, Enemies to their Countrey and the Libbertys of America, be Capable of unjustly Claiming their Dismission from the serves when they are Concious they have not the least Right to it, and by their example Induce many of my Good soldiers to Joyn in their wicked Designs, who, I thought, not Capable of so Ing[l]orus an act. The Coll[e] is Happy he has found out the Villians who has attep[d] to Rewing his Regiment, and now Informs his worthy Soldiers that they are Imposed on By those wretches who told them their times of Inlistment was Expired.

GENERAL ORDERS.

The extreme Importance of haveing the works and Deficiencyes at and about West Point, on Both sides of the River, Compleeted with all Possable Dispatch, so obvious that the Genl Conceives it Daily unNecessarie to use argiments in the Proofi of it. In the Present unfinished State of them, They are a restreant on every operation and movement of our enemy, and must Continue to be so Till they are Put in such a Poisture of Defence as to be safeely Confidented into a Proper Garrison. Strongly Impres^t with this Id'a himself, the Genl most ernestly exorts the officers of Fatague Parteys that the men Imploy thire Labour to advantage, and that they are not suffered During their Tower of Duty to be Idle. The works now entered upon must be Compleeted to More therefore, and the greater Exartion Imployed in the execution, the sooner the troops will be exempted from Fatigue Duty and Liberty to move from their Present Pos'sion from which Publick Benefit and Privet Convayn'ncys will Result to Fassilliate Thise Desiorable ends. The Injunears who suporinted the works will meet the Adjt. Genl at 5 o'Clock this afternoon to settle a new Detail, By which Matters are to be so ordered that the works are not to sese till Gun firing till Twa Light in the evening. To affect this the fatigue Parteys for the Day are to be Clast into three or four sets, as may be thought best. Drawing Late thire towers to work, the first not to Quit till Relived By the 2^d and so on. Those who have the warmest part of the Day to have the shortest time to labor, and as grate advantages would Result from haveing fixed suporintendence of the works, who, Being aquented with the Des'gns of the Injuneare, and acting Immed'ately

Gen[l] By To-morrow Evening, who is to Report them to Head Quarters. The Quarter Master Gen[l] haveing accation for the water men ingaged By him for the use of Ferreys, and who are now Imployed at this Place, they are to be Relieved by a eakqueal Number, or as many as are absolutely Necessary for that Duty, from Patterson's Late Larnnard's and the Carolina Brigade. He will Cause an axact Return to be Rendored as soon as Possable, of all the Boats at this Place and in the visinity of it; will see that such and so many as are Indispenceable Necessary for ordinary Purposes to Be alotted to them, and the Rest, such as want Repair, Being got in order, Left in the Care of a Proper Person with Competent Guards, who is not to suffer any of them to Be used without his order, while he is at this Post. At a G. C. M. of the Line, whereof Col. Jackson was president, held at West Point, July 13th, 1779, & by Different adjournment, till the 4th of Augt following Lt Col Lovering, of the 4th Mass. Regt., was tryed upon the following Charges:

Firstly. For furloughing a number of men belonging to the Regt. Directly contrary to the orders of His Excellency Genl Washington, by which the public believes is greatly Injured.

Secondly. For Disposing of Articles which he Drew out of the public Cloathing stores for the use of the officers and private persons at a great Advance.

Thirdly. For delaing the Surgeon's mate, in the absence of the Surgeon, when on Furlough, with 20 effective men, at Crown point, as a guard to him, when at that time, the Regt. was ordered to Command to Haverson's Purchase; also delaing One Man to cook for Genl Huntingdon's Brigade then at Crown point; The profits arising there from he Converted to himself.

Fourthly. For Defrauding the Soldiers of part of their Rations, and ordering 33 pounds of Flour to be Stopped from every hundred Drawn for the use of the Regt., and Converting 2 Barrels of Superfine Flour to his own use which was drawn for the Regt., and Returning very bad in Lieu thereof.

Fifth. For Refusing any officer or officers any Money to Recruit Men, which he drew for that purpose, to the Great injury of the Recruiting Service.

After the mature Deliberation, the Court are of opinion that Lt Col. Lovering is not guilty of the 1st charge exhibited against him, as it does not apear to be any order of his Excellency the Comm^dr in Chief, though it appears to be a greater number of Men furloughed than alowed by Genl. McDougal's orders, and for the doing of which he justified himself by Major Genl. M'Dougal's Certificate. Also, the second and fifth charge, and the later end of the 3^d, to witt: For the detaining one Man to Bake for Genl. Huntington's Brigade, then at Crownpoint, the profits arising there from he Converted to himself. But the Court adjudged Lt Col. Lovering guilty of the first part of the third Charge, viz: Detaining the Surgeon's mate, in the absence of the Surgeon, when on furlough, with 20 Efective Men, at Crownpoint, as a guard to himself, when, at that time, the Regt. were on Command at Haverson's purchase; and the 4th Charge exhibited against him, which are a breach of the 5th article 10th section of the article of war, and do adjudge him to

The Com^dr in Chief having observed great Irregularities in the differant Beates of the Drum, Requests A stricter attention to the Regulations on this head—that all the Drums in the Line May Begin and End, as nearly as Posible, at the same time. But in the Pres^t position of army, the Rule of begining on the Right can not be so Conveniantly observed. While at Poast, the Sergts. are to begin from the Rampiers of fortt Arnold, taken up by the Nearest troops, & Conveyed to Right & Left through the Line.

Officers To-morrow:

B. G., Huntington.

Lt. Co^{l} Com^{d} Hubly.

Brigade Major, Stark's Brigade.

At a gen'l court martil of the Line the 3rd Instant, Ens^{n} Russel, of Co^{l} Sheerburn's late Regiment, was tried for Defaming Col. Sheerburn's Character in Company by Saying he was a dam'd Lyer and raschal. The Court are of opinion that the charge against Ens^{n} Russel is not fully suported, yet they are of opinion that the Expressions that Mr. Russel maid use of respecting Col. Sheerburn, were highly undeasent and ill Bred, more espeachally when made by one of Influence, officer respecting his Supearer, he being the Comanding officer of the particular Regt. to which Ensign Russel belong'd, and that he is guilty of a Breach of the 5th article 18th section of the articles of war, and do sentence that Ensign Russel be Repremanded in Gen'l orders.

The Comander in Chief aproves the opinion of the Court, the Expressions that Mr. Russel used were deametrialy Contrary to the rule of good breeding, and in the 2^{d} Extreamly Disrespectful considering the relative situation between him and Col. Sheerburn, and in this view the gen'l cannot but consider his conduct highly reprehencable; he is released from his arrest.

At the same court, Capt. Christy, of the 3rd Penna. Regt, was tried for refusing, Contrary to the regulations established by Congress, to take his post & march with a detachment for guard from the Brigade to the grand Parade when requested by the Major of Brigade. The court are of opinion that Capt. Christy is guilty of the charge established against him, being contrary to the regulations for the order and discipline of the Troop, & in Breach of the 5th article 13th section of the article of war, and do sentence him to be reprimanded in Brigade Orders.

The Commander in Chief approves of the oppinion of the Court, and orders it to be carried into execution, and thinks proper to declare that Capt. Christie was wrong, in the first instant, in refusing to take the Command of the detachment when requested by Capt. Vanlear, the Brigade Major, and that he has been still more so in the defense he made, both in the manner and matter. The forming of the Detachment in the Brigade parade was of right under the direction of Capt. Vanlear, not as Capt., but as Brigade Major, and the officers to march it to the Grand Parade were to be posted by him, not from any rank required by his appointment, but from the very nature and duty of the officers itself. When the sentence is carried into execution, Capt. Christy is to be released from his arrest.

It appering to the Court that the only Caus of this Trial was to determine the property in the men said to belonging to the 6th Regiment, as a disput had Happened respecting it, the Court thought it Best to recommend to the Partys to have 3 officers not belonging to either the 4th or 6th Regiment of Pennsa, and leave it to them to determine to which Regt the men do belong, it being agreed to by the parties. The Court recommand a releasment of Capt. Campble from his arrest.

The Commander in Chief approve of the mode recommended by the Court, and Capt. Campble is released from his arrest.

As the ensuing Campain will, in all probibility, be peculiarly interesting, The Commander in Chief is desirous of having a well composed Corps of light Infantry, which cannot fail to be extreamly usefull in our operations; he, therefore, determines that one Compy shall be drawn from each Regt., which shall be finally proporton'd to the gen'l strength of the Regiments, so as not to be too large a diminution, but for the present shall Consist of one Capt., one Lieut. or Ensign, three sergeants, one drum, one fife, and twenty rank and file.

The Gen'l is persuaided that the Com^ds officers of Reg^ts will be very careful in the Choise of the men for these Comp^ys, as the good of the service and of their Regiments will be meterially Concern'd in it. A Sergt, Corpl. and 20 men from Maxwell's and Hand's Brigades to be sent to Major Bruin's Quarters at 6 o'clock to-morrow morning, with their arms & two Day's Provisions; Mr. Shoot will give them Directions.

The Comander in Chief requests that in forming Companies the most Pertickarel attention be paid to the Choice of the non-Comissioned officer. He wishes the size of the men to be from 5 feet eight to 5 feet 10, mostly of the Latter.

The Comander in Chief heas observed, with pain, that a mistake that was and excusable in the Commencement of the army, still Prevals among many officers. that of attending only to that the Cawl essentials, and neglecting the Menutae of Military service. It is high time, at this advanced peared of ower establishment, after heaving made war more then 5 years, to Discard those which only suted the Inexpearance of a new Formeation, and to adopt those princables which preveal in the Uropian armeys, and expearance truly speaking, there is nothing unashenchal, and many of those things which seem to be regearded as such, by being neglected, may Involve the fate of an armey. Our sistom heas been simplified as much as it could be, and every thing of useless ornement heas been rejected; what remans, therefore, ought to be rigedly obsarved. We shall soon heave oceasion to act in Conjunction with the Troops of our allies, who to all the Shupearer Qualites. add a Scruplas Exactness in those matters in which we are Defectave, and on which the set a high value; it will not be enough that we Possess those Millitary Vartues, that Breavorey, patiance, and obedance, which Distingush owr Troops. The Credit of owr arms will greatly Depend on a Punctual obsarvance of the several parts of Military Duty. Not with standing the pains that heave been repeatedly taken to Impress the necessaty of exactness in the sarvice of guards, there is still a Mortifing Deficancy, tho acknolledged to be of the greatest Importance. Our sentanels are Pecularly Delinquent, Consulting neither what is necessary to apearance, nor securety.

The Gen'l expects the officers of every rank to be Indefatigable in their exerchance to Corect these Defects. Solders who heave so many excallent Qualites ought not to suffer the Merit of them to be sullied or Deminished by a neglance of things, which to wish is to atain. An American solder—Equal in breavery; in Capasity, equal; supearer in Patance; fortuted, and patriotism to any other—should scorn to be Inferer in aney thing. It is hoaped the Troops will be Pertickeraly zealous in their exersise and manovers, and that the recruits will be Intructed with the utmost Care and Deligance, strickly Conforming with the regulattions.

D. ORDERS, TOTAWAY, 20*th of July*, 1780.

The troops will take up their line of March from this ground exectly at 3 o'clock, P. M. The first Brigade in front Marches by the left, the 2nd by the right, as a General Halting place will be Mead in proper position.

Genl' Wayne is confident that every officer and soldier will be fulley impressed with the propriety of keeping their ranks and platoons. A Contrary Conduct, unsoldirey and subversive of all Disiplin. One Commissioned officer from each regiment, or as many as may be deemed necessary, to remain behind with such men as are Incapable of marching, to take charge of the tents and Baggage and pollice of the Camp. This order to be Red at the head of each Regt. previous to their taking up their line of march.

AFTER ORDERS July 20*th*, 1780, 12 o'clock.

A field officer, with 2 Companies, or 100 Rank and file, properly officered to take post, at which, if attacked in the absence of the Division, must defend it to the last extremity.

The sixth regiment will advance to the look out immediately opposite Spiken Divil Creek, or King's bridge. The 7th to Fort Lee, in order to observe the motions of the enemy on York Island. The officers and men will secret themselves so as not to be observed from the opposite side of the river. Lt. Col. Harmar will leave a Capt. and 40 men on the bank overlooking the landing place in order to defend that defile, whilst he, with the remainder, advances along the sumit of the mountain about one mile lower down, between that and Fort Lee, so as to be in a position to move to either point, in case the enemy attempt landing, but the Captain's command must continue at the post assigned them at all events. Patroles to pass continually between those posts & up the river. Should the commanding officer observe the enemy embarking, they are to send immediately notice to Gen'l Wayne, towards Bull's ferry, and to make every possible opposition when the enemy begins to asend the Hill; and as the situation of those Regiments will admit of acting in conjunction in case of necessity, the General has the fulest confidence that they will maintain the posts assigned them, and at the point of the Bayonet meet the enemy in the gorge of the defile, and dispute that ground at every expence of blood, untill the arrival of the Division, when they may be assured of effectual support, and in all human probability, of a glorious victory. Gen'l Irvine, with the remainder of his Brigade, will move by Fort Lee, on the summit of the mountain, for Bull's ferry, and endeavour to introduce a sufficient number of men between the Block House & the river, if practicable, or to prevent the retreat of the garrison.

Great Caution must be observed on this rout, lest the troops may be brought into an ambush; should that be the case, the Bayonet will be their true resort, which they will use with a confidence of being vigorously supported by the 1st Brigade moving paralell with them, attended by Colonel Moylan's Dragoons, and the artillery along the open road. Gen'l Irvine will direct a chain of flankers to observe the advance of the right column, the situation of the ground being favorable for it. If he makes any material discovery, he will be so obliging as to communicate it as soon as possible.

A detachment from the 1st will prevent the retreat of the refugees towards Paulas Hook; whilst this is performing, the artillery will be preparing to demolish the Block House. Ev'ry precaution will be used to guard against any serious consequence from up the river, and should the enemy be hardy enough to attempt the relief of this post from Fort Washington, it may add never failing Laurells to Troops which have always step'd first for glory, and who has every thing to expect from victory, nothing to dread from disgrace, for altho if it is not in their power to command success, the Gen'l is well assured they will produce a conviction to the world that they deserve it.

D. O., Camp, Zubraska's Mill, July 22d, 1780.

The Regiments are to Draw one Day's flower and 2 Days Meat, and Cook it Imedetly. Exect Returns of the killed and wounded in each Regt.

DIVISION ORDERS, TOTOWAY, July 23d, 1780.

It is with Infinate pleasure that Genl' Wayne acknowledges to the worthey officers & Soldiers who served under his command since the 20th Inst., that he never saw more fortitude than that exhibited on the 21st by the Troops immediately at the point of action. Such was the enthusiastic bravery of all ranks of officers & men, that the 1st Regiment, no longer capable of restraint, rushed with impetuosity over the abbatis & up to the stockades, from which they were with difficulty with drawn. The contagion spread to the 2d, but by the united efforts of the field & officers of each regiments, they were at last restran'd. The ground, fortunately would not admit of the 10th, & the situation of Gen'l Irvine's Brigade & the other Troops prevented them from experiencing some loss of men, as the same jellous spirit prevaded the whole. They would very probably have shewn the same eager desire for close action. The Block House was only a secondary object, & to serve as allure to draw the enemy across the river, & afford us an oppertunity of desiding the fate of the day in the defiles thro which they must pass before they could possess the strong frount. At 12 o'clock, the affairs assumed a pleasing aspect, by intelligence from Closter that the British were embarking at Philips, and falling down the river towards Fort Lee, where the 6th & 7th Regiments were posted, with orders to secret themselves, and, after the enemy landed, to meet them in the gorge of the mountain & dispute the pass with the point of the Bayonet at every expense of Blood, untill Gen'l Irvine, with the 2d & Colonel Humpton, with the first Brigades, would arive to support them, so that there ought not to be any difficulty in giving up a small object for one that was capital. Indeed, had the artillery been of sufficient callibore the brave officers & men who conducted them would have suceeded in the reduction of the Block House by a constant fire of more than one hour, within the medium distance of 60 yards, & not be under the disagreeable sensation of leaving a post unreduced behind them, this being too trifling an affair to attend to any longer, when a more ample & glorious prospect was before us. But in this we have been disappointed, as the enemy prudently chose to remain in a less hostile position than that of the Jersey Shore. The General cannot attempt to discriminate between officers, Regts, or Corps, who, with equal appertunities, would have acted with equal fortitude, and he fondly hopes that the day is not far distant when the prowess of those troops will be acknowledged by the European & American World. Having effected a main part of our plan by carrying off the Cattle & Horses, the Gen'l calls on the officers indiscriminately to an immediate means to collect & deliver all the Horses & Cattle bro^t off from that country to the Q. M. of each Brigade, who are to deliver them to Major Herrings, at the bridge near Zubriskies' Mill, he being appointed purchasing Com^y for that part of the country, for which they will take his rec^t. The sick & wounded who rode many of the Horses being arrived at camp, the Honor & reputation of the troops are concerned in an imedeate complyance. The artillery & Infantry will make out a return of amunition wanted to replace that which was expended; the arms & accoutrements of the kill'd & wounded to be delivered to the Conductor, who will put them in immedate repair. The Commanding officers of Reg^ts & Corps will attend to the discipline of the Troops.

GEN'L WAYNE'S ORDERS, July 26th, 1780.

Gen'l Wayne Pardans all the Crimanals latly Tried by a Gen'l Court Martial in the Brigad whereof Co^l Stuart was President, in full Confidance that the Solders thus Liberated will never again ocasion a Court to sit upon them from such crimes as they heave now been Pardaned for. karall, and the United States in General. 3dly, for Claiming Rank in the Third Pennª Regt upwards of 9 monts after he Informed the Comanding officer he would not again join it. The Court are of opinion with respect of Disobeaing orders, Exhibeted against Capt Riley that, althº he did not return to Camp agreeabel to the orders of Col. Craige, his setuation with respect to health excuses him of a breach of it, & the Do therefore aquit him of that Charge. With respect to the first Instance of unofficer and unGenteelman behavour in the 2d charge against Cap. Riley, it apears to the Court that Capt. Riley did inform his Comanding officer that he was fit for duty, when at the same time it apears by his aligations he did not Consider Himself in that situation, which conduct the consider unofficer lake & ungenteelman leake, and a breach of that part of artickle the 5th, Caption the 18th, of the artickls of war which respects Disorderly conduct. It also appears that Capt. Riley did not return to his duty for upwards of nine months after he declared to his Commanding officer he was fit for duty: but the situation of Capt. Riley's health, in their opinion, excuses him for not returning to it, and they do therefore acquit him of that Part of the charge. With respect to the 2nd Instance under the 2n charge, it does not appear to the court yt while Capt. Riley was absent from his Reg't, he apply'd himself to making money, as charged. They do therefore acquit him of unofficer & ungentleman like behaviour in this Instance. With respect to the 3rd Instance, in the 2nd charge, it does not appear to the Court that Capt. Riley's conduct was unofficer like or ungentleman like. The Court do Sentence Capt. Riley to be reprimanded in the orders of the Brigade to which he belongs.

The Comander in Chief approves the sentence of the Court, & orders it to be carried into execution.

After sitting some time, the old gentleman of the house came in, and appeared very happy to see his friends, but no appearance of any thing to eat as yet. Being very hungry, there were many severe hints given, but all in vain. At ye Genl. Court Martial, whereof Lt. Col. Willes is President, Col. Hazen was tried on ye following charges: Disobedience of orders and unmilitary conduct on ye march from Tapan to ye Liberty Pole, in halting ye Brigade under his command without any orders thereof from ye General Commanding ye Division, and thereby occationing a vacancy there half a mile in ye centre of ye left Collumn, & for unofficer like behaviour in falsely asserting he had such orders from Genl. Starks.

The Court are of opinion that on ye march from Tapan to ye Liberty Pole, Col. Hazen Halted ye Brigade under his Command, and occasioned a vacancy in ye center of the left column, but as it appeared to them y^{t} he had orders from the Genl Commanding the Division to halt, they Do, therefore, Honorably acquit him of disobedience of orders and unmilitary conduct in ye instance contained in ye charge.

The Court also unanimously acquit Col. Hazen of unofficer & ungentlemanlike behaviour in asserting he had orders from Genl. Starks to halt, which the charge says he had not.

The Commander in Chief approves ye sentence, but as it appears to heave been a matter of question, whether Brigadier or officer Commanding a Brigade in ye line of march, has a Descrationary Power to order halt, the General thinks it necessary to declare y^{t} it is highly improper for him to do so, but in case of extream necessity where the halt or cause of it should be immediately reported to ye officer Commd'g the Division, who is at ye same moment to inform ye Genl. or Commanding officer of ye Column, that he may take measures accordingly, to prevent a separation of the Column & the bad consequence y^{t} may result their bad form. It is nevertheless ye duty of a Brigadier Officer Commd'g a Brigade, if he find his men fatigued, suffering for want of watter, or in need of a halt from any other good reasons, to meak immediate report thereof to the officer under whose Command he is immediately is y^{t} the knowledge of it may be communicated to the officer Commanding the Column.

Commands, & indeed, upon almost every occation, he wishes to impress into ye minds of Both officers & men, y^t it is not Clearly the duty, But that it ought to be ye pride of a soldier to be always Clane, & that it is not only Condusef to health, But will ever Comm^d the respect and admiration of all ranks of sitisences & insure the love & esteeme of their officers & fellow soldiers. The Genl., therefore, in the most pointed Manner, Calls on ye non-Commission^d officers & privates to appeare every other Day in a Clane p^r of overalls, & the other part of their Linen as frequent as Circumstances will admit. In a respect to the 5th Charge, the Court are of oppinion that no exartion on the part of Mr Jackson was wanting in procuring provision, but that he wanted a proper exertion in precureing the articel of Rum. In a respect to the 7th Charge, the Court are of oppinion yt Mr Jackson did prevent Mr Childe from purchasing Rum for the Troops in & about Coos, but are Clearly of oppinion that his seling his publick Rum was not only justiflabel but necesssary, & that the profits therefore arising there from, where not Converted to his owne emoluments, but to ye use & much to ye advantage of ye publick; but, for want of a proper exartion in precureing the articel of Rum, the Court are of oppinion that he Receives a Reprem^d from the Commander in Chief in Genl. orders. The Gen'l. has the pleasure to Congratulate the army on an important advantage lately obtained in North Carolina over a Corps of 1,400 men, British troops, & new levies Commd^d by Col. Farguson. The militia of the Nabouring Country, under Col. Shilby & others, having assembled to ye amount of 3,000 men, Detached 1,600 of their number on horseback to fall in with Farguson's party on its march to Charlot; the Came up with them at a place Called King's mountain, advantagiously posted, & gave them a total Defate, in which Col. Farguson & 150 of his men were kiled & 800 made prisoners, & 1,500 stand of arms were taken. On our part ye loss was inconsiderabel, wee have only to regreat yt Brave Col. Williams was mortaly wounded. This advantage in all probability will have a happy influence upon the successive opperation in that quarter; it is proof of the spirit and resorces of the Country.

y^t their exchange shall be posponded while there is one officer remaining in Captivity of their rank. He again repeats this in the most solem terms, with his further Decleration that when they are exchanged, they shall be arested & a full investigation had into ye sircomstances of their Capture. The Genl. Means this as a Caussion to ye army—not as a reflection upon the present Conduct of Col. Ogden, who, he has reason to believe, was in the execution of business by proper athority. He is yet uninformed of the reason of Capt. Deatton Being at Elizabeth town.

It is with infenit regret ye Genl. is obledged once more to take notis of the Disorderly Conduct of the Soldiers, arising, in a great measure, from ye abuse of passes. The whole Country is over spread with stragling soldiers, with the most frevelus pretences, under which they Commit every specious of Robry & plunder. As nothing adds more to ye buty and appearence of a Corps than an exact uniform of Dress, the Genl. recommends it thus early to ye field officers newly aringed, to fix upon a fassion for the Regimental Clothing of their Corps, if is not already Don, Confineing themselves to the ground, faceing, Linings, & buttens alredy asigned to ye States to which they belong. The Genl. sees, with Concern, the Deficulties the Officers Labours under In procuring Cloths; it is not, therefore, his wish that thos who were alredy furnished should recur themselves to ye expense of new uniform, if their old are not Comformable, but yt they should in future Comply strictly with ye Regemental fashion, &, if possible, get their old Cloths altered to it. It has a very odd appearence, especial to furiners, to see the same Corps of Officers each Differing from the other in ye fashion of ye sleves & pockets of their Coats. An attention to these matters has been thought necessary & proper in all servises, it becomes perticularly so in Ours at this time, as wee shall more than probebel take ye field next Campagn in Junction of our allis, Composing of ye 1st troops in Europe, who will receive impression & form oppinions from ye 1st view. DIARY OF THE REVOLT

PENNSYLVANIA LINE.

Digitized by Google

[Any History of the Pennsylvania Line of the Revolution would be incomplete without some account of the Revolt therein during the month of January, 1781; and we present such letters, documents, extracts from journals, etc., relating to that affair which will present the transaction in its proper light. Incidentally the subject has been alluded to, and the data herewith given supplements what has been said. The daily journal is from the Diary of Capt. Joseph McClellan of the Ninth Penna.—EDITORS.]

DIARY OF THE REVOLT.

JANUARY 1, 1781. A fine morning. The General and field officers of the Line met to settle the arrangement. The day spent in quietness. About 8 o'clock in the night a number of men in the 11th Regiment began to huzza and continued some time, but it was generally thought it only proceeded from the men drinking, as they had drawn half a pint of liquor this day. A number of the officers collected in order to quiet the men, which was done in a great measure. But in a short time a disturbance began on the right of the division, by the men parading with their arms, and firing some scattering shots, which soon became general through the division, notwithstanding every endeavor used by the officers. The men at length seized upon the artillery and began to drag them off on the road. During this time Captain Bitting was shot through the body and soon died. Captain Tolbert was badly wounded. Several shots were fired from the artillery as they kept them moving, the men in general by this time being in arms, huzzaing, and firing their pieces in the air. The 9th & 5th regiments were kept in their parades until they were threatened by others, if they did not move off they would turn the artillery on them, several Shots being fired over their heads. At length the greater part of them mixed in with the other regiments, and kept the road by Gen. Wayne's quarters. A number returned that night, collected more men, and, indeed, forced near one half the Line away. Their first half was at Vealtown, four miles from camp, and they continued there until they collected most of the Line.

Jany. 2. The men continued going off in small parties, headed by a sergeant, and drove off near 100 head of cattle. The men continued their march towards Princeton. The General, Cols. Butler and Stewart continued with them; the remainder of the officers in camp.

Gen. Wayne to the Troops.

*MOUNT KEMBLE, 2nd January, 1781.

Agreeably to the proposition of a very large proportion of the worthy soldiery last evening, General Wayne hereby desires the non-commissioned officers and privates to appoint one man from each regiment, to represent their grievances to the General—who on the sacred honour of a gentleman and a soldier, does hereby solemnly promise, to exert every power to obtain immediate redress of those grievances; And he further plights that honour, that no man shall receive the least injury, on account of the part they have taken on the occasion. And that the persons of those who may be appointed to settle the affair shall be held sacred and inviolate.

The General hopes soon to return to camp with all his brother soldiers, who took a little tour last evening.

ANTHONY WAYNE,
Brig. Gen.

A copy.
W. STEWART, Col.

Jan'y 3.—Small parties of men still continued collecting and marching off. About 8 o'clock in the evening the officers received orders from Gen. Wayne to press horses and arm themselves and push on for †Rocky Hill. About 9 o'clock at night the officers mounted horses and moved on to Boundbrook, in a body, armed.

In pursuance of Gen. Wayne's orders of 2nd, a Sergeant from each regiment met General Wayne, Colonels Butler (Richard) and Stewart (Walter) and mentioned the following grievances:

1. Many men continued in the service, after the expiration of the enlistment.

2. The arrearages of pay, and the depreciation not yet made up; and the soldiers suffering every privation for want of money and clothing.

3. That it is very hurtful to the feelings of the soldiery to be prevented from disposing of their depreciation certificates as they please, without consulting any person on the occasion.

It is agreed on the part of the General and Colonels that one disinterested sergeant or private from each regiment shall, with the commanding officer of the corps, when an enlistment is disputed, determine in the case.

A sergeant from each regiment to be appointed to carry an address to Congress, backed by the general and field officers.

January 4. Set out from Boundbrook, and halted at Cranbury until evening. Moved from this place and halted at Allentown at seven o'clock at night. The soldiery by this time were in Princeton, (the officers circled around the left of the soldiery east and south of Princeton to Allentown, which is about twelve miles south easterly from Princeton.)

Propositions, January 4, 1781, delivered to General Wayne.

Proposals from the committee of Sergeants now representing the Pennsylvania Line, artillery, &c.

ARTICLE 1. That all and such men as were enlisted in the year '76 or '77 and received the bounty of 20 dollars, shall be without any delay discharged; and all arrears of pay and depreciation of pay be paid to the said men, without any fraud, clothing included.

ARTICLE 2. Such men as were enlisted since the year '77 and received the $120 dollars bounty, or any more additions, shall be entitled to their discharge at the expiration of three years from the said enlistment, and their full depreciation of pay, and all arrears of clothing.

ARTICLE 3. That all such men as belong to the different regiments as are enlisted of late for the war, that they receive the remainder of their bounty and pay and all arrears of clothing. That they shall return to their respective corps and do their duty as formerly, and no aspersion be cast and no grievances to be repeated to the said men.

ARTICLE. 4. Those soldiers that are enlisted and receive their discharge and all arrearages of pay and clothing, shall not be compelled to stay by any former officers commanding any longer time than what is agreeable to their own pleasure and disposition. Of those that do remain for a small time as volunteers, that they shall be at their own disposal and pleasure.

ARTICLE. 5. As we now depend and rely upon you, Gen. Wayne, for to represent and repeat our grievances, we do agree, in conjunction, from this date, January 4, in six days for to complete and settle every such demand as the above five articles mention.

ARTICLE 6. That the whole line are actually agreed and determined to support these above articles in every particular.

Reply of Gen. Wayne.

PRINCETON, January 4, 1781.

Gen'l Wayne having maturely considered the foregoing proposals and articles presented to him by the sergeants, in behalf of themselves, the artillery and privates of the Pennsylvania Line, thinks proper to return the following answer:

That all such non-commissioned officers and soldiers as are justly entitled to their discharges shall be immediately settled with, their accounts properly adjusted, and certificates for their pay and arrearages of pay and clothing given them, agreeable to the resolution of Congress and the late act* of the Honorable Assembly of Pennsylvania, for making up the depreciation, and be discharged from the service of the United States.

That all such non-commissioned officers and privates belonging to the respective regiments, artillery or infantry, as are not entitled to their discharge, shall also be settled with, and certificates given them for their pay, depreciation, and clothing, in like manner as those before mentioned, which certificates are to be redeemable at as short period, as the nature of the case admits; to be paid in hard cash or an equivalent in Continental money of these States, and be immediately furnished with comfortable warm clothing, they returning to their duty as worthy faithful soldiers.

These propositions are founded on principles of justice and honour, between the United States and the soldiery, which is all that reasonable men can expect, or that a general can promise consistent with his station and duty, and the mutual benefit of their country and the line which he has so long the honor of commanding. If the soldiers are determined not to leave reason and justice govern on this occasion, he has only to lament the total and unfortunate situation to which they will reduce themselves and their country.

ANTHONY WAYNE,
Commanding Pennsylvania Line.

The Sergeants to General Wayne.

SIR: We would be glad you would inform us who these men are that you mean, that are entitled to their discharges. As we jointly think that you don't deem the men enlisted with the bounty of twenty dollars to be entitled to their discharges; therefore, sir, be punctual what you say, and do as we reasonably think our due.

* See McKean's laws, page 410, et seq.

WM. BOUZAR.
Serg^t.

Gen. Wayne to the Sergeants.

PRINCETON, January 4, 1781.

The question asked me by the committee of sergeants is one of such important consequence, and on which so great a variety of opinions are given, and your not choosing to leave it to the decision of a committee of yourselves and the Colonel of the regiment, where any dispute might arise (agreeably to the propositions of yesterday,) I cannot think myself fully empowered to decide upon the occasion, but will immediately send off an express to the Governor and Council of the State of Pennsylvania, and desire a committee of that body to meet the Line at Trenton, or elsewhere, who with myself and Colonels Butler and Stewart, will give you a full and explicit answer.

Gen. Wayne afterwards received the undermentioned note:

SIR: As we now are upon a principle of honour, justice and right, we are now as well situated to receive any gentlemen of rank at this post, as if we were to march any further, and therefore I would not have you think that we cannot settle these matters, by such a formidable body of men, as we are; therefore should be glad you would be explicit in your expresses, or otherwise we must take some measures that will procure our own happiness.

To the above note General Wayne, Colonels Butler and Stewart would not reply.

W. STEWART, Col.

PRINCETON, 4th January, 1781.

DEAR SIR: The unhappy defection of our Line you must have been made acquainted with by General Potter and Colonel Johnston. Major Charles Stewart will present you with some propositions on the part of the troops together with our answer. He will also be able to give you an idea of our situation and their temper.

Enclosed are copies of a very serious question and our reply. You will, therefore, please to appoint one or more of the Council to meet us at this place with all possible dispatch, and with full powers to them and us to treat on this subject, and inform us what prospects you have of furnishing an immediate supply of clothing and cash, which will be indispensably necessary to ensure success.

We shall not attempt to express our feelings on this unfortunate occasion, your own will be the best criterion to judge them by. We have yet some glimmering of hope from the enclosed copy of a letter giving intelligence of the enemy's intended manoeuvres, as the troops assured us they will act with desperation against them. Whether this be their sentiments or not, a few hours will probably determine. Be that as it may, and should the worst events take place, we trust that we shall produce a conviction to the world that we deserved a better fate.

We have the honor to be, with sincere esteem your Excellency's most obedient humble servants.

ANTH'Y WAYNE,
RICHARD BUTLER,
WALTER STEWART.

Col. Moylan to the President of the State.

PRINCETON, Jan. 4, 1781.

DEAR SIR: I joined General Wayne this day in order to give any assistance that may be in my power, as the enemy will, in all probability, come out. If the Line act as they say they will, I shall then be of some service. Should your Excellency think it would be my duty to join my regiment or stay to see the end of this affair, let me know by the bearer.

I have the honor to be, dear sir,

STEPHEN MOYLAN.

His Excellency, the President of the State.

Gen. St. Clair to the President of the State.

TRENTON, January 4, 1781.

SIR: The Marquis and myself, with several other officers, arrived at this place about three o'clock. The mutineers, consisting nearly of the whole Pennsylvania Line and the regiment of artillery, are at Princeton, where they arrived last night, and this day has been spent in negotiation between them and Gen. Wayne, Col. Richard Butler, and Col. Stewart, and I have the honor to enclose you a copy of the terms proposed by them, with Genl. Wayne's answer. These are the only officers they allow to have any communication with them or to pass within their posts, which are, I am told, well chosen, and the guards very regularly mounted, and a committee of sergeants manages their business. You will see how extravagant their proposals are and General Wayne has gone as far as he well could do in compliance with them. They have as yet done very little injury to the inhabitants, and profess, that they do not mean any; but they begin to talk of their neighborhood to New York, which makes it justly feared that there are among them some emissaries of the enemy. This circumstance induces Governor Livingston to think that it would be prudent, in case they persist, to suffer them to pass the Delaware, as it then would be out of their power to go to the enemy, and if force should be necessary, a part of the militia of this State might be thrown over to cooperate with those of Pennsylvania in their reduction. No definite resolution is, however, taken upon that head, but it is necessary that your Excellency should be apprised that it is in contemplation, that the proper measures may be concerted in case of necessity. We propose to go to Maidenhead to-night, to be able to get them early to-morrow, before they have opportunity to intoxicate themselves; and your Excellency shall have the earliest notice of what may happen or of anything that may occur to-night that comes to our knowledge.

I have the honor to be, sir,

Your most obt. humble servant,

AR. ST. CLAIR.

The Chief Justice of the State, and some members of the Legislature went up to-day to expostulate with them, but were not permitted. An express has this moment arrived, and they have refused Genl. Wayne's terms, and propose to march tomorrow. His Excellency, JOSEPH REED, ESQ., President of the State of Pennsylania.

Every preparation is making among them to come out to make a descent on Jersey; I think South Amboy is their object. They expect those in mutiny will immediately join them. A person on whom I can rely, told me that Captain Lord was ordered to have all the flat-bottomed boats ready upon the shortest notice. If they come out, it will be with considerable force, and may be expected within twenty-four hours from this time.

Sir, I am with great personal respect,

P. S. DEAR GENERAL: I have had the above person present and examined him; therefore, you may rely on the above intelligence. Lieut. Col.

HD. QRS., ELIZABETHTOWN, Jan. 4, 1781.

MEMORANDUM.—There lays in the mouth of Raritan, a sloop of war, supposed to be 16 or 20 guns, a sloop thought her tender, a Virginia schooner, a galley, and about 12 or 15 flat-bottom boats. A schooner and brigantine, under sail, making for the fleet from N. York. The above vessels are on a line from C——— ———to Billop's point.

From the best accounts I can get, the view of the enemy is to cover the embarkation of the rioters in case they should take a turn towards the line. You may depend on it, that Perth Amboy will be their route, and not South Amboy, as is conjectured. The country is open that way, and South Amboy is woody, and the embarkation difficult on account of the flats They cannot embark here but at particular times of tide, when they can at Perth Amboy at any time. I saw the agent yesterday, and from his discourse I think they have no other object than the revolters, and from the situation of the vessels, I think Amboy to be the place.

Jan'y 5. Set out from Allentown at 11 o'clock, and halted at Trenton; Dined and set out in the evening for Pennington. The soldiery continued at Princeton.

President Reed to ——

BRISTOL, January 5, 1781.

DEAR SIR: I was met here by the light-horse returning. As they brought me only a verbal message, Mr. Donaldson will be able to give it you with more exactness than I can at second hand. They left Princeton at 4 o'clock this afternoon; the mutineers seem undetermined, and I hope are beginning to divide, as their board of officers or sergeants is large and of course there will be a variety of sentiments. They behave well to the people of the country, and hitherto have committed no excesses. They permitted General St. Clair and the Marquis to come among them, but afterwards ordered them to leave the place at a short warning.* They say they will march against the enemy under the command of Gen'l Wayne, Cols. Butler & Stewart, but will not have their other officers. This is a bad symptom. I met a sergeant and one or two others on the road who gave out that they are going to town to prevent the bad report of their abusing people, &c. Col. Nicola should be directed to have an eye on these fellows as they come into town, lest they infest the invalids and spread bad reports among the militia; but by no means to use them ill, lest it have a bad effect on their fellows in Jersey.

If the enemy advance, I shall endeavour to draw them this way, rather choosing to take the chance of any bad consequences here than going to the enemy. If they take their officers back generally, I shall think they mean fairly. If they do not, I do not think their professions ought to be regarded. I send enclosed a letter from Mr. Stewart. I think it will be best to send provisions on, but not to unlade it out of the shallop without orders. In the meantime, let the clothing be forwarded, and the money prepared. At all events I fear we must make some douceurs in some way or another. I write this in a hurry, and shall write again to-morrow from Trenton. They altered their plans this morning. The sergeants use every effort to keep at Princeton, by way of keeping together.

I am, in haste, dear sir,

Your obedient, humble servant,

JOS. REED.

TRENTON, FRIDAY AFTERNOON, Jan^y 5, 1781.

SIR: I wrote you by express last night* it was likely when I left Princeton yesterday that the troops of the Pennsylvania Line would be here to-day. This afternoon am told they will not come from Princeton before their business be settled. Am told General St. Clair and the Marquis rode towards Brunswick on hearing the British are landed at Elizabeth. I fear this is true, yet am not certain. Mr. Donaldson can tell you, perhaps more of it. At this rate we shall soon want beef. Your militia, and those of Jersey, must be fed, and so must those tumultous troops. I beg, if in your power, you would order on some cattle.

I am your most obedient servant,

CHAS. STEWART.

DEAR SIR: I set out from this place yesterday about 11 o'clock, and proceeded immediately to New York, and arrived at that place about 5 o'clock, P. M. I again left it about half after eleven o'clock at night. During my stay there, I took particular care to get the best intelligence I possibly could collect, both from my own observation and our friends. I never saw the British exert themselves so much in all my life. Notwithstanding the rain which poured down like torrents, they did not slacken their proceedings. They were constantly employed in embarking on board vessels of about 60 or 70 tons burden, and smaller, on board of which there goes 4 or 5,000 troops. Their destination is for Amboy. I think they will be there to-day or to-night—they are in great hopes that the Pennsylvania Line will join them, in consequence of which they will use every measure in their power to get them to repair to their standard. They take with them twenty pieces of cannon, 18 of which are heavy, 54 engineers, carpenters go with them.

I am with great respect,

A STRANGER.

COL. DAYTON.

P. S.—I am almost tired to death, or I would set out again immediately—been two nights without sleep, and last night so wet that I had not a dry thread on me.

HEAD QUARTERS, ELIZABETHTOWN,
January 5, 1781, 6 o'clock, P. M.

DEAR GOVERNOR: I have this moment received intelligence by one who may be depended on, that the enemy have this day gone down from New York to Prince's Bay, with their flat-bottomed boats, got there about 2 o'clock, and their armed vessels was coming down also. The whole of the troop has marching orders on Staten Island, to have 2 pair of stockings, 2 shirts and blankets, with three days' provision. A few Hessians and part of Barton's corps is to be left. The whole supposed to go to land at South Amboy, tho' some conjecture they will land lower down the shore. The enemy is much rejoiced at the unhappy news we have in the Pennsylvania camp; they have received intelligence this morning, on the Island, by a man who went over from Woodbridge, that the new commandant of the Pennsylvania Line would join them if he could have an opportunity. This affair has stopped the last fleet's proceedings.

This from your friend and humble servant,

MOSES JACQUES,
Col. Commandant.

President Reed to the Committee of Congress.

[N. B.—This letter was designed for the committee, but as they came over the river, I send it to you to save repetition.]

TRENTON, 3 o'clock, *Jan*y 6, 1781.

GENTLEMEN: Neither time or the limits of a letter will permit my entering into a particular detail of the intelligence received from Princeton. In substance it is that the mutineers, though acting by system, have divisions among themselves, and such suspicions of each other as may soon lay a foundation of proper reconciliation. I am surprised to find that they entertained strong aversion to many of their former officers, and the tales they tell of severities and unobserved promises have had a great effect on the minds of the people of the State, so that a vigorous resistance by the militia is doubtful, at least till provoked by outrage on their property or by the troops advancing to unreasonable propositions which they seem likely to do. I beg leave to communicate, in a few words, my present idea, viz: to hear their complaints, to promise redress to reasonable ones—to repel firmly those of the contrary kind, unless the approach of the enemy should change the face of affairs: and to get the several different claimants to advance their separate claims by separate agents. As to clothing and what are the real necessaries of a soldier, I shall engage liberally, because these they must have to do their duty—to engage them to admit the old officers to take command, if possible, and make no exceptions of pardon, but to the murderers of the deceased officers. It is my present opinion (but this I would not have influential on the committee, contrary to their own judgment), that the negotiation should be first tried on the part of the State, and if new or further concessions than I make are necessary, the committee may have the opportunity to offer them, fully confiding in the wisdom and policy of the committee on such an unhappy occasion, that they will not authorize bad examples on other lines, for I trust the liberties of America do not depend on the caprice of any State.

The enemy are not yet out—that circumstance will change the face of things exceedingly—especially as the troops occasionally turn their eyes to N. York. I shall let the committee know what is the result of the afternoon's conference. I mean to go within four miles of Princeton this afternoon, where I have written Gen. Wayne to meet me, and to inform the troops that I am ready to hear any reasonable complaints decently offered. I shall direct my letters to Mr. Barclay, till I am otherwise requested, and am, gentlemen,

Very Respectfully,

TRENTON, Jan. 6, 1781, past 11 o'clock at night.

DEAR SIR: The enclosed letter to the committee of Congress, which was made unnecessary by their arrival at this place, will inform you of my proceedings, till 12 o'clock. I forwarded my letter to Gen. Wayne requesting him to meet me four miles from Princeton, at 4 o'clock this afternoon, and also to let the troops know I should be there to receive any propositions from them, and redress any injuries they had sustained, but that after the indignities offered the Marquis and Gen. St. Clair, I could not put myself in their power. The light horse who carried the letter were civilly treated by the board of Sergeants, and permitted to deliver their letter to Gen. Wayne, whom they soon after sent for; but he refused attending them, upon which they went to him, seemed affected by the letter which was more calculated for them than for Gen. Wayne. They requested it, and promised they would make the contents known to the men but this they did not do, whether for want of time(Gen Wayne having limited the return of it to him in half an hour) or any other cause is not known. However, the men heard of it, and expressed a desire to hear it; but the evening advancing, and Gen. Wayne claiming a right to read it himself, it was agreed to meet early in the morning on the parade and Gen. Wayne to attend for that purpose. Everybody agrees there has been a great change to-day, and that they are more and more divided, which is natural after a few days' enjoyment of new and unexpected power. They permitted the horsemen to return, and expressed great anxiety to know whether I entertained any unkind sentiments. Some of the sergeants and men took pains to inform the gentlemen privately that they were not fond of the business. In short a number of favorable symptoms turned up, that I should have had great hopes, if unfortunately the enemy had not made a movement, of the effects and consequences of which I am now very doubtful. The enclosed papers will convey the whole of our intelligence on that subject, and it is, indeed, alarming; for the troops still profess a good disposition against the enemy. They utterly reject their former officers, except a very few; but propose to act under sergeants, as officers. There are no signs of British gold or of British emissaries, except a few sergeants, who have been imprudently raised from the ranks to that office. These fellows, doubtless, will do all the mischief they can, but a great majority are certainly well inclined to the country. I hope by Gen. Wayne's promise to meet to-morrow, that he is at his own liberty, but he has met with some mortifying slights. This incursion of the enemy will induce me (to) get them down here if possible, and the same reason will induce me to take them over the river if there is the least prospect of the enemy advancing; as I consider their joining the enemy as a very, indeed, a most deplorable event, to be guarded against at the risque of every other consequence. They behave remarkably well at their quarters, but either refuse admission to all their officers, or immediately dismiss them, except Gen. Wayne and the two Colonels, who do not know whether they are prisoners or not. As the time and circumstance did not admit my proceeding in the business this evening, I returned here, but shall go up in the morning, either to get them to march hither or to meet their complaints at some short distance from their guards, for it seems to be a universal opinion, that it is not prudent for me to go within their camp, and my own concur, in the present situation of things, though they take it hard I do not trust them. Everything necessary for the equipment of a soldier, that is, shirts, shoes, overalls, hats, &c., I shall promise liberally, and in the meantime, I beg you would collect by some means or other. By an enclosed note you will see they lay great stress upon it. I am told, some of them are very shabby. For this purpose, I have sent down Mr. Turnbull. It is really a most necessary business at present and must be attended to accordingly. To-morrow will be an important day, and if you do not hear from me by 8 o'clock Monday morning, you may conclude things are going right. If (as I doubt not) the enemy really land and advance, the militia must be called unless a perverse spirit should appear, of which the officers will judge. If I cannot get these troops to go back or propose terms, I shall, I believe, go round them and try what effect joining the Jersey militia will have. After the Pennsylvania Line has brought the enemy into this state, it would be unpardonable in us not to do everything in our power for their protection.

You will please to communicate to the President of Congress the whole or such parts of this letter as may be necessary. Having been on horseback all day, I flatter myself that my fatigue will be an excuse for not writing to him, and especially as it must be merely a repetition.

SIR: The Committee of Congress, being informed that the troops are about to march to Trenton this night, have concluded to remain at this place until they receive some intelligence from your Excellency. [Letter prepared for Genl. Wayne, but not sent, he meeting me on the road.]

TRENTON, Jan'y 7, 1781, 7 o'clock, A. M.

DEAR GENERAL: I received your favour of yesterday by Messrs. McClenachan and Nisbet, and finding from circumstances it was impracticable to see you last night, or any of the persons I expected, I returned to this place for the sake of accommodation. Upon considering our affairs, I have thought it advisable to get the troops to march to this place as soon as circumstances will admit. My reasons are these: First, the commissioners inform me the provisions are nearly exhausted, and the men have hitherto behaved so well to the inhabitants, that it would be a pity to drive the troops to the necessity of distressing them, when at this place they may be otherwise supplied. Secondly, they will find this town more convenient to receive the cloathing, which is prepared in Phila., and will come up by water. Thirdly, they will be near to Congress, to whom it may be necessary to apply in the course of the business, as the whole continental army will be affected by the measures which may be taken in consequence of this unhappy event. Fourthly, I am persuaded the Penn'a Line have the honour of the State too much at heart to request their President to attend them, when convenience and propriety will make it better on all other accounts they should come here, and in this case I should be able to be nearer to them than at present. I have received a letter from Mr. Bouzar, who signs as secretary, but does not say to whom; but as it is probable you can convey my sentiments to him, I would wish you to inform him and the persons with whom he acts in conjunction, that it is rather a regard to my own station which prevents my going into Princeton, than any distrust of them, either on the score of safety or good treatment. But as it is certain that however just their complaints may be, the power now assumed is in opposition to the authority of the country, it would, I fear, give offence to the people of the State if I should even pass their guards. To prevent any doubt on my part, I have only brought up a few of the Pennsylvania Light Horse, to serve as expresses and for intelligence; but far be it from me, in the last necessity, to ask their service against these our brethren—if they were a more effective force than they are. You know, my Dear General, that I have ever been a soldiers' friend, that I have used all my influence to procure them comforts of all kinds, and that they really have been more attended to than the troops of any other State, which I am sure they will acknowledge. If we have not done better, it is owing to a want of means. We hourly expect great supplies from Europe, which would make them easy on the score of clothing, and which I do not think they will ever want again. Tho' I must lament the unfortunate occasion, I shall, with great pleasure hearken to well-founded complaints, and concur in any reasonable plan to accommodate matters to general satisfaction.

I am, dear sir,

Your obedient, humble servant,

JOS. REED.

P. S. You will be so good as to communicate to the troops my desire that they would proceed to Trenton as soon as circumstances will admit.

President Reed to Gen'l Wayne.

[Prepared, but not sent, as Gen. Wayne came before it.]

DANIEL HUNT'S, January 7, 1780, (81.)

DEAR GENERAL: I received your letter last evening, giving our expectations of meeting you this day; but not hearing from you, I have sent again to know whether I may expect you, and when and whether any persons, on the part of the troops, will make known their complaints, which will most certainly be redressed on every reasonable point; and when any doubt arises, the construction to be in favor of the soldier. The proposals made by them on the 4th inst. seem to favor a reasonable ground of accommodation. The 4th article has been hastily drawn. Their own experience will convince them of the necessity of some alteration. It will be necessary also to distinguish those who have freely enlisted for the war, otherwise all contract is at an end, and where they are requesting an allowance for depreciation, agreeable to contract, they certainly will not vindicate a breach of contract. We will also agree upon some equitable mode of determining who are so enlisted, which may be done by three persons agreed for that purpose. But this will not exclude those from a gratuity proportioned to their services. They may depend upon every just and reasonable allowance, and I hope they have too much honour and spirit to tarnish their former good conduct by asking unreasonable things, or those which are impracticable. Their honorable and patriotic conduct this morning will ever be remembered and suitably rewarded, if nothing unfavorable to their country should happen. Should they refuse to serve their country at this time, it will be an eternal reproach to the State to which they belong, and to which they done so much honor by their bravery; and they must acknowledge that when they compare the conduct of the State to them with that of most other States, they have been better provided than others. Those who, after being discharged choose to reënlist, will be kindly received, but they will be at their liberty to do it or not. If they choose to engage again they will be allowed furlows to see their friends when the circumstances of the army will admit. The arrear of pay, depreciation, clothing, &c., I mentioned in my former letter. These will be taken care of immediately. Should they take any rash step after this, all the world will condemn them, and they will condemn themselves—for America will not be lost if they decline their assistance to save her.

Propositions sent to the Pennsylvania Line by General Clinton, Jan. 7, 1781.

It having been reported at New York that the Pennsylvania troops and others have been defrauded by Congress of their pay, clothing, and provisions, and assembled for a redress of their grievances, and also that notwithstanding the terms of their enlistments are expired, they have been forceably detained in the service where they have suffered every kind of misery and oppression, they are now offered to be taken under the protection of the British government to have their rights restored, a free pardon for all former offences, and that pay due to them from Congress faithfully paid to them, without any expectation of military service, except it may be voluntary, upon laying down their arms and returning to their allegiance, for if they will send commissioners to Amboy, they will there be met by people empowered to treat with them, and faith shall be pledged for their security.

It is recommended to them for their own safety to move behind South river, and whenever they request it, a body of British troops shall protect them. It is needless to point out the inability as well as want of inclination in Congress to relieve them, or to tell them the severities that will be used by the rebel leaders towards them.

Should they think of returning to their former servitude, it will be proved to the commisioners they choose to send that the authority from whence this comes is sufficient to insure the performance of the above proposals.

To the person appointed by the Pennsylvania Line to lead them in the present struggle for their liberty and rights.

D. HUNT'S, MAIDENHEAD,

have had the pleasure of meeting Gen. Wayne, Col. Stewart, and Col. Moylan, who have been permitted freely to come to me at this place and make such a report of the temper of the men as induces me to go among them. They express great anxiety for it, and requested the gentlemen, in case I consent to come, to let them know, that they might turn out the line and show all possible respect. These circumstances have changed my resolution of not trusting them, but I think they will warrant the risque. The consequences of their defection to the enemy are so great and alarming, that I think nothing ought be left unattempted to improve a good disposition. I have but one life, and my country has the first claim for it. I therefore go with the cheerfulness which attends performing a necessary, though not a pleasant duty. With my best regards to the gentlemen of the Council, and respectful compliments to the President of Congress, with whom I doubt not you communicate,

We doubt not your Excellency's improving so favorable a symptom to bring the matter to a speedy, safe, and honourable an issue as possible. The Committee of Congress to the Commanding Officer at Brunswick.

TRENTON, Jan. 7, 1781.

SIR: The Committee of Congress now at Trenton, have received authentic information that commissioners are sent to Amboy from New York, to treat with the Pennsylvania troops, (we suppose it is South Amboy that is meant, but it would be prudent to have both the Amboys in view). The committee are of opinion you should take such measures as appear most prudent and practicable to get possession of those commissioners.

sylvania, having heard the complaints of the soldiers, as represented by the Sergeants, inform them, that they are fully authorized to redress reasonable grievances, and they have the fullest disposition to make them as easily as possible; for which end they propose—

First. That no non-commissioned officer or soldier shall be detained beyond the time for which he freely and voluntarily engaged, but where they appear to have been in any respect compelled to enter or sign, such enlistment to be deemed void, and the soldier discharged.

Secondly. To settle who are and who are not bound to stay, three persons to be appointed by the President and the Council, who are to examine into the terms of enlistment. Where the original enlistments cannot be found, the soldier's oath to be admitted to prove the time and terms of enlistment, and the soldier to be discharged upon his oath of the condition of the enlistment.

Thirdly. Where ever any soldier has enlisted for three years or during the War, he is to be discharged, unless he shall appear afterwards to have reënlisted voluntarily and freely. The gratuity of one hundred dollars given by Congress not to be reckoned as a bounty, or any men detained in consequence of that gratuity. The commissioners to be appointed by the President and Council, to adjust any difficulties which may arise on this article also.

Fourthly. The auditors to attend as soon as possible, to settle the depreciation with the soldiers and give them certificates. Their arrearages of pay to be made up as soon as circumstances will admit.

Fifthly. A pair of shoes, overalls, and shirts will be delivered to each soldier in a few days, as they are already purchased and ready to be sent forward, whenever the Line shall be settled. Those who are discharged to receive the above articles at Trenton, producing the General's discharge.

The Governor hopes that no soldier of the Pennsylvania Line will break his bargain, or go from the contract made with the public—and they may depend upon it, that the utmost care will be taken to furnish them with every necessary fitting for a soldier.

The Governor will recommend to the State to take some favorable notice of those who engage for the war.

The commissioners will attend at Trenton, where the clothing and the stores will be immediately brought, and the regiments to be settled with in their order. A field officer of each regiment to attend during the settlement of his regiment.

Pursuant to General Wayne's orders of the 2d instant, no man Jany. 8. Pennington. Clear and cold. The soldiery continue in Princeton with General Wayne, endeavoring to settle matters, but to no effect.

President Reed to the Committee of Congress.

MAIDENHEAD, Jan. 8, 1781.

DEAR SIR: I wrote you yesterday by post, and soon after went into Princeton, where I was received by the troops with every mark of apparent respect. The guards turned out and the whole Line under arms. They offered a proposition amounting in its effects to discharging every man who is or should be tired of the service, let the terms of enlistment have been what they would. This I peremptorily refused, but offered to discharge all those who had been detained beyond the time of their enlistment, or have been compelled or trepanned into a new engagement. Secondly, that commissioners should be appointed by the Council to hear their cases and give discharges upon the above principle, taking the oath of a soldier when his enlistment cannot be found. Thirdly, the depreciation to be made up, arrearages of pay settled, and certificates given and comfortable clothing povided for them. Fourthly, a general pardon of all soldiers upon complying with these terms. The evening they sent an answer complying with them in substances, but proposing they should appoint commissioners on the part of the men, which I rejected, and directed them to march to-morrow morning to Trenton. What will be the issue I cannot tell, as there are many various claims; and though they preserve military order, they have great confusion in their civil matters. The Sergeants have as much difference of opinion as the men, though they know it is their interest to keep together and not be disorderly. Many were averse to my going in, but I am glad I did, as I can now form a better judgment of them. They made no objections to my returning the same evening. Besides the complaints formerly recited, they complain of being compelled to take new bounties and being severely treated when asking for discharges. They also complain of rigorous punishments inflicted without trial or inquiry, and that the State stores have not been equitably distributed, the proportion to officers being too great.

These things may deserve inquiry at another time. I endeavored to moderate and palliate what was said on these subjects. Some of the Serjeants are sensible fellows, and reason very speciously; but W———, their nominal leader, is certainly a very poor creature or very fond of liquor. They have rejected the propositions offered by Gen. Clinton and hold the spies in prison. I am endeavoring to get them out of their hands. Gen. Wayne promised fifty guineas apiece to the two serjeants who brought him the letter Sir Harry sent, and he is very particular in his inquiries when he shall be enabled to perform his promise. You will say it was a great reward. It was so, and, perhaps, the promise hasty; but still it will be best to comply with it. I do not learn that any of the money sent by Col. Nicola has yet been paid, but will inquire further. I fear there has been some neglect in this matter. I believe it will be proper to send the hard money returned by Gen. Potter to answer Gen. Wayne's promise. To morrow will settle the business one way or other. We have no accounts of the enemy since I wrote last.

I am in haste, Dr. Sir,

You obed. hnble serv't,

JO^s REED.

P. S.—I hope, if all reasonable propositions should be finally rejected, that the militia will turn out under some system, or volunteer, as I fear the troops will turn towards the enemy if an immediate settlement does not take place.

Gen. Wayne to President Reed.

PRINCETON, 8th Jan'y, 1781, 7 o'clock, P. M.

DEAR SIR: Being determiend to bring matters to a speedy issue at every risk and consequence, we sent for the sergeants at ½ after 4 o'clock this evening and insisted upon their marching for Trenton in the morning, or that we would leave them to act as they pleased, and to abide the fatal effects of their own folly.

In consequence of which they had come to a resolution of moving for that place in the morning, and bringing along the two caitiffs, previous to the receipt of your's by Mr. Caldwell.

I am, sir, y^r most obed. hhbl. serv^t,

HUNT'S, MAIDENHEAD,
January 8th, half-past two o'clock:

To the Hon. Committee of Congress, at Trenton:

GENTLEMEN: As you must have received my letter this morning, I need not repeat any of the transactions of yesterday. I have had no direct accounts from Princeton this morning; but, from the straggling soldiers and indirect intelligence I understand that my proposal has been generally acceptable, only they think it not quite explicit as to those who received one hundred and twenty dollars, which was a bounty given by Congress to those whose times were near expiring, and engaged again for the war. I understand they give up the twenty dollar men, and that it now seems agreed to march to Trenton to-morrow morning, if ordered, which I think will not be withheld under all the circumstances. I therefore hope that Mr Nelson and Mr. Stewart will make preparation. They drew rations yesterday for 2000 men, but they have not more than 1500; I doubt whether so many. A letter similar to the former, and wrapped up in sheet lead, was dropped this morning before the door where the sergeants met, which they delivered to General Wayne. They keep the spies of yesterday in close prison, but have not settled their fate. This opportunity offering, I thought it might be agreeable to the committee to know the intelligence of the day; in the afternoon I shall doubtless hear officially. I have dispatched three of the light horse toward Amboy for intelligence. At present we have no accounts of the enemy of any kind; but the weather is very favorable to such a movement.

I am, with much respect and esteem, gentlemen,
Your obedient, humble servant, &c.,
JOSEPH REED.

President Reed to the Committee of Congress.

HUNT'S AT MAIDENHEAD,
8th January, 7 o'clock, P. M.

To the Hon. the Committee of Congrees, Trenton:

GENTLEMEN: This evening I received the enclosed. The accounts from Princeton seem very vague and uncertain; but less favorable, as confusion in their claims, and want of all other order except military order, has taken place. From their conversation, there is little probability that they will agree to what their sergeants determine. I have written to General Wayne confirming their proposals of last evening, but rejecting that now made of the sergeants sitting with the commissioners. I have also, agreeably to your proposal, insisted upon the spies being delivered up. This I have mentioned as a requisition from you not choosing to add or alter the terms I offered. I have also, in addition, directed them to march to Trenton to-morrow morning. If they do neither, we must, however disagreeable, use force; for which the country must be prepared by showing that terms of a reasonable kind have been offered and refused. General Wayne has written to Congress, but I have directed the messenger to wait upon you. Gen'l Wayne's staying, in my opinion, is no longer of any benefit, but otherwise. He promised to come away this evening. What has prevented, I do not know; but they certainly take countenance and spirit from having him among them. I expect to have the honor of seeing the committee to-morrow, at all events; and am, most respectfully, gentlemen,

Your obedient, humble servant, &c.,

JOSEPH REED.

P. S.—I omitted to acknowledge the receipt of the committee's favor this afternoon, by Mr. Cray, the light-horseman.

HUNT'S, MAIDENHEAD,
4 MILES OF PRINCETON, January 8, 1781.

GENTLEMEN: I returned from Princeton so late last evening that it was out of my power to write as proposed, it being past midnight. Shall now inform you of the particulars of the day. Just before I set out from this yesterday, a sergeant and four men came for the two spies. As Colonel Butler and General Wayne had given their words to re-deliver them I was not at liberty to refuse, and more especially, as in the note they promised the men should be forthcoming at my order. Some gentlemen thought this so unfavorable a symptom that it ought to change the plan and prevent going in; but as I had sent them word I was coming, I did not choose to run the risk of disappointing them, and accordingly went into Princeton at 3 o'clock. The guards which are regularly posted, turned out and saluted us. Near the college I found the whole Line under arms and the artillery ready to discharge; but this was prevented lest the country should be alarmed. We passed in the front, the sergeants having the places of their officers respectively, and saluting. I did not think it prudent to refuse them the usual attention, though much against my inclination. Soon after I dismounted a number of the sergeants came, under a pretence of knowing when they should wait on us, but really, as we were informed, to ascertain my identity; for so amazingly suspicious were they, that nothing but some sergeants who had personal knowledge declaring their satisfaction, would convince a great number of the soldiery.

This ceremony being over, and an hour fixed to hear them, we got what intelligence we could of the inhabitants, but in a few minutes Sergeant Williams returned with several others, bringing the two spies, whom they had paraded through the Lines. General Wayne and some others strongly urged them to execute them by their own authority, or that the board would request him to sign the warrant; but I was sorry to observe, especially in Williams, an aversion to this, and a strong desire to discharge them, with a taunting message to Sir Harry Clinton. Finding General Wayne not likely to succeed, I proposed a middle way, viz: to keep them under close guard till we should consider further; and claimed their promise of subjecting them to my order. They took them away undetermined: and there were great debates at the board—the result of which was, that my advice should take place, and they were accordingly put under guard till further orders. The sergeants in this, as in most other cases, are like the men, much divided in sentiment; some proposing one thing, and some another, and agreeing only in those points of common interest, arising from their danger—such as keeping in a body, and being regular and chaste in their conduct. Some of the sergeants utterly disapproved the executing them, as it would cut off all benefit of that influence which might be used to advantage in making terms; some were more open on that subject. I fear they will dismiss them to-day, or connive at their escape, though we have taken such measures as I trust will hasten their journey to a different place than New York. In the evening they came, and presented me the single proposition enclosed; after which a long conference ensued in which some of the sergeants spoke with a degree of intelligence and good sense that really surprised me, and stated some real hardships they had suffered, which I fear have too much foundation. I cannot but think some undue methods have been taken to engage many in the service. I therefore took up that ground of justice which appeared most likely to serve the country, and conciliate them, viz: that all those whose times were expired, and who had not freely entered again knowing the duration of the service, should be discharged; holding firm the principle that where a man has taken a bounty for the war freely and voluntarily, he ought not to be discharged. This occasioned much debate, one of the sergeants arguing, with no small specious-ness, that there was at that time, viz: (1776 and 1777) no resolve of Congress to enlist during the war; but an idea of temporary enlistments, which so generally prevailed that they ought not to be held to the letter of their enlistments, but to the spirit and generally prevailing idea of Congress and the country. After some time we brought them to acknowledge that the principle contended for by the twenty dollar men was not just, but they expressed much doubt of convincing the men. Finding the evening to pass away rapidly, and unwilling to part without some plan, I wrote the enclosed. If it does not take effect, I fear we shall be obliged, on some principle, or perhaps no principle, to dismiss them; but I shall endeavor to have this done at Trenton. I am glad to find so little reason to think that they have prejudices with respect to Congress; their prejudices are most certainly against their officers, and they look to Congress and the State for redress and help. There is, therefore, no occasion for the committee to take any other quarters than are convenient and suitable to their rank, as I should not advise trusting themselves within a guard of mutineers. I would wish the same of the committee, on the discharging the twenty dollar men voluntarily enlisted; this will affect all other soldiers and future enlistments. Upon the whole, I think the terms I have offered reasonable; if they are refused, or if the men refuse to march to Trenton, it must be evident that they do not mean sincerely, and I should hope the militia of Jersey might be brought to act against them. If a proclamation in the name of Congress or the State reciting the terms offered, was drawn up, and a number printed, we might dispose them among the men, as we have reason to think the sergeants do not always communicate freely. Williams is either very ignorant and illiterate, or was drunk yesterday, as he showed no talents to conduct such an enterprise. The proclamation might contain some reasonable advice, and I think a little spirit would do no harm. If they offer to move eastward I shall throw myself between them and the enemy with what force can be mustered.

I am gentlemen, very respectfully,

JOSEPH REED.

His Excellency Jo^s REED, Esqr.

Propositions from the Sergeants.

His Excellency's proposals being communicated to the different regiments at troop beating this morning, Jan. 8, 1781.

They do voluntarily agree, in conjunction, that all soldiers that were enlisted for the term of three years or during the war, excepting those whose terms of enlistments are not expired, ought to be discharged immediately, with as little delay as circumstances will allow, except such soldiers who have volun tarily reënlisted. In case that any soldier should dispute his enlistment, it is to be settled by a committee and the soldiers oath. The remainder of his Excellency's and the Honbl. Board of Committee's proposal is founded upon honour and justice; but in regard to the Hon'ble Board setting forth that there will be appointed three persons to sit as a committee to redress our grievances, it is, therefore, the general demand of the Line and the Board of Sergeants that we shall appoint as many members as of the opposite to sit as a committee to determine justly upon our unhappy affairs, as the path we tread is justice and our foot steps founded upon honor. Therefore, we unanimously do agree that there should be something done towards a speedy redress of our present circumstances.

Signed by order of the Board.

Wm BOUZAR,
Sec'y.

President Reed to Gen. Wayne.

DEAR SIR: I received your favor this evening, and also the proposals signed by Serjeant Bouzar, which, as they contained in substance what was offered last evening, shall be granted, except that appointing persons to sit with those nominated to sit with the honorable, the council, cannot be complied with. This implies such a distrust of the authority of the State, which has ever been attentive to the wants of the army, that the impropriety of it must be evident; but any soldier will have liberty to bring before the commissioners any person as his friend to represent his case. The Hon. the Committee of Congress have resolved that the spies sent out should be delivered up as soon as convenient, and upon that being done, Congress will proclaim a general oblivion of all matters since the 31st December, provided the terms offered last evening are closed with, and the troops remain no longer in their present state. It is my clear opinion that they should march in the morning to Trenton, where the stores are, their clothing expected, if not by this time arrived, by which I mean overalls and some blankets. I hope they will come to a speedy determination.

And am, dear sir,

Your obed. hble serv't,

JOS. REED.

Jan. 8, 1781.

P. S. As I have the promise of the Board of Serjeants in writing that the emissaries from the British shall be forthcoming to me, I doubt not they will honorably perform it, and therefore expect an answer from them on this point.

SIR: The Committee of Congress, not having heard from your Excellency since yesterday noon, dispatches an express to obtain intelligence where you are, and what success you have had. P. S.—It is the desire of the committee that you make use of the foregoing resolutions only as you shall find them necessary to answer the purpose in view.

Propositions of the Committee of Congress.

IN COMMITTEE OF CONGRESS, AT TRENTON:

The 8th day of January, 1781.

Resolved, That all soldiers who have voluntarily enlisted for the war, or have received the hundred dollar bounty ordered by Congress, shall be held during the war, and entitled to receive the same bounty as new recruits from their respective States, only deducting therefrom the hundred dollars at the real value when received. But as it may so happen, that some soldiers may be retained in the service, who have received the hundred dollars contrary to their inclination—all such who can make it clearly appear to commissioners, to be appointed as hereinafter mentioned, that they have been so detained, shall be immediately discharged.

Resolved, That all soldiers who are now held by enlistment expressing the term of service to be three years or during the war, and have not voluntarily reënlisted, and received the hundred dollar bounty, shall be immediately discharged.

The committee trusting in the sincerity and attachment of the Pennsylvania Line to the American cause, and (notwithstanding the unwarrantable steps they have taken) judging from their moderation and conduct in their discipline and good order they have observed, and being convinced that their assembling was for the redress of grievances only, have resolved that on producing lists regimentally of those non-commissioned officers and soldiers who fall within the different classes of grievances complained of, with regard to the term of enlistment, pay, bounty and cloathing, that they will immediately appoint commissioners to examine and report therein, that full and ample justice shall be done to the claimants, by discharging such as are entitled to their discharges, given certificates of pay and cloathing due to such as have claims justly founded.

The foregoing terms being accepted, the committee have resolved that upon the soldiers of the Pennsylvania Line delivering up the British emissaries sent to corrupt them, and submitting themselves to their proper officers, they will publish a free and general pardon of all offences committed by the non-commissioned officers and soldiers of said Line, from the 31st December last to this time.

By order of the Committee,

JNO. SULLIVAN,
Chairman.

Matthias Slough to Jasper Yeates.

PHILADELPHIA, January 8, 1781.

DR. SIR: Having a few days ago, in a letter to Mrs. Slough, which she tells me she communicated to my friends at Lancaster, mentioned some particulars respecting the revolt of the Pennsylvania Line in the Continental army, and knowing that you will be anxious to hear the manner in which this most unfortunate affair is likely to terminate, I will, in as concise a manner as possible, mention to you the particulars respecting it as they stood yesterday morning, which I have from the mouth of Mr. Turnbull, who comes express from Trent Town, and from Mr. John Barkly, who left Trent Town after him, which was as follows. I must, however, in the first place tell you that on Saturday last, the President of the State accompanied by a part of this City Light Horse, and a committee of Congress, accompanied by another part of the troop, left this city in order to pay these unhappy men a visit, and if possible to bring them to a sense of their duty. That the revolted troops remain at Princeton, and suffer none of their officers, excepting General Wayne, Col. Richard Butler, and Col. Walter Stewart, to have any intercourse with their men, the whole being now commanded by a Serg^t Major Williams, to whose inspection all letters, &c., those officers who are with them write, must be submitted, that are determined it is said not to have an interview with the committee of Congress, alledging that all their misfortunes are to be ascribed only to that body; but that they appear extremely anxious to have a conference with the President of the State, which it is reported took place either yesterday in the morning, or this morning, the event of which we hope to learn to-morrow, when you shall hear from me again. But amidst all their confusion you will be surprised when I relate to you the advantage which Sir Harry expected to derive from this truly lamentable mutiny, and the credit which on that occasion is due to our unhappy troops. On Saturday last, two men who learn are refugees were sent out of New York, and arrived safe in the camp of our troops, who brought with them an instrument of writing, not signed by any person, which writing mentions to our troops that Sir Harry has heard of the deplorable situation they are in, and that he is concious congress cannot nor have they inclination to do them justice. That if they would turn their backs on the heads of the "Rebbells" and march back to Amboy, he will send commissioners to meet them at that place, which commissioners should bring a sufficient force with them to protect them against the rebbells; that those commissioners should have full power to settle and adjust their accounts, and that Sir Harry would bind himself immediately to pay them the whole of their pay and arrearages of pay due to them from Congress. And that in consideration of this, nothing more should be required of them but to lay down their arms, and that not a man of them should be asked or required to perform any further service. That such is the virtue of our men, that they spurned at the attempt, and instead of listening to the proposal, they immediately communicated the matter to General Wayne, who had the two lads secured, and they were immediately delivered over to Messrs. Blair McClennaghan and Alexander Nisbet, who were sent by the Philadelphia Troop for the purpose, & who it is expected brought them to Trent Town last evening where it is to be hoped they will soon be "Andreed." You will I hope, pardon this imperfect scrawl, as it is wrote in a great hurry. Communciate it to the rest of our friends at Lancaster, and believe me in haste,

My Dear Sir,

Your most Hu^ble^ Servt,

MATTHIAS SLOUGH.

The Commiteee of Congress to President Reed.

TRENTON, Jan. 9, 1781.

SIS: The committee was last evening honoured with your Excellency's favour and its inclosures, dated at Maidenhead, 7 o'clock, P. M., copies of which have been sent to Congress. We now dispatch a Light horseman to know the present appearance of affairs at Princeton, and whether the troops are about to march for Trenton this morning.

We do not understand the propositions of the serjeants to be that any of their body were to sit with the commissioners, but they requested a voice in the appointment only. To this we have no objections.

We wish maters may be brought to an issue as soon as possible, and that your Excellency will inform us by return of this express what prospects you have of bringing them to a conclusion from present appearances.

I have the honor, &c., on behalf of the comm.,

JNO. SULLIVAN.

His Excellency PRESIDENT REED.

President Reed to the Committee of Congress.

January 9th.

GENTLEMEN: I wrote you last evening by Mr. Dewees, informing you of the proposals made by the sergeants, and my orders to the troops to march to Trenton this mornig, being resolved to open no further negotiation, but to take steps of a contrary kind, in which I am of opinion we had a good chance of success. But on my letter going in to General Wayne, orders were given to march this morning; and having also communicated the requisition of the honorable committee respecting the spies, there seemed to be a better disposition on that head.

I am in momentary expectations of hearing that they are set out, and hope the commissaries and quartermasters will be prepared. Quarters must be provided for at least 1500 men, though I will endeavor to detach 1000 at least to Bordentown and Burlington to-morrow. At Trenton I expect they will receive their officers, and that is my greatest concern at present, as they appear so deeply to resent the conduct of the troops to them personally. Had General Wayne not given a promise of general pardon the 2d January, and confirmed it on the 7th I should have excepted the men who insulted their officers, if they could have been discovered. I was somewhat apprehensive that the delivering up the spies, being an annexed condition to the pardon, would have involved some difficulties, but I now rather think it had a good effect.

I beg leave to offer it as my opinion that, for the sake of convenience, as well as dignity, the committee retire a little distance from them, until the officers have taken their places, and order is restored; for they are so ignorant and capricious that I would not be within their guards myself for any time, lest some wicked rascals, of whom they have too many, should suggest mischief. Besides that, I fear they will presume upon finding themselves treated with by Congress, of whom, at present, notwithstanding what has been said, I think they entertain respectful ideas. I apprehend that the committee have, in their first resolve, mistaken the bounty — — — for a bounty of 120 dollars. I beg leave to explain that matter as I understand it. Congress, with a view of conciliating those soldiers who had served for some time, (being enlisted for three years), ordered 100 dollars to be given them, under that description. The officers took the opportunity to turn it into a bounty for enlisting, and induced many who had enlisted for three years or during the war to take the money and sign a receipt, expressing that they had taken that as a bounty to enlist for the war. Some refused to take it, alleging that as they were not engaged for the war, they were not entitled to it. And I fear, upon inquiry, it will be found that the officers, by rigorous methods, forced them into the acceptance; or at least that they did so in many instances. As there was a doubt in the case, I thought it better to resolve this point in the soldier's favour, and consider it as gratuity, rather losing some money than dispute a doubtful matter. Then came the 120 dollars which was a bounty for reënlistment, so understood and freely taken by many. Perhaps there might be compulsion as to some, but I believe not many. I wait here for intelligence of their movement.

And am, gentlemen, most respectfully,
Your obedient and very humble servant,
JOSEPH REED.

P. S.—I have no account yet from the messengers sent to South Amboy.

Ten o'clock.—I am just informed that the troops have paraded and are set out.

tented troops, and was honest enough to bring them to me. In order that we might be certain of their intentions with respect to the enemy, we have thought it best to suffer him to go on with a message, and he is to return here with the answer.

We have heard that they have already detained two who came to them on the same errand. If this person should meet with the same fortune, you will be pleased to have him discharged, if in your power.

I am extremely anxious to hear how matters are going on and what prospect there is of the affair being terminated. I beg my respects to Col. Butler and Col. Stewart, and hope soon to have the happiness to see you in more agreeable situations.

President Reed to the Committee of Congress.

MAIDENHEAD, 8 MILES FROM TRENTON,
Jan. 9, 1781, 1 o'clock.

GENTLEMEN: I have received your favor by Mr. Shull, and shall do everything in my power to answer the expectations of the committee. I had the pleasure of meeting General Wayne, Colonels Butler, Stewart, and Moylan, who have been permitted to come out freely to me, they make such a report of the good temper of the men, and their anxiety to see us, that I have concluded to go among them. With the suspicions usual in ignorant minds, that we are not here, that it is a plan of the officers to protract and forbear giving answers, they begged to be informed if I proposed coming, that they might show me every mark of respect. The gentlemen are unanimous in their opinions of its propriety and in such cases some risk is to be run. My personal safety is a small consideration, and the prospect of public benefit is evidently now on the other side. Besides, their behavior this morning seems to warrant a confidence that would not have been justifiable yesterday. But, be assured, gentlemen, no danger or circumstance shall induce me to make concessions which, in my judgment, will be injurious to my country.

With the greatest respect and regard, I am, gentlemen, Your obedient and very humble servant, &c.,

JOS. REED.

I propose to come to this place this evening, as Trenton is too distant for our business, and shall write as soon as I return.

COUNCIL CHAMBER, Jan. 10, 1781.

DEAR SIR: I receievd your several favors of the 5th, 6th, 7th & 8th Jan'y; everything you requested has been particularly attended to; the cloathing, from various reasons, has been detained longer than I wished for. Farmer will certainly go off with it to-morrow, if not to-day. They consist of 1200 shirts, overalls for 2500 men, about 1200 pair shoes, 1000 blankets. President Reed to———.

TRENTON, Jan. 10, 1780, (81.)

DEAR SIR: I have the pleasure to inform you that matters wear a more favorable aspect than they have hitherto done. The troops were prevailed on to leave Princeton yesterday morning, that situation being too favorable for an intercourse with the enemy. This morning I called upon them to let them know I was ready to comply with the proposals I had offered them on Sunday evening. I also required of them, as a proof of their sincerity, that they should deliver up the emissaries from the British. They in turn observed that they had agreed not to go off as discharged, but to keep in a body until all the men were settled with. I informed them at once that this was inadmissable, and desired they would go together and consider both the points, and send me an answer in two hours. In that time I received the answer inclosed, so that I trust now we are in a fair way of accommodation, which, tho' it may end in a great diminution of the Pennsylvania Line, will be the best plan which circumstances will admit, and at least disappoint our enemies, who have presumed strongly upon this event. Emissaries are daily arriving from the enemy, but since the detention of the first spies, the papers are dropped in different places. One honest fellow (at least to us) carried his letter to Gen'l St. Clair. Gen'l Potter, Col. Atlee, Capt. Morris, and Blair McClenachan are appointed to carry the proposals into execution, and will sit for that purpose to morrow. It will be necessary to forward on the articles promised without delay. In such a case a breach of faith would ruin us, and expose me to great disgrace, which I hope my fellow citizens will not do, after the risque and fatigue of body and mind which I have gone through. It would also be necessary for Farmer to provide some decent supplies for the commissioners. The people of this State are very sore on the subject of supplying us, as the distress is occasioned by our own Line. I would therefore wish that Hazlewood would send us hay and forage and spirits to dispose of as the commissioners direct. The clothing must come forward as speedily as possible. Some of the men are very destitute. I know the difficulties of the Council on common occasions as to money, but I hope they will be removed, for it is most certain that the plunder of Philadelphia was in view, and Gen'l Washington laments in his letter this much to be apprehended evil. They keep up an astonishing regularity and discipline, and have so far on all occasions behaved very respectfully to me. As I do not think it possible that we can settle their accounts, and we wish to get them into a track of movement so as to separate, I think your sending up £5,000 State money will be of use. We must submit to our circumstances. Provisions of all kinds must be sent forward, but the boats must stop at Bordentown, or rather at Kirkbride's wharf for orders. This to be observed particularly as to the clothing and rum. There must be a great quantity of salt provisions in town, and very probably cattle in the meadows. The greatest part of those who are now discharged will reënlist in a few days, and I hope we shall prevail on them to admit some of their officers. I have the pleasure of informing you that your son is not one of the obnoxious. I apprehend more difficulty with the officers than the men after the settlement finishes, as their tempers are very high. There is not in this place a lock of hay or a bushel of oats but in private hands, so that we are at present in a state of distressing obligation to our private friends, and the State much dissatisfied.

The enemy are in force on Staten Island, but do not choose to venture on the Jersey Shore, tho' they are in perfect readiness for the purpose had their hopes been answered.

Jo^s Reed.

gives me real pleasure. The moving of the troops to Trenton, their delivering up the proposals of Sir Harry, and detaining the two emissaries as prisoners seems to forebode well; but I confess I would have expected, that before this time, they (the emissaries) should have been delivered up to a court martial, and received their just demerits. Various are the opinions here. Some think the troops should be generally discharged, and tempted with a handsome bounty to reënter the service during the war; others are for violent measures and compelling them to return to their duty by force. I fear such an experiment would not be attended with good consequences. It would be a very difficult matter to call any considerable number of the militia of this city out for that purpose. I have been told that a few evenings ago, when the officers were called together to consult upon the most proper measures to be adopted in case of an emergency, that some proposed sending deputies to let the troops know that they were determined not to use their arms against them in any case. In one of the artillery companies, I believe Capt. ————, was actually appointed for that purpose. You know the man's turn is not commonly conciliatory. I think, sir, you had better be as vigilant as possible to know who mixes with the troops from this side. It will be no difficult matter to undo in an hour what has been the work of days.

Council have sent up the money, but rather think Gen. Wayne was too fast in promising so large a reward till the rascals were given up for punishment; but these are not times to stand upon trifles. I wish you all possible success in your negotiation, and am, Dr Sir.

Your very Humble servt

Jos Gardner.

January 11. Col. North went from Pennington to Trenton to see the troops. Capt. Davis and Lieut. McKinney set out for the huts in order to bring down the baggage. Gen. Wayne and Col. Stewart came in to this place, and returned in the evening to Trenton.

two spies being delivered up, they informed the remainder of the board that your Excellency has been pleased to offer a sum of gold as a compensation for our fidelity, but as it has not been for the sake or through any expectation of receiving a reward, but for the zeal and love of our country that we sent them immediately to Gen'l Wayne, we therefore do not consider ourselves entitled to any other reward but the love of our country, and do jointly agree that we shall accept of no other.

BLOOMSBURY NEAR TRENTON, January 11, 1781.

DEAR SIR: I received your favor of the 10th inst., and am much obliged to you for the readiness which has been shown to comply with my requests. I do assure you and the council that I have conducted the matter to the best of my abilities, and am not conscious of being led into any concessions from other motives than a real judgment of what would be best for the service and the general good of the country. I know it is a delicate matter, and do not expect the officers will be pleased with any other settlement than by force and exemplary punishment of the mutineers; but I confess I saw no disposition of this kind in the State, or any inclination to meddle with them but on their turning towards the enemy, to the contrary of which they (have) given pretty decisive proofs. The two spies were executed this morning, having been faithfully delivered according to promise. They discover a very good temper in most respects, and I think I may now venture to assure you of as happy a settlement of the matter as circumstances will admit. I really think they have had some solid causes of complaint, which, with their behavior, justifies, in my judgment, the lenity shewn them. As a Line, I expect no service from them till they are very much altered in their regimental system by throwing different men together, and this the new arrangement will facilitate. The greater part will enlist again. I have thought when matters are further advanced, to take some notice of their women and children by providing some decent clothing, which they have not at present. There are about 100 of them, and like ourselves, they have their attachments and affections. A new gown, silk handkerchief, and a pair of shoes, &c., would be but little expense, and I think as a present from the State would have more effect than ten times the same laid out in articles for the men. If it should not be convenient or agreeable to the Council to do this, I will be one of a hundred to provide for one woman each, to be given only to those soldiers' wives who continue in the service. I have not mentioned it, least I should not be able to effect it; therefore request to hear from you as soon as may be. I verily believe many of the men will do their duty better than ever.

I am, in haste, dr. sir.

Y^r obed. and very humble. serv't,

JOS. REED.

P. S.—As soon as the Commissioners have made a little progress, I shall leave them, being much fatigued.

The Execution of the Spies.

Matters were soon settled by the court martial, & they were condemned to be hung next Morning before 9 o'clock; & the execution of the order was given to Major Fishbourne. Ogden was much agitated & overcome upon hearing his sentence, but still expected it would not be effected. Mason seemed to feel his situation, but declared to the writer, that if they hung him, he was in fault, but that he would die a true and loyal subject of George the 3rd. During the night, while on guard, they seriously asked me if they had any hopes; & I went and spoke with Genl Wayne, who decidedly told me nothing could save them, unless we let them escape, which would involve us in trouble. I then procured a Bible from Mr. Barclay, & past the night in reading it to them. Mason was devout, but Ogden was in terror and distress. I got them something to eat, & in the morning Mason slept a little while. After getting the best breakfast we could obtain, our troop having crossed the river and joined us, we were ordered to bring out the spies, and their sentence being again read to them. & their hands secured by a rope, they were lead to a tree, nearly back of Colvin's ferry-house, & his waggon and a negro pressed to hang them. Upon their being brought in the waggon to the tree, a difficulty occurred for a rope when Lieut. Budden saw a new rope collar upon the horse my servant was on, who had just arrived with cloaths, &c., for me, from Philad; with this, the business was soon finished, & before nine, having orders to return home, we galloped off and left them hanging, & we reached home that evening, after a severe week in cold weather.—From the Diary of an unknown officer.

BLOOMSBURY, Jan'y 12, 1781.

DEAR SIR: Mr. Smith arrived this afternoon, and his presence will be useful. I hoped he would have brought the money, as I fear there will be much confusion till the discharged are separated from the retained. The commissioners began to-day, as the troops are clamorous, and disagreeable things expected if any delay was attempted. At the same time, it must be observed that we have not yet had the necessary papers. They therefore proceeded no further than one company—and the discharged of that one still here for the want of a little money to bear their expenses. If, therefore, it is not already done, I persuade myself it will be sent immediately. Farmer came last evening, and to-day I formed his arrangements, so that he will begin to-morrow. Mr. Deane will take care of money matters. The officers at Pennington were in so deplorable a plight that I was obliged to borrow £270 species in this town, on my own credit, to relieve them. The people of the country are prejudiced against them and callous to their necessities. Mr. Deane has just returned, having paid them the above sum on account of their depreciation. I expect we must send them £500 more. By a little address we have saved the 100 guineas and our credit, as you will see by the enclosed. Gen'l Wayne was gone up to Pennington, and as I apprehended some mistake in the matter, I did not like to give up so much money without farther light. I have not yet been able to settle the money sent up by Nicola. There is justice necessary to be observed with soldiers in money matters, which we must in future attend to. I shall be obliged to you for one or more of the laws for making up the depreciation; the soldiers have not been properly made acquainted with it. I wish they had known it sooner; I think it would have had a good effect. The commissioners and some of the principal officers had some little warmth to-day, as I am informed. The former proceeded in their own way, and I believe it was the right one. Great indulgences must and ought to be shown to the feelings of the officers in this new and unexpected scene; it is a sore trial, and requires no small degree of patience and good sense to submit to it. The men certainly had not those attachments which the officers supposed, and their fears being now at an end, they give loose to many decencies, which are very provoking to those who have been long accustomed to receive unconditional submission. The mutineers are in all cases to be condemned. There are sometimes, in armies, just causes of discontent. The people of this State are universally in sentiment with the men.

The officers remaining with them have not been able to make the smallest party on whom to depend, even for information. I shall set out early on Sunday morning for Philadelphia, nothing happening to prevent, which I will let you know. And am, with regard to yourself and council, Dear Sir,

BLOOMSBURY, Jan'y 13, 1781.

SIR: You will be pleased to proceed to Bordentown as soon as convenient, where you will first direct the issue of the clothing to such troops as shall be sent down by the commissioners, and who will be under the care of some officer or officers; 2dly, pay each man one month's pay, taking a receipt therefor, viz: fifty shillings, or the equivalent in Continental, at 75 for one; 3rdly, pay each recruit, who shall be certified by any justice of the peace as enlisted for the war freely and voluntarily, and attested to serve the United States, six pounds State money, or the value in old Continental, at the exchange of 75 for one and one guinea; 4thly, the articles to be delivered to the soldiers who remain in service are a pair of woolen overalls, a pair of shoes, a shirt, and a blanket, unless he have one; 5thly, you will be particular in causing every soldier to whom the above articles are delivered to sign a receipt therefor, and the same of the pay and recruiting money; 6thly, all necessary assistance to be procured, and will be allowed in your account of expenses.

I shall send up from Philadelphia in a few days some persons who will take the burthensome part of the business off your hands, but the payment of moneys you will be pleased to keep in your own hands. You will write frequently to inform me, or in my absence the vice president, of your proceedings.

I am, sir, yr. obed't & very hbl. servt,

DIARY OF THE PENNSYLVANIA LINE.

May 27th. The general beat at daylight, and the troops took up the line of march at sunrise, and halted near Peter Littlestown, it being 14 miles.

May 28th. Marched through Taneytown, and halted upon the bank of Pipe creek, being 14 miles.

[29. The troops took up the line of march at 3, A. M., and encamped on the S. W. of Monocacy, 15 miles.

May 30th. Continued on the ground for the men to wash and clean their arms. Reviewed at 5, P. M. [At 7, P. M., we were reviewed by Gen. Wayne.]

May 31st. Marched at sunrise; passed through Fredericktown about 8, [where was a number of British officers, prisoners, who took a view of us as we passed through the town. Continued our march to the Potomac, at Noland's Ferry, where we halted some time for the artillery and Baggage to cross. The troops crossed in the evening, and halted one mile from the ferry, and lay without tents, it raining the chief part of the night. In crossing there were four men drowned by one of the boats sinking. Our march this day was 16 miles, besides crossing the ferry.] We crossed the Potomac at Newland's ferry in bad scows. One sunk, in which one sergeant and three privates of our regiment (First) were drowned.

June 1st. Marched at 4, P. M. Halted about 5 miles from Noland's ferry. Raining this afternoon and all night. [Moved 5 miles towards Leesburg, Loudon county.]

June 2. Wet day; continued on the ground.

June 3. Clear day; marched by the right. Halted at the noted Chapel Spring half an hour; then marched on through Leesburg to Goose creek; encamped for the night, being 13 miles, where the officers left all their heavy baggage with part of their tents.

June 14, 1781—April 25, 1782.

14th.—Took up the line of march at 5 o'clock, A. M.; marched through a d —— poor country, the water being very scarce. This day see a number of negroes, the greater part of them being naked—12 miles.

15th.—Took up the line of march at sunrise. A great scarcity of water that day, and a very fatiguing march. Refreshed ourselves in an orchard with Col· Robinson. The Marquis and Gen. Wayne took a snack with us. 14 miles. (Hanover County.)

16th.—Took up the line of march at daybreak, made a short day's march of six miles, being much fatigued. This day built a fine bush hut. 6 miles.

17th.—Took up the line of march at 3 o'clock in the morning, marched through the best country we have seen in this State, and encamped at Mr. Dandridge's, being 20 miles.

18th.—Very fine morning. This day the enemy advanced on us. Our encampment struck at sunset. All the Continental troops marched in order to surprise a party of Tarleton's horse. We continued till day-light, but on our arrival found they had gone some hours. 13 miles.

19th.—Lay on our arms till 1 o'clock; retired into the country 4 miles, where we lay destitute of any refreshment, bedding or covering. 3 miles. (Henrico Co.)

20th.—Marched at 6 o'clock, three miles, and were reviewed by the General. Lay on our arms all night. 3 miles.

21st.—Arrived at Col. Sim's mills. Marched at 12 o'clock, A. M., 8 miles, and lay at Burrill's, destitute of every necessary of life. 8 miles.

22d.—Marched at 2 o'clock through a well inhabited country, though I can give no account of the people, as I have not been in the inside of a house, (but one or two ornerys.) They sometimes come to the roadside in order to take a view of us as we pass by, but a person can scarcely discern any part of them, but the nose and eyes, as they have themselves muffled up with linens, &c., in order to prevent the sun from burning their faces—I mean the female sex. At the same time they will have a number of black around them, all naked, nothing to hide their nakedness. You can easily distinguish their sex, I mean the blacks, for reasons already mentioned. They will also have their attendants dressed in the same uniform. They will also attend their table in this manner.

* * * * * * * * *

This day we passed through Richmond in twenty hours after the enemy had evacuated it, a number of houses being destroyed by the enemy. They also destroyed a great quantity of tobacco, which they threw into the streets and set fire to it. The town is built close on James river, under a bank. We encamped two miles this side of the town. About 6 o'clock, P. M., Capt. Davis and self made to town and spent the afternoon playing billiards and drinking wine. 20 miles.

23d.—Took up the line of march at 2 o'clock in the morning, halted at 8 for refreshment, where we had an alarm. Our Light Horse brought us intelligence that the enemy was within one mile of us. The army immediately formed for action and an universal joy prevailed that certain success was before us. We lay on our arms ten hours, hourly receiving accounts of their advance, (our intelligence on this whole march was exceeding bad), but to our great mortification it turned out a false alarm. At six we moved our position for convenience of encampment A very heavy rain came on at 12 o'clock at night. 15 miles.

24th June.—Continued on this ground in order to dry our clothes, (which had got wet the night before), and the men to furbish their arms, &c. This day one of our soldiers belonging to the fourth Reg't, Penn'a, was taken deserting to the enemy. At 3 o'clock, P. M., he was tried and sentenced to be shot, which soon he received in the evening at roll-call. At the same time we received orders to strike our tents, which we did, and marched at dark in order to surprise Tarleton's Horse), 12 miles. He got intelligence of our advancing (which he always had more than we) and retired. 12 miles, James City County.

25th June.—Lay by this day. At dark took up our line of march, in order to overtake Col. Sim's horse, who had the rear guard with a great number of cattle, plundering as he was making his way towards James Town; left one negro man with the small pox lying on the road side, in order to prevent the Virginia militia from pursuing them, which the enemy frequently did; left numbers in that condition, starving and helpless, begging of us as we passed them for God's sake to kill them, as they were in great pain and misery.

26th June.—At six o'clock in the morning we were informed that a covering party of horse were but a small distance before us. Gen. Wayne immediately ordered the front platoon of each battalion to turn out immediately, which order being complied with, being four platoons and Major McPherson's party of Legionary horse. We pursued them five or six miles in full speed. At last we came within a short distance of them. Major Hamilton had the command of the infantry. A party then of about forty men of the New England troops were ordered to mount behind the same number of dragoons, and then pursued them and came up with them in a short time. We had a severe skirmish with their horse and infantry, in which we took a number of their horse and cattle, and killed forty of their infantry. Our loss was trifling. Major McPherson's horse threw him into the field of action, who fortunately made his escape. I expected every moment they would have attacked our small party of infantry, which was posted on a small knoll, in order to cover the light dragoons.

27th June.—This day we lay at Bird's ornery.

28th.—Made some movements for advantage of ground.

29th.—Manœuvered considerable in consequence of bad intelligence.

30th.—Greatly fatigued. Lay by great part of this day. Our tents came to us this evening.

July 1st, '81.—Marched at daybreak 8 miles to York river, for the troops to wash and refresh themselves, where one man and Dr. Downey, of the 6th Reg't Penna., was unfortunately drowned. I mounted guard this day. Returned that night to our former ground, I having the rear guard of the army.

3d.—Marched at sun [rise] to Mr. ——— Old Fields. Manœuvers retrograde and many. The troops almost worn out. Very hot weather.

The first battalion of our Line (the Pennsylvanians) was detached with a small party of riflemen, which brought on a scattering fire in front and on the flanks of our battalion (the first) that continued for two or three hours, between our riflemen and their Yeagers. Our battalion (the first) was then ordered to close column and advance, when we had information the 2nd and 3rd battalions with one of infantry were in sight of us. We then formed again, displayed to the right and left, the 3rd battalion on our right, and the 2nd on our left; being then formed, brought on a general engagement, our advance regular at a charge, till we got within eighty yards of their whole army, they being regularly formed, standing one yard distance from each other, their Light Infantry being in front of our battalion. We advanced under a heavy fire of grape-shot, at which distance we opened our musketry. Then I received a wound with a canister shot in my left breast, but did not retreat until the whole of us retreated, which was very rapidly. Upon our retreat I felt very faintish, but the thought of falling into the enemy's hands made me push on as hard as I possibly could for about five miles, when I got a horse and rode to Bird's Ordinary, being 12 miles, where I arrived in the morning, at 3 o'clock, my wound being very painful.

7th. This day I went to see the curious works of Mr. Ballentine. He had made a canal about one mile along side of James river, which was about forty feet wide, in the centre of which was built a curious fish-basket. At the end of the canal was an elegant grist-mill, with four pair of stones, close by which was the bloomary, or boring mill, where they bored the cannon, Close by which was the mansion house; four very large chimneys, built of the best brick I ever saw. Each chimney has two air furnaces, and a number of other works too tedious to mention. All those works were built at the expense of the State.

Within half a mile of these works is a very fine brewery.

a low country, more hilly than I have seen since we came to the State. Encamped near Hanover Meeting House, on Mr. George Phillip's farm, one mile and a half from New Castle, and four miles from Hanover Town, being 12 miles from Bottom's Bridge.

This evening I had an invitation from Capt. Pierson to assist him in eating two water-mellons, which were the best and finest I ever see. This country is full of them; they have large patches of two or three acres of them.

The negroes here raise great quantities of snaps and collerds.

They have no cabbage here. 12 miles.

August 18th. This day Lieut. Collier and self too a walk to New Castle; spent the afternoon very agreeably in playing billiards (which is a very bad one.) The town is situated on a very fine plain. A few of us bucks remained in town all night at the ornery; got very merry.

Collier, &c., took a walk into the country, about one and a half miles from our encampment, to one Mr. Chapman's, to eat water-mellons, which we had in great plenty, with the addition of a little good spirits and water. seen, and encamped on Col. Byrd's farm close by his dwelling-house, which is the most elegant building I ever saw.

All these buildings are built close on James river, which makes it appear heavenly.

He died a few years ago, and was buried in his garden close by his house. A monument erected in the same place.

He was married to a Miss Willing, from Philadelphia.

His neighbors are Col. Harrison, &c., where Gen. Wayne took up his quarters.

Muhlenberg's Aid-de-Camp came riding post haste into our camp about 11 o'clock, A. M. Our orders then immediately came for the troops to march at 2 o'clock, P. M., Lieut. Hammond and several other gentlemen, then embracing the opportunity before we should march, immediately went to take a view of the monument which was erected in Mr. Randolph's deer park in memory of Richard Randolph and Jane his wife (and also in memory of the deluge which happened in Virginia in the year 1771, which may be seen to endless ages).

Said Randolph has a very elegant seat.

The troops took up the line of march at 2 o'clock, P. M., and a very warm one it was, to be sure, and encamped at Westover (the place we left yesterday), being 10 miles.

In the evening we marched for the Green Springs, and there lay that night without tent or any other shelter. A very heavy rain the whole time of our march.

Sept. 5th. This day marched back again one mile, in order for our men to wash their clothing and cook provisions.

Took a walk to town with a number of our gentlemen, and took a view of the town, as it is the metropolis of Virginia. There are some very elegant buildings, such as the College, Palace, Capitol or State House, in which is erected a statue of marble, the image of Lieut Gen. Berkley, Governor of the State of Virginia, &c.

As we passed through town, Doct. Nicholson very politely asked us to walk with him to his house. We were very elegantly entertained with a good dinner, a glass of spirits and Maderia wine.

As we were on the grand parade, a party of the enemy's Dragoons drove a party of our horse within our advanced picquet, where they were very warmly received by them with a platoon of musketry. This night about twelve o'clock a French officer came to my picquet and desired me to send a file of men with him, to the Marquis La Fayette's quarters, as he had a pack of letters for him from the Count De Grasse. He informed me (as he spoke German) there were nine large men-of-war joined the Count De Grasse the day before yesterday from Rhode Island under the command Count Rochambeau. He likewise informed me that the day before yesterday they took two of the enemy's frigates of thirty-two guns each. Also the last vessels had a reinforcement of two thousand five hundred French Infantry on board.

I had about one hours confab with the gentlemen, and he seemed much pleased with our present situation, and was very desirous of explaining himself in a more explicit manner, as he spoke but very indifferently the German language. He was confident that Lord Cornwallis would not stand it longer than eight days at farthest.

Sept'r 15th.—This morning about two o'clock, as I was walking up and down past one of my sentinels, in order to keep myself awake, I was very agreeably surprised by the singing of a mocking-bird. He sang by himself and continued his notes till daylight. One would have imagined that he was sensible of the merit of his accomplishments, and that it was in complaisance to man as well as for his satisfaction that he was pleased to sing when all was silent (but the barking of some ———dogs). Nothing animated him so much as the stillness of nature; twas then that he composed and executed all his tones. He raised from seriousness to gaiety, and from a simple song to a more sportive warbling, from the lightest quivers and divisions he softened into the most languishing and plaintiff sighs, which he afterwards forsook to return to his natural sprightliness.

Interrupted by the passing and repassing of soldiers, wagons, &c., by examining them.

This day we had a very heavy shower of rain.

I conjecture the whole of our army—I mean the French and our Continental troops, to be Fifteen Thousand Veteran Troops besides the militia; they are so numerous that I have not been able to ascertain their number. The American army consists of six Brigades, viz: Col. Vose's, Lieut. Col. Barber's and Lt. Col. Gimot's Battalion of Infantry will form one brigade and to be commanded by Brigadier Gen. Muhlenberg.

The French and British had a severe engagement this morning. One of the French officers lost his leg, and a number of the privates killed and wounded.

Col. Scammell was wounded and taken prisoner this morning. Lt. Tilden and self took a walk to view their works which they vacated last night, which was within musket shot of their main works, when we perceived a flag advancing towards us, which we immediately went to meet, and on examination found that he had a letter from Lieut. Col. Huntington of Col. Scammell's Reg't informing him of his captivity, and desiring him to send his waiter and clothing to Williamsburg, where he would be sent on parole as soon as his wound was dressed.

This day Capt. Davis laid a bet with me of a beaver hat that Lord Cornwallis and his army would be prisoners of war by the next Sunday.

His Excellency sent one of his aides de camp for Capt. Smith and his guard of fifty men to march in front of his Excellency as a covering party, which we did, and went under cover of a hill, where we posted our guard, when his Excellency Gen[l] Washington and Gen[l] Duportail with three men of our guard advanced within three hundred yards of the enemy's main works, which is the town of York.

Capt. Smith, and Lt. Parker and self took a walk to the York river, where we had the pleasure of seeing all the enemy's vessels of which they had four of them sunk this side of the river in order to prevent the French shipping from passing this side. We observed at a great distance down the river three of the French ships riding at anchor.

The enemy this whole day keep up a cannonading at our fatigue parties who were throwing up works in front of them at so short a distance as half a mile, but did very little damage.

We waited this whole day very impatiently, but all to no purpose in expectation of being relieved from picquet, but to our great mortification we found that we were to be continued which we very agreeably consented to, and built ourselves a fine bowery of pine bushes to spend the night and to keep the dew from us.

2[d]. Oct'r. A continual cannonading this whole day at our fatigue parties. One Maryland soldier's hand shot off and one militia man killed.

One of the Maryland soldiers deserted to the enemy this afternoon from his post; my waiter was in pursuit of him, but could not overtake him, and in his pursuing him made him drop his arms and accoutrements, which he brought off with him.

This day our Battalion was ordered on picquet at the Redoubt No. 1, where a Corporal of Capt. Bond's company was shot through the rump with a nine-pounder as he was relieving the sentinels. He was immediatley brought into the fort and the doctor sent for, who informed us that his life was but short. The doctor then ordered him to be carried to camp, where he lived but a short time.

In the evening we were relieved by Col. Duey, commanding the Rhode Island Reg't.

6th Oct'r, '81. This morning six o'clock our two Penn'a Regt's, the two Reg'ts of Maryland and a number of militia were ordered each man to make a gabion, which we did before twelve o'clock, M. Very little firing done this day.

7th. All last night a heavy cannonading, and this morning, at the French troops, two of their men killed. Last evening about three thousand of the French and our troops with their arms, &c., went to break ground. This morning Capt. Steel, Lieut. Ball and self took a walk to see what work was done. We found to our great satisfaction that they had a parallel line from the bank of the river extending beyond the redoubt No. 2, with the addition of two small batteries, &c.

This day received the following letters, viz:

One from my brother App, dated Lancaster, Sept'r 10th, '81, No. 3, but received but two, and one from Lt. Andrew Johnston, dated York Town, Sept'r 11th, 1781, with a number of newspapers inclosed.

This day I won a beaver hat from Capt. Davis.

8th Oct'r. This day I bet a pair of silk stockings with Capt. Davis that Cornwallis and his army would not be prisoners of war by this day two weeks. This afternoon our division went on fatigue to forward our works near the enemy's lines. They keep up a continued firing this whole day. This afternoon a French officer got his leg shot off by a cannon ball from the British; he was advanced in front of our works.

9th Oct'r. Last night one of Capt. Bartholomew's men was killed with a cannon ball on our works. This morning we completed a very elegant battery for ten pieces of heavy artillery, viz: Three twenty-four pounders, three eighteen pounders, two eight-inch howitzers, two ten and a half inch mortars fixed upon carriages (and not upon beds) in order to throw the shot horizontal into the enemy's works, and there to burst and destroy their works. We have six of those mortars; they were invented by Gen. Knox and proved to be of effect.

This morning 9 o'clock, A. M., a deserter from the enemy's artillery came to us; he left them just as their piece fired, which was advanced in front of the Governor's house. He informed us that Cornwallis had given out orders to them not to be afraid of the Americans, that they had not any heavy pieces of ordnance except a few pieces of field artillery. He also informed the soldiery and inhabitants that the French fleet was inferior to him and were afraid to attack him; that they came to this place to procure a quantity of tobacco, and if they could not be supplied here that the fleet would set sail in eight or ten days at the farthest, and leave the continent. Such are my Lord's addresses to his soldiery, but they have more sense than to believe his weak expressions.

This day 12 o'clock, M., we were relieved by Gen. Clinton's division.

This afternoon four o'clock our division was ordered on fatigue, after four and twenty hours' very hard working at our lines, &c.

In the evening we opened our battery of ten pieces upon the right of our works, and gave the British a few heavy shots and a number of ten and a half inch shells, &c.

The French at the same time opened their batteries upon them.

10th Oct'r. This whole day a very heavy connonading on both sides.

This afternoon our whole Division was turned out for fatigue for to make fascines, gabions, saucissons, palisades, pickets, &c., and had them carried to the front of our respective regiments.

This day wrote a letter to Lt. Johnson at York Town, Penn'a, and sent it by a soldier of our Battalion.

11th Oct'r, '81. Last night about seven o'clock I was taking a view of the shells we threw into York, which was very pleasing to see, and shortly after I perceived a large thick black smoke rising which I conjectured was the enemy's burning some of their vessels, but after inquiring into the matter found they were set on fire by some of our shells which were thrown among their shipping accidentally. This morning another of their vessels was burnt.

This day eleven o'clock our whole Division went on fatigue on the lines.

This whole day we cannonaded the enemy, and sent them a number of shells, and drove their artillery from the embrasures, and they had not the spirit to return one shot this whole day.

HEAD QUARTERS BEFORE YORK, Oct'r 11th, 1781.

At a General Court Martial of the line held at camp before York, Oct'r 2d and continued by adjournments, whereof Col. Dayton was President, Capt. P. Duffy of the Fourth Regiment of Artillery charged with scandalous and infamous behaviour unbecoming the character of an officer and gentleman, on the night of the 23d and morning of the 24th Sept'r last, such as drawing a sword on Capt. Ballard and attempting to stab him, and firing a pistol at him when unarmed, also for a most disgraceful breach of friendship in seizing from Lt. Blewer a loaded pistol and snapping the same at him when attempting, at Capt. Duffy's own request an amicable settlement of his (Capt. Duffy's) quarrel with Capt. Ballard; also charged by Lt. Col. Stewart, first with being drunk; 2d rioting in the street; 3d, abusing a French soldier; 4th, violation of good discipline in having in a seditious and disorderly [manner] threatened a French guard stationed at the Hospital for the security of the sick-- was tried. The Court, after mature deliberation, are of opinion that Capt. Duffy drew a sword on Capt. Ballard and attempted to stab him when unarmed on the evening of the 23d Sept'r last, and on the morning of the 24th drew his sword on Capt. Ballard, he having one by his side; that Capt. Duffy also seized a pistol from Lt. Blewer and snapped it at him, on the beforementioned evening, declaring he would shoot him, when Lt. Blewer was attempting at Capt. Duffy's own request an amicable settlement of his quarrel with Capt. Ballard. It does not appear to the Court that the pistol Capt. Duffy seized from Lt. Blewer was loaded. The Court are of opinion that Capt. Duffy's conduct, as found, is a breach of Article 21st, section 24th, of the Rules and Articles of War, and sentence him to be discharged the service. The Commander-in-Chief approved the foregoing sentence.

12th Oct'r, '81.—Last evening at 5 o'clock a Detachment from our Division was ordered on fatigue, in order to run the second parallel, where I had the honor to be one of the number, and had a command of eighty-two men and another officer with me. Every second man of the whole detachment carried a fascine and shovel or a spade, and every man a shovel, spade or grubbing hoe.

Just at dusk we advanced within gunshot of the enemy, then began our work. In one hour's time we had ourselves completely covered, so we disregarded their cannonading; they discharged a number of pieces at our party, but they had but little effect, they only wounded one of our men. We were in the center of two fires, from the enemy and our own, but the latter was very dangerous; we had two men killed and one badly wounded from the French batteries, also a number of shells bursted in the air above our heads, which was very dangerous to us. We dug the ditch three and one half feet deep and seven feet in width. In the morning before daylight we were relieved by the militia.

This morning two Hessian deserters came to us.

This morning the enemy threw a number of shells amongst the militia who were at work on the second parallel line.

This day 12 o'clock we were relieved by Gen. Lincoln's Division, when our division marched off with drums beating and colors flying. This day I being much fatigued.

This afternoon a fatigue party was ordered from our Division to cut palisades.

This day a very heavy cannonading both from the enemy and our side, also a great number of shells thrown.

13th Oct'r, '81. This morning our whole Division went on fatigue making saucions, fascines, gabions, pickets, &c., for the use of our batteries. We completed our task before 12 o'clock, M.

This whole day cannonding from both sides.

This afternoon Col. Moylan's Horse, &c., marched to the southward.

14th Oct'r. Last night a very heavy cannonding. This morning 10 o'clock our Division mounted in trenches; this day we had a number of our men killed and wounded. Capt. Steel had one of his company very badly wounded. The enemy this whole day keep up a continual firing of cannon and throwing a number of five inch shells. The latter are very dangerous, especially in the day time, as they cannot be perceived only [except] by a little noise they make as they fall.

This whole day our men were carrying gabions, fascines, &c. This evening it is reported there is something grand to be done by our Infantry.

15th Oct'r, '81. Last evening, just at dusk, two of our Regiments of Light Infantry, under the command of the Marquis La Fayette, came to the trenches. Immediately after, they advanced towards the enemy's two out works, which they stormed and carried with success, with the loss of a few killed and wounded. The following officers were wounded, viz: Col. Barber, Major Barber, Capt. Ohlney, and a few volunteers: the number of men cannot be yet ascertained. The French carried one work and our Infantry another; both parties behaved with great spirit. The French had likewise a number of killed and wounded.

In those two redoubts were taken the following officers, viz: One Major, two captains, two Lieutenants and one Ensign, and the number of privates not yet known.

The French and our Infantry killed a number of the enemy in the storm.

When the Light Infantry advanced, the one half of our Division were ordered on fatigue to complete our Second Parallel line; each man of the fatigue party carried a fascine, a shovel or a spade; and the remainder of our Division went as a Covering party to our troops who stormed the works. We were very much exposed to the enemy's fire, both musquetry and cannon balls and grape shot, and not a single man hurt. This day we completed our Second Parallel line.

The enemy threw a number of shells this day and wounded a great number of men, especially the militia; several were wounded this day in their sleep, such is the carelessness of those stupid wretches who are acquainted with the life of a soldier.

This morning his Excellency Gen'l Washington sent a flag to Lord Cornwallis, but what the contents were I could not learn.

This day 12 o'clock, our troops were relieved by Gen'l Lincoln's Division, when we marched off with drums beating and colours flying, after a very fatiguing night.

Our Second Parallel line is now within two hundred and fifty yards of the enemy's main works, which is York Town, where we have a very fine prospect of Town, River and the enemy's shipping, also of the town of Gloster, which is on the opposite shore. Upon the right of our line we are erecting a twelve gun battery.

This whole day being very quiet, very little firing on either side only throwing a few shells.

16th Oct., '81. This morning at daylight the enemy sallied out, but with what force we cannot learn. They took possession of one of our batteries and spiked a few of our cannon with their bayonets. Our troops immediately attacked them and drove them to town with a considerable loss. Eight of them were found dead on the spot with a number of wounded. This day, 11 o'clock, A. M., our Division went on fatigue, making saucissons, fascines, gabions, &c.

17th Oct'r. This day, 11 o'clock, A. M., our Division mounted the trenches. A few shells thrown by the enemy.

This day flags passing and repassing. Lord Cornwallis proposed deputies from each army to meet at Moore's House, to agree on terms for the surrender of the garrison at York and Gloster, and hostilities to cease for twenty-four hours. His Excellency, Gen'l Washington, allowed my Lord but two hours. An answer was sent at 3 o'clock, P. M., when a cessation of arms took place.

Lord Cornwallis sent a flag he would surrender himself prisoner of war, only allowing him some small preliminaries which would be settled in the morning.

This day we finished a very fine battery of fifteen pieces of heavy ordnance.

This afternoon Lieuts. Martin, Henley, and self took a walk to the left of our lines, where we found the following batteries, all ready to be opened at one moment's time, viz:

No. 1. From the right. One iron 18-pounder; 2 howitzers; 2 mortars, and two royals.

No. 2. Ten 18-pounders, &c.; three ten-inch mortars; one eight inch howitzer; two royals.

No. 3. Two 10-inch mortars, and two royals.

No. 4. Four 18-pounders, iron pieces.

No. 5. Four 18-pounders, and 2 twenty-fours, (all brass.)

No. 6. do. do.

No. 7. Six twenty-four pounders, (all brass.)

No. 8. One eight inch howitzer; eight thirteen-inch mortars, and 2 royals (all brass.)

We could not pass the ravine to see the remainder of our works.

19th Oct'r, '81. At one o'clock this day, Major Hamilton, with a detachment marched into town and took possession of the batteries, and hoisted the American flag.

The British army marched out and grounded their arms, in front of our line. Our whole army drew up for them to march through, the French army on their right, and the American army on their left.

The British prisoners all appeared to be much in liquor.

After they grounded their arms they returned to town again.

20th Oct'r. This day the prisoners remained in town.

Lt. Collier and self took a walk to see our gentleman officers, who had just landed, and took a sup of grog with them.

HEAD QUARTERS, NEAR YORK, October 20th, 1781.

The General congratulates the army upon the glorious event of yesterday. The generous proof which his Most Christian Majesty has given of his attachment to the cause of America must force conviction in the minds of the most deceived among the enemy, relatively to the decisive good consequences of the alliance, and inspire every citizen of these States with sentiments of the most unutterable gratitude. His fleet, the most numerous and powerful that ever appeared in these seas, commanded by an Admiral whose fortune and talents insure great events; an army of the most admirable composition, both in officers and men, are the pledges of his friendship to the United States, and their coöperation has secured us the present signal success.

The Genl upon this occasion intreats his Excellency Count De Rochambeau to accept of his most grateful acknowledgments for his counsels and assistance at all times. He presents his warmest thanks to the Generals Baron De Viominil, Chevalier Chastellux, Marquis De St. Simon and Count De Viominil, and to Brigadier Genl. De Choisey (who had a separate command) for the illustrious manner in which they have advanced the interest of the common cause.

He requests the Count De Rochambeau will be pleased to communciate to the army under his immediate command the high sense he entertains of the distinguished merits of the officers and soldiers of every corps, and that he will present in his name to the regiment of Agenoies and Deuxponts the pieces of brass ordnance captured by them, as a testimony for their gallantry in storming the enemy's redoubts on the night of the fourteenth instant, when officers and men so universally vied with each other in the exercise of every soldierly virtue.

The General's thanks to each individual of merit would comprehend the whole army, but he thinks himself bound by affection, duty and gratitude to express his obligations to Major Generals Lincoln, De La Fayette and Steuben, for their disposition in the trenches; to Gen. Du Portail and Col. Carney for their vigor and knowledge which were conspicuous in their conduct of the attacks; and to Gen. Knox and Col. De Abbervaille for their great care, attention and fatigue in bringing forward the artillery and stores, and for their judicious and spirited management of them in the parallels. He requests the gentlemen above mentioned to communicate his thanks to the officers and soldiers of their respective commands.

Ingratitude, which the General hopes never to be guilty of, would be conspicious in him was he to omit thanking his Excellency Governor Nelson, for the aid he has received from him and from the militia under his command, to whose activity, emulation and courage such applause is due. The greatness of the acquisition would be an ample compensation for the hardships and hazards which they encountered with so much patriotism and firmness. In order to diffuse the general joy in every breast, the Genl. orders [that] those men belonging to the army who may now be in confinement shall be pardoned, released and join their respective corps.

Divine service is to be performed in the several Brigades or Divisions. The Commander-in-Chief earnestly recommends it that the troops not on duty should universally attend, with that seriousness of deportment and gratitude of heart which the recognition of such reiterated and astonishing interpositions of Providence demands of us.

21st Oct'r, '81. This afternoon the prisoners marched out of town, under the care of three divisions of militia.

This day Lt. Thomas Doyle and self took a walk to town, where, we found all the houses ruined and destroyed.

In this day's Gen'l Orders, the troops are to be in readiness to move at the shortest notice.

Division Orders of this Day.

The Baron Steuben feels himself particularly happy in complying with the request of his Ecxellency Genl. Washington in presenting his warmest thanks to the officers and soldiers of his Division, for the great skill and alacrity with which they performed the several duties assigned them during the siege against York. He ever entertained the highest opinion of the troops, but the spirit and bravery which was so conspicuous on the present occasion has given him additional confidence in them and secured his warmest and lasting friendship.

He cannot be too thankful to Brigadier Genls. Wayne and Gist for their gallant behavior on all occasions, and the great assistance they afforded him during the whole of the operations. He also wishes Col. Butler, Col. Stewart, Major Hamilton, Major Willis, Major Edwards and Major Roxburgh, the officers and soldiers under their command, to accept his best thanks for the good conduct shewn in opening the second parallel, which he considers as the most important part of the siege. He takes pleasure in assuring them it was performed with a degree of bravery and dispatch that exceeded his most sanguine expectations.

He cannot conclude without expressing in the highest terms his approbation respecting the conduct of Captain Walker, who performed double duty in the trenches, by mounting with his company, in adition to the services he rendered him as his Aid-de-Camp, which was so great as to entitle him to his sincere acknowledgments.

Feb'y 16th. Five Hessian deserters came this day from the Savannah.

This day I was very much fatigued playing cricket.

Feb'y 17th. A very fine, agreeable, warm day. There is a tree in this country called the Pride of America. It is full of berries, which hang in clusters. These trees are always full of birds of different kinds, and [who] eat those berries.

Feb'y 18th. A fine and warm day. This day Mr. Frazer presented me with a curious smoke-pipe, which is made of a brier root called Bam-boo.

Feb'y 19th. This morning we had a heavy rain.

The afternoon cleared up very fine.

This evening I went on command to Col. Haines' farm, whose lot it was to fall unfortunately into our cruel enemy's hands, and was hung by those damnable murderers. Said Haines left a family of very fine promising children behind him, both motherless and fatherless. Gov. Hutchinson has charge of the estate.

I was ordered to take charge of the military stores, with a sergeant, corporal, and eighteen privates.

The situation of this farm is very agreeable. A very elegant mansion house and an overseer's house surrounded by negro houses, a very fine brick rice mill, store houses, &c. A fine pond of water all around the house, which affords a great quantity of fish and wild ducks. From the main road to said house is a very beautiful avenue of about a mile long. The plantation is about three miles from Jacksonburgh. A garden full of very fine flowers, &c.

Feb'y 20th, '82.—Rained very hard all last night, and part of this morning. Cleared up in the afternoon very warm.

Spent the evening very agreeably with Gen. Barnwell, Gov. Hutson, and five or six Assembly and Senate gentry. We sat up until eleven o'clock at night, drinking excellent Jamaica Grog and super-excellent French Brandy in its purity.

Feb'y 21st. This morning very foggy. A very fine and warm day. This evening the officer came whom I was to relieve.

Feb'y 22d, '82. This evening we had a very agreeable dance at Major Moore's Bowery.

A number of ladies came in from the country. Amongst the number were the Miss Couliets, Miss Glover, Miss Williams, the Miss Ellits, and a number of others whose names I cannot recollect. Amongst the number was a Miss Miles, who could neither speak nor hear, and could perform her dancing to admiration.

23d Feb'y, '82. This day I rode to Col. Craig's Regiment.

March 4th, '82. This morning at eleven o'clock, the army was reviewed by Gen'l Greene; several manoeuvers performed. The whole fired four rounds, one round by platoons, one round by division, and two rounds by battalions.

The troops performed their several manoeuvers with the greatest exactness and regularity.

March 5th, '82. In this day's orders, Gen. Greene returns his thanks to the troops for their improvement in the several manoeuvers performed yesterday, and the troops to hold themselves in readiness to march to-morrow, eight o'clock, if the weather will permit.

Two soldiers in the Maryland Line were pardoned in this day s orders, who were to suffer death for that villianous crime of marauding.

A rainy and very dull day.

A few days ago, Gen. Marion, it is said, was surprised by the enemy; very little execution done. Last evening two deserters came to Head Quarters.

This day it was currently reported that the enemy had evacuated the Quarter House, burnt all their works, returned to the city, and that two regiments had embarked. Cloudy all day.

14th March, '82. This morning very fine and warm, agreeable; rained excessive hard in the afternoon; we were almost overflowed in our tents.

15th March. This morning very clear—this afternoon very cloudy and like for rain.

This day we sent a wagon for oysters.

This evening Major Moore with a large detachment from the army went to the lines.

March 16th, '82. This morning received an invitation from Lieut. Smith to spend St. Patrick's day with him to-morrow in company with Lieut. North, Lt. McCullam, Lt. Reed, Dr. McDowell, Ensigns Van Court and Cunningham. We rode to a Mr. Kennedy's about fifteen miles from camp, at a place called Rantholes on Stone river, about twelve miles from Charleston, which place was very dangerous for us to remain longer than evening and we being at a tory's house. Spent the day and greater part of the night very agreeable.

17th March, '82. Went to see a Mr. Williamson's garden, about a mile from Mr. Kennedy's, which is very beautifully laid out in beds and walks, surrounded by box; in the centre of which he has a very large fish-pond, which produces a variety of the scaly fry and wild ducks. After having satisfied our curiosity with the garden, plucked a few of the finest flowers and sweet scented shrubs, &c., we returned to Mr. Kennedy's, when dinner was laid. Dined very sumptuously upon codfish, Irish potatoes, asparagus, fowls, &c. After dinner we surrounded a large table, which was decked with good Nantes Brandy, excellent spirits, &c. We then went to work in form, chose a president and proceeded to business. Spent the afternoon and greater part of the night very agreeably.

March 18th, '82. This morning, after breakfast, we started from Mr. Kennedy's, a little elevated with egg-nog, and unanimously agreed to call on Mr. Williamson, to compliment him on the elegance of his garden. We only intended to call and take a drink of grog with him. But he insisted upon our staying to dine with him, and spend the afternoon, which we agreed to. After dinner we smoked our pipes, sang a song, and got damnably drunk. On our starting, a short distance from the house my horse threw me and ran away. The rest of the company pursued him, but could not over take him until he arrived at Mr. Kennedy's, which was about a mile. There we were all obliged to remain until we recovered, and came a little to our senses, which was about two o'clock in the morning.

March 19th, '82. This morning, about daylight, we arrived in camp, when we adjourned to Mr. President's tent (Dr. McDowell). We brought half a dozen bottles of spirits with us. There we drank again until we were merry. Slept greater part of the day.

March 22d. This morning the troops took up the line of march, agreeable to yesterday's orders. Very sloppy roads all day. In this day's march we passed a hill, which was the first one I saw since we came to this State; passed Stoneo Church, and encamped within a mile on the east side of said church, on the road to Bacon's Bridge. 10 miles. This day Capt. Steel joined us.

23d March, '82. This day was very busily employed by ourselves and men, in building huts and chimneys. We built a very elegant brick chimney to our tent.

March 24th, '82. This morning at nine o'clock, the army took up the line of march, agreeable to yesterday's orders; marched through a beautiful level country—roads very straight and good—and encamped in a wilderness, in a thicket of brush, &c., about one mile from Bacon's Bridge. 10 miles.

March 25th. This afternoon Lt. Collier and self went to pay a visit to the Infantry, who then lay at Bacon's Bridge (a very advantageous post). On our arrival there we found they (Infantry) had just marched for Dorchester. After taking a view of the bridge, &c., we were obliged to return to our encampment again, through a very heavy and disagreeable rain; got wet thoroughly; rained all the afternoon.

March 26th, '82. This day was very busily employed by both officers and soldiers, in building huts, raising tents, cleaning the encampment, &c. This afternoon we drew spirits. This evening a detachment went under the command of Capt. Willmot, of the Maryland Line. Our officers were very much dissatisfied with such partiality.

March 27th, '82. This morning I mounted camp guard, upon the left flank of our line. A fine and warm day.

March 28th, '82. This day Lieuts. Smith, Reed, Van Court, and self, took a ride to Mr. Williamson's, about fourteen miles from camp. In the evening a very heavy rain, so that we were obliged to remain all night at Mr. Williamson's, who insisted on our staying, which we consented to. Spent the evening very agreeably, chatting and smoking a pipe, and drinking a glass of good grog.

This day the following memorial was sent to Gen. Greene, in consequence of Capt. Willmot and Subalterns going on command, viz:

CAMP, 28th March, 1782.

SIR: When the subjects of a State conceive their rights infringed on, they readily suppose it arises from some mistake in the Executive part of the Government, or that the Governor means to adopt a mode of governing altogether new, and what the subjects have hitherto been unacquainted with. It is natural for the good subjects (as men who have a sense of subordination, knowing it to be the basis on which the privileges and happiness of the people so much depend, and more particularly in an army) to inquire, and modestly ask an explanation.

In the situation of injured subjects, do the Captains and Subalterns of the Pennsylvania Line view themselves, when they reflect on the circumstances attending the formation of Capt. Willmot's detachment. We do, therefore, beg the General will inform us whether it was his intention that Capt. Willmot's command should be formed on the principal it was, or whether by mistake? Should it prove the latter, we shall be happy, and have not a doubt that Gen'l Green's sense of equity and honor will lead him to do justice to the feelings of a body of injured officers.

For the purpose of better explaining the points wherein we conceive ourselves aggrieved, we enclose a copy of the order.

We have the honor to be, with respect,

Your obedient and very humble servants,

March 29th, 1782. This morning it was excessive cold, snowed a little, cleared up a fine day. This morning we breakfasted at Mr. Williamson's; started about eleven o'clock A. M. and arrived in camp about dinner time. Mr. Williamson was so good as to make us a present of an elegant bunch of asparagus.

This afternoon received an answer from Gen Greene in consequence of yesterday's memorial, viz

HEAD QARTERS March 29th, 1782.

GENTLEMEN: The constitution of an army and that of civil government are upon such different principles, the object of one so different from the other that what might be essential to military operations in the formation of an army would be found too simple for the various interests and different claims under civil government. The business of an army is to cover the country and annoy the enemy; that of civil government to protect and secure the rights of individuals. Therefore to argue from analogy of the rights of men under these different governments is confounding things that have no relation, and reasoning upon principles that never can be admitted in any army. It is necessary both to the success and the security of an army that its movements should be simple and secret. If the constitution of an army is not upon this principle, it can never answer the design of government; and to form an army upon any plan which must defeat the great object of it will burthen the community with great expense without utility. I am always as tender of the feelings of officers as possible; but if they go into refinements, and urge injuries which have no foundation but from improper modes of reasoning, I cannot sacrifice the public good and the reputation of the army at large to accommodate military operations to their way of thinking.

You are to consider yourselves as officers of the continental army, bound by its laws and governed by military maxims. You are under military not civil government. If you feel any injury, it must be as officers of the line of the army and not those of any particular State. But if you will give yourselves the trouble to read military authors, and consider the practice of other armies, and reflect without prejudice upon the nature and design of detachments, you cannot but be convinced your grievances are imaginary.

When detachments are made, it is for some particular purpose. To make it, therefore, in a manner not perfectly calculated to answer the design, would both sacrifice the public good and by degrees the reputation of the army. There are more things to be taken into consideration in making a detachment than merely the military abilities of the officer commanding, or his rank in the line of the army. There is a knowledge of the country, the people, and other local circumstances, which are very material considerations to be attended to to give success to an enterprise.

A man of an inferior capacity, with a knowledge of these things, would be able to execute and command much better with them than a man of superior capacity without them.

I have ever made it a rule, and I find it well warranted by the best military writers, as well as from the reason and nature of the thing, to detach such men and officers as I may think requisite for the service to be performed. Nothing short of this can give success to an enterprise. I hope, therefore, you will consider this explanation satisfactory. You may be assured I have the strongest disposition to oblige and do justice to the merit and services of every officer, but I must confine myself to such maxims of military government as are necessary to do justice to the republic and the army at large.

I am, Gentlemen,

Your most obed't humble serv't,

NATH. GREENE.

To Captain JOHN DAVIS and others of the Penn'a Line.

March 29th continued, 1782. This afternoon Capt. Ziegler joined our Regiment.

March 30th, '82. A very cold and disagreeable day.

March 31st, 1782. Morning and evening very cold. Capt. Ziegler ordered in this day's order to take command of Capt. Stevenson's company.

April 1st, 1782. This day I wrote the following letters, viz: one to my mother; one to Capt. John Doyle; and one to Capt. Abraham Dehuff.

This morning I mounted the right flank picquet, about one mile from our encampment. This evening received a letter from my brother App. This afternoon a Hessian Yeager (a deserter) passed my picquet. Our Line mustered.

This day wrote the following letters, viz: one to my brother App, No. 17; and one to my brother Kneass, No. 1; and sent them with the rest of the letters I wrote yesterday by Joseph ——— from Heiger's Town, Md.

This evening received orders to gear up our wagon horses, and hold ourselves in readiness to march at a moment's warning. It is thought the enemy are determined to fight us, as they are making all preparations for that purpose.

This morning and evening very cool, and the middle of the day very warm.

Last night six soldiers, prisoners of war, made their escape out of the provost guard.

April 3rd, 1782. Last night it was very cold.

This morning we sent an answer to Gen. Greene's letter of the 29th of last month, viz:

CAMP, Apr. 3d, '82.

SIR: That civil and military governments differ we grant. But that they are both constituted on principles of justice is a circumstance in itself too evident to admit of a doubt.

Therefore to quote civil government, and deduce thence that a subject, though not of a State, we had a right to ask redress of grievances, and not to be deemed unreasonable. For that military subjects have not a claim to justice, although the Government is supposed to hold it in its very principles, is a matter that we have never yet been acquainted with. From what circumstances the General judges, when he supposes us to have taken up the matter as officers of a State, and not of the Continental Army, we are at a loss to know; and can only answer, that it is not in our power to account for the feelings and ideas of anybody but ourselves; but offer to explain why it should affect us particularly, as there was an officer of our brigade sent by regular detail with the detachment to the grand parade, and was dismissed thence by Capt. Wilmot, who produced an order vesting him (Capt. Wilmot) with power to approve of or reject such officers as he might think proper.

If the General will reflect a moment on the circumstances, he must naturally conclude (unless he supposes us void of every delicate sensation) that we have cause of complaint. We conclude with answering that although the answer to our address was not so satsifactory, as we could have expected, we are induced, from the peculiar situation of the army, and our zeal for the public good, to decline any further steps on the occasion.

Your most obedient humble serv'ts.

Signed on behalf of the officers,

JOHN DAVIS,
Capt. 1st Penn'a Batt.
J. BOWER.
Capt. 2d Penn'a Batt.

TROOP OF PHILADELPHIA LIGHT HORSE.

[The oldest military organization in Pennsylavnia and in the United States is what is now known as the First Troop Philadelphia City Cavalry. On the 17th of November, 1774, the troop was organized by the election of Abraham Markoe, Captain, Andrew Allen and Samuel Morris, Lieutenants, with the other officers. A History of the Troop was published in 1875 in honor of its centenary, to which reference may be made for a record of the services of this body of men. By the rolls herewith given it will be seen that the Troop was at no one time over two months in service. and during the entire period of the War of the Revolution, although its organization was preserved, it was scarcely six months in the field, not equaling the annual campaign of many of the associating companies. Brief as were the services of the Troop, these were highly appreciated by the Commander-in-Chief, who, at the close of the campaign, subsequent to the battles of Trenton and Princeton, returned his thanks in the following complimentary discharge:

"The Philadelphia Troop of Light Horse under the command of Captain Morris, having perform'd their Tour of duty are discharged for the present.

"I take this Opportunity of returning my most sincere thanks to the Captain and to the Gentlemen who compose the Troop, for the many essential services which they have rendered to their Country, and to me personally, during the course of this severe campaign. Tho' composed of Gentlemen of Fortune, they have shown a noble Example of discipline and subordination, and in several actions have shown a Spirit of Bravery which will ever do Honor to them and will ever be greatfully remembered by me.

"Given at Head Quarters at Morristown this 23d Jan'y, 1777.

G° WASHINGTON."

The standard of the Troop, made in 1775, and presented by Captain Abraham Markoe, is supposed to be the earliest instance of the thirteen stripes being used upon an American banner. It was carried by the company during all the campaigns of the Revolutionary contest, and is carefully preserved as a precious relic and heirloom of the struggle for Independence. A full and accurate description of this standard is given in Admiral Preble's valuable and noble work "A History of the Flag of the United States of America."]

PENNSYLVANIA PENSIONERS, 1789.

[The act of Congress of September 29, 1789, directed the payment of Pensions, which had been granted and paid by the States respectively, to the Invalids who were wounded and disabled during the late war, should be continued and paid by the United States from the 4th of March, 1789.—U. S. Laws, vol. i, page 116. This was continued for another year at the next session. It was not until the act of March 18, 1818, that pensions were allowed for service per se during the Revolution, and then only to such who by reason of their reduced circumstances in life were in need of assistance from their country for their support. The following is therefore a list (though necessarily incomplete in consequence of removals from the State) of the wounded and disabled officers and soldiers of the Revolution resident in the State in 1789. The dates annexed being those to which they were paid, may be regarded as approximate to that of their deaths. This list was made out in 1812.]

PENNSYLVANIA'S PENSION LIST, 1820.

[By the act of February 25, 1813, the Secretary of the Commonwealth, Auditor General, and State Treasurer were constituted a "Board of Enquiry" to ascertain the actual services of such officers and soldiers as should apply for the benefit of the act, and were authorized to place upon the Pension Book of the State the names of all applicants who served in the Pennsylvania Line during the Revolutionary war, or until they were regularly discharged; and who were from age, bodily infirmity, or other causes unable to earn a living, and not possessed of property sufficient to maintain them, and who did not at the time of making application, receive from the United States an annuity in the opinion sufficiently comfortable. In the case of a non-commissioned officer and soldier, a sum at the Board's discretion, not exceeding the half pay of such non-commissioned officer and soldier, and in the case of a commissioned or staff officer a sum not exceeding one fourth of their pay according to their rank at the time of leaving the service, to continue during life, payable half-yearly, and an additional sum equal to their annuity at the time of making the decree. The allowance ordinarily made by the Board as indicated by the original list was an annuity of $40 to privates, $44 to corporals, $48 to sergeants, $50 to sergeant-majors, $80 to lieutenants, $120 to captains. The following list was made probably about the year 1820 for official convenience, and the remark "dead" attached to some of the names no doubt indicate only that they were deceased when the list was made out, as it is in the same hand-writing as the list.].

List of Officers and Soldiers of the Revolutionary War, placed on the pension list of Pennsylvania, by especial acts, & by the Board instituted for the granting of pensions to Officers & Soldiers of the Pennsyl'a Line.

OFFICERS OF THE PENNSYLVANIA LINE.

Digitized by Google

[NOTE.—At the close of the volumes relative to the Pennsylvania Line in the Revolution, the Editors deem it proper to state that few can form any idea of the research and labor which have been required in the preparation of these two volumes. Their only regret is in its incompleteness, for which their only excuse is the meagreness of records within their reach. No doubt, among the papers of many of the officers of the Line, rolls may still be in existence which, it is hoped, the publication of these documents will speedily bring to light.

In addition to the present history, that of the Associators, Flying Camp, and Militia, for whose achievements Pennsylvania has received very little credit, should be written, for those different bodies of brave men have an equal patriotic record with the Line. Their services in the neighborhood of New York, and the Jersey campaign, at Brandywine and Germantown, and lastly, on the frontiers of civilization, staying the murderous tomahawk and scalping knife of the treacherous Indian, and their not less brutal allies, the Tories and British marauders, should not be left unrecorded, nor the names of those gallant-hearted Pennsylvanians be lost. A grateful Commonwealth, which has been so careful to preserve its history, will not neglect this tribute to the memory of all her heroes in the War for Independence.]

[For the original subscription of the members of the Society of the Cincinnati of the Pennsylvania Line, 1783, the Editors are indebted to the Dauphin County Historical Society.]

GENERAL INDEX.

[The letters prefixing the figures refer to the volume.]

[NOTE.—It will be seen to a number of names no page reference is made in this Index. This is due to the fact that the names of a number of officers of the Revolution have come to a knowledge of the Editors, but unfortunately undesignated either as to rank or regiment.]
